

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFATORY NOTICE.

DR GIESELER'S Compendium of Ecclesiastical History is marked by peculiar excellencies. It occupies an important position of its own. The text is very brief and condensed, marking the results at which the learned author has arrived ; while the accumulated materials in the notes enable the reader to see at once the basis on which the statements of the text rest. If the student be not convinced of the correctness of the assertions made by the historian, he can easily draw his own conclusion by the help of what is presented to him. The work is characterised by immense research, and by striking impartiality. In the latter respect, indeed, the author has been blamed by some, his spirit of impartiality preventing him from expressing a decided opinion, where it would be desirable to throw the weight of his authority into the side of truth. There is also an air of dryness diffused over the work, inseparable perhaps from its exceeding brevity, but also indicating a deficiency in vivid sketching. The excellencies, however, far outweigh any minor faults that may be supposed to belong to it. Its rigid impartiality is its chief recommendation ; and the abundant references and quotations in the notes supply the want of a library such as very few have within their reach.

The work in the original consists of several volumes published at different times. The first division of the last volume, containing a portion of the history of the Reformation in different lands, appeared in 1840. In 1844 and 1845 a fourth edition of the first volume was published, one part in each year, greatly improved and enlarged. The author states in the preface, that this volume first appeared twenty years ago, and that during the interval he has not been inattentive to the subject, but has endeavoured to conform his book to the latest investigations. On comparing this edition with the third, we have observed a great improvement, and a large number of new notes.

It may be proper to apprise the reader, that an American translation of the history, down to the time of the Reformation, appeared at Philadelphia in 1836, professedly taken from the third edition of the original. The fourth, however, is so different from the third, (if, indeed, Cunningham's version was made from the latter,) that it was deemed desirable to make a new version.

The Translator has adhered closely to the original text. His simple aim has been to give the sense of his author. He has not endeavoured to make the narrative smooth or elegant, for in that case he should have been compelled to resort to paraphrase, Professor Gieseler being by no means an elegant writer. On the contrary, his style is loose, and his sentences evidently constructed without any view to effect. It must be always remembered, that the book is a text-book, not an extended history, like Neander's. As such, the Translator reckons it invaluable. In truth, there are only two ecclesiastical histories at the present time that deserve to be read and studied, viz. those of Neander and Gieseler, both ex fontibus hausti, as Bretschneider once remarked to the writer. Guerike's is one-sided ; and Hase's, alas ! is too short.

The Translator, on looking about for a text-book which he could put into the hands of his students as the substratum of lectures on ecclesiastical history, could find none so suitable to his purpose as the present; and he accordingly recommended the enterprising publishers to bring out a new version of the new edition, that students might not be obliged to apply to the American translation, the cost of which is very considerable.

It is almost superfluous to state, that the Translator does not coincide with all the sentiments of Dr Gieseler. He has occasionally inserted in brackets a reference to books with which the German professor is probably unacquainted.

THE CHURCH.

Ständlin über den Begriff der Kirche und Kirchengeschichte, (in the Göttingen Bibliothek d. Neuesten Theolog. Literatur, i. 600). C. G. Bretschneider's systemat. Entwicklung aller in der Dogmatik vorkommenden Begriffe, (4te Auflage, Leipzig 1841), S. 749. Dr H. F. Jacobson, über die Individualität des Wortes u. Begriffes Kirche, (in his Kirchenrechtlichen Versuchen, i. 58.)

The Christian Church ¹ (ἡ ἐκκλησία τοῦ Χριστοῦ, Matt. xvi. 18, ἡ ἐκκλησία τοῦ Θεοῦ, 1 Cor. x. 32, Gal. i. 13) is a religious-moral

society, connected together by a common faith in Christ, and which seeks to represent in its united life the kingdom of God announced by Christ, (τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ Χριστοῦ, τοῦ οὐρανοῦ). This kingdom it hopes to see at one time realised, and strives to prepare itself for becoming worthy of having a part in it.² The church bears the same relation to the kingdom of God as the Israelitish church (יהוה לך, Numb. xx. 4) had to the ideal theocracy expected by it. And as the divine kingdom of Christ is the purified and spiritual image of the theocracy, so is the Christian church the image of the Jewish. Differences relating to the objects of Christian faith and ecclesiastical life early separated the church into various distinct societies, each of which commonly assumed to itself exclusively the name of the "true church of Christ," and branded the others with the titles heresy and schism, (hæresis, schisma.)

While the old unreformed church associations are continually prejudiced by this particularism, Protestants, on the contrary, acknowledge every ecclesiastical society which holds Christian truth in greater or less purity and clearness, to be a preparatory institution for the kingdom of God, and as such belonging to the universal Christian church, whose true essence is the invisible church, the entire number of all true believers throughout the world.

DEFINITION OF ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY—ITS PARTS—GENERAL HISTORY OF THE CHURCH.

Casp. Royko Einleit. in die christl. Religions- und Kirchengeschichte. Aufl. 2. Prag. 1791. 8.—Ch. W. Flügge Einleit. in das Studium u. in die Literatur der Religions- u. Kirchengeschichte, besonders der christlichen. Göttingen, 1801. 8.

The object of ecclesiastical history is to present in historical development the entire course through which the Christian church has passed, and the influences which it has exerted on other human relations, and to lay the foundation for a due estimate of it in all its aspects. As time consists of moments, so is history made up of circumstances connected together as cause and effect. Every condition of the church rests on a twofold relation. To its internal relations belongs, first of all, that religious faith, which forms its bond of union, both in its scientific development and life in the members; next the character of the public religious exercises; and thirdly, the form of government. To the external relations of the church belong its diffusion, and its relation to other associations, particularly to the state. Though these several relations are not independent of one another, but are developed by constant mutual action, they admit of a separate historical treatment. There arises, therefore,

² The idea of the church is an individual idea, which is given historically, and cannot therefore be brought under the general idea in which it is embraced. See Jacobson, s. 116. Ullmann in the Studien und Kritiken, 1835, iii. 607.

I. A history of the church's external relations, (external church history), viz.:—

1. History of its spread and limitation.¹
2. History of its relation to the state.²

II. A history of its internal relations, (internal history of the church), viz.:—

1. History of the doctrines of the church.
 - (a.) As an object of science.
 - History of opinions (Dogmengeschichte).³

⁶ The history of religious and moral life among Christians is difficult, and has been neglected down to the latest times. Formerly there appeared only one-sided representations of the life of the first Christians, for example, by W. Cave, Gottfr. Arnold, Peter Zorn. The history of morals is interwoven with it in K. F. Stäudlin's history of the moral teaching of Christ. (Geschichte der Sittenlehre Jesu; see note 4.) A description of the worship, ecclesiastical usages, and constitution of the ancient church, is included in the somewhat vague appellation, ecclesiastical antiquities, or archaeology,⁹ although these departments do not embrace merely one point of time, but a longer or shorter period, and ought therefore to belong to history.

The materials of ecclesiastical history are also divided by a reference to particular countries, and to separate ecclesiastical societies,¹⁰ whose special developments are presented in special histories. But yet the progress of development, both in regard to separate ecclesiastical relations, and also the separate ecclesiastical societies of particular lands, occupies a position in which mutual influences are constantly affecting the history in a greater or less degree; so that no special history, or description of individual ecclesiastical relations, can be wholly separated from the other history. Patres ecclesiæ are, in the opinion of Catholics, the orthodox ecclesiastical writers as far as the thirteenth century, (these, however, are not normal, for this reason, like the Doctores Ecclesiæ, Ambrose, Augustine, Jerome, Gregory the Great, Thomas Aquinas, and Bonaventura). Protestants usually restrict the appellation to the first six centuries, as the purer period of the church. § 5.

USE OF THE SOURCES.

The inquiries of ecclesiastical history are directed to the facts belonging to the history of the church of external and internal life both in their manifestation and grounds, which are sought to be deduced directly from the sources, in their original connection. For this purpose the historian requires not only a penetrating and unbiassed interpretation of the sources which present themselves, but also historical criticism, to enable him to judge of the genuineness, integrity, and credibility of the sources, not only in general, but in each particular case.¹ This criticism must be the more watchful, since distortions of historical truth frequently appear in the province of ecclesiastical history, produced by the embarrassments of party views and interest, by the desire to adapt it to certain ends, and even by falsehood. In those cases in which the sources afford nothing at all, or what is false, relative either to single facts or their original connection, the inquirer must have recourse to historical conjectures, whose probability may border very nearly on truth, but often, perhaps, may rise very little above other possibilities. In forming such historical conjectures, he must be guided by a careful consideration of existing relations, of the character of the period and persons, by analogy, and even by the false accounts of sources. The ecclesiastical historian must renounce party interest as well as prejudice in considering the peculiarities of his time. On the contrary, he cannot penetrate into the internal character of the phenomena of church history without a Christian religious spirit, because one cannot generally comprehend aright any strange spiritual phenomenon without reproducing it in himself. It is only investigation of this nature that can discover where the Christian spirit is entirely wanting, where it is used merely as a mask, another spirit having occupied its place. Wherever it exists it will not be mistaken, although it should manifest itself in such ways as are foreign to the spirit of our own times.

ARRANGEMENT OF THE MATERIALS OF ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY.— HISTORIC REPRESENTATION.

The old methods of arranging the materials of ecclesiastical history according to years, or of dividing them into centuries, have been rightly abandoned. The division into periods, by means of epochs, has been generally adopted, although great difference prevails in fixing these periods. We assume four periods: the first, To the time of Constantine, the first development of the church under external oppression; the second, Till the beginning of the image controversies, the development of Christianity as the prevailing religion of the state; the third, Till the Reformation, the development of the Papacy prevailing over the state; the fourth, The development of Protestantism.¹ The contents of each period may be arranged either chronologically, or according to an artificial space taken from the different relations of the church. (§ 2.) Both methods used exclusively have their advantages and disadvantages. In the chronological arrangement things similar are often too widely separated, and the lines of development are torn asunder. In the other arrangement, when the periods are large, the mutual influence which the development of separate ecclesiastical relations has on each other at different times is obscured, and the survey of the entire condition of one particular time is rendered difficult. We must therefore endeavour, as far as possible, to unite the advantages of both methods, and to avoid their disadvantages. Although every period has its definite ecclesiastical character, yet this character undergoes many modifications during the lapse of the whole period. Hence the division of periods into small sections of time is justified. The materials of these smaller sections are best arranged chronologically, as long as the church in its first beginnings has not yet formed its internal relations; afterwards they may be disposed according to a division taken from these internal relations. In every section of time there prevails the development of one or of several ecclesiastical relations, so that they are of peculiar assistance in the development of other relations. It is therefore suitable to dispose the history of the different relations in the church in every minor period, according to their relative importance, and their influence on the whole.

The mode of writing ecclesiastical history must be worthy of the subject. The phenomena make a continual demand upon our moral and religious feelings. Where moral greatness is manifested, they excite our admiration; where they bear witness to errors, they excite our compassion; where they evince immoral designs and motives, they stir up our indignation; but they never furnish a fit subject for ridicule.

the most important part of the religious history of humanity. For the Christian it has a peculiar interest, since it discloses to him the later transformations of Christianity with their causes and effects, and guides him to a safe judgment with regard to what is original and essential in it. On this account, it is indispensable to the Christian theologian who desires to acquire a scientific knowledge of Christianity.² It is also of importance to the scholar, because of its essential connection with the history of learning, philosophy, morals, and arts. § 8.

The Roman empire, in the first century, extended not only over the whole civilized world, but almost over the known world. Beyond it little was known besides the Germanic tribes in the north, and the Parthians in the east. In the western half of that great empire, the language and customs of the Romans had become prevalent; but in the eastern, Greek cultivation asserted the superiority it had obtained since Alexander's conquests, and under the emperors penetrated more and more even into Rome.¹ It is obvious, how much the union of so many nations under one government, and the general diffusion of the Greek language, must have favoured the principles of Christianity.

OF THE RELIGIOUS AND MORAL CHARACTER OF THE ANCIENT NATIONS IN GENERAL.

Polytheism cannot, from its very nature, be favourable to morality. Its deities can only be finite beings, and resembling man, because it separates the divinity into many parts. Every nation gives expression to its character, its virtues, and its vices, in the deities it worships; and therefore the divinity so disfigured, cannot lead men to a higher moral elevation. The heathen stand only in an external relation to their gods; and their entire religion is consequently nothing more than an external worship, which leaves untouched not only theological speculation, as long as it does not attack existing forms, but also moral sentiment. Human deities will be worshipped, propitiated, and reconciled, in the way of men; and for this purpose moral improvement is not needed so much as a kind of prudence. They cannot inspire respect and love, but fear only. Their worship is nothing more than a barter, in which man expects mercy, protection, and greater gifts, in exchange for demonstrations of respect and offerings. This general character of polytheism is found in all heathen religions at the time of Christ. A mythology partly immoral, sanctified many vices by the example of the gods. The worship of several deities consisted in immoral deeds. Thus, the worship of Bel in Babylon, of Amun in Thebes, of Aphrodite in Cyprus, Corinth, and many other places, elevated lewdness to the position of a religious service;¹ and the worship of other deities excited, at least, sensuality in a high degree.² In like manner human sacrifices were customary, in several places, as yearly expiations; but everywhere, on occasion of extraordinary threatening dangers, for the purpose of propitiating the enraged deities.³ Religious motives existed only to promote the exercise of the duties belonging to citizens;⁴ and whatever of a higher nature appears in the case of individual Greeks and Romans, was owing, not to the religion of the people, but to their better moral nature.⁵ In general, the feeling of man's dignity and rights was wanting, while in place of it was found nothing but a partial national conceit, joined to a profound contempt for every thing foreign, and propped up by religion, since every nation had but the expression of its own nationality in its deities. Hence the horrible treatment of man as a slave.⁶ When the national pride was humbled by subjugation and oppression, the people readily lost along with it every noble feeling of self-respect, and sank into slavish abjectness. Woman lost among the Greeks the re-

RELIGION AND MORALS OF THE GREEKS.

Tom. 8. Groningen 1833—43, 8vo.

The Greek deities were ideal Greeks, whose sentiments and conduct were Grecian. By their will and example they exhorted to those virtues to which the Grecian character was disposed, or which were found necessary for the state and for social life. But so far were they from imaging forth a pure morality, or from exhibiting the national vices of the Greeks,¹ that the mythology, even as it was recognised by the philosophers, was able, for the most part, to influence morality only in the way of injury.² After the subjugation of Greece, when national honour, love of country, and patriotism, had ceased to be powerful motives, we find Greece in the condition of the deepest moral degradation.

¹ In opposition to Tholuck, in the work already quoted, who traces the corruption of religion and morality to Grecian art, see Fr. Jacobs über die Erziehung der Hellenen zur Sittlichkeit, in his vermischte Schriften, Th. 3. An intermediate course is taken by Dr C. Grüneisen über das Sittliche der bildenden Kunst bei den Griechen, in Illgen's Zeitschrift f. d. hist. Theologie, iii. ii. 1. But another aspect must not be overlooked. Though it be possible that so much elevation and dignity as is represented by some was reflected in the divine forms, yet they necessarily referred the beholder to their mythology, and the impression that so much immorality could be united with such external excellence must have been highly corrupting to the morals. Cf. Augustinus de Civ. Dei, iv. 31: Varro dicit etiam, antiquos Romanos plus quam annos centum et septuaginta deos sine simulacro coluisse. Quod si adhuc, inquit, mansisset, castius dii observarentur. Cujus sententiae suae testem adhibet inter caetera etiam gentem Judaeam, nec dubitat eum locum ita concludere, ut dicat, qui primi simulacra deorum populis posuerunt, eos civitatibus suis et metum dempsisse, et errorem addidisse.

² Plato (de repub. ii.) wishes to banish the immoral mythology from his republic; Aristotle (Politie, vii. 8) proposes that the young at least should be excluded from witnessing immoral scenes.

Religion became with the people scarcely anything but an enjoyment of art, wanting too often in all that partakes of a moral spirit. Hence it was unable to elevate the deteriorated nation above their external state. How much the cultivation of the intellect and taste was preferred to morality, even in the flourishing times of Greece, is proved by the general estimation in which clever courtesans were held; while the rest of the female sex were, for the most part, neglected, as far as their spiritual culture was concerned.³ The love of boys, which was so general, and inspired so many poets, shows how art ministered even to unnatural vices. The mysteries were far from presenting a better esoteric religion than that of the people.⁴ They offered nothing but a secret mythology which attached itself to the popular religion,—a secret ritual to be practised in worshipping the gods,—directions for the purification of the initiated, accompanied, it is true, by several moral precepts, but all for the purpose of making the deities peculiarly propitious to the initiated.

RELIGION AND MORALS OF THE ROMANS TO THE TIME OF AUGUSTUS.

The religion of the Romans was of a more grave and moral character, although in it the Grecian element was mixed up with the Etrurian. We find the ancient Romans distinguished not only for their political but their domestic virtues, and for a chastity rarely found in the bosom of heathenism. As long as

Grecian art was unknown at Rome, so long too did the Grecian mythology with its poisoning influence remain unknown;¹ but after the destruction of Carthage and Corinth, the national character generally, and the Roman religion along with it, underwent by degrees a great alteration for the worse.² The riches which flowed into the city, the knowledge of Asiatic luxuries, and the mode of instruction followed by Greek masters, led to licentiousness and excesses; while the Grecian mythology, incorporated with Grecian art, was diffused by the poets, and entirely extinguished the old Roman character with its rigid virtue.³

RELIGIOUS TOLERATION OF THE ROMANS.

It was an universal principle among the ancients, that the gods themselves had arranged the peculiar form of their worship in every country. Hence all polytheistic religions were tolerant towards each other, as long as every worship confined itself to its own people and country. This toleration was also observed by the Romans.¹ On the other hand, to introduce strange gods and modes of worship, without the sanction of the state, was tantamount to the introduction of a superstition prejudicial to the interests of the community.² When, therefore, after the extended conquests of the Romans, foreign modes of worship were more and more introduced into the city, partly lessening, by that means, attachment to the national religion, and partly promoting even immoral practices, the laws against the sacra peregrina were frequently renewed.³ Religious societies of foreign origin could not easily hold out against such prohibitions, since they fell, besides, under the cognizance of the laws respecting collegia,⁴ and were in direct opposition to them,⁵

³ Compare, in particular, the extirpation of the Bacchanalian rites in the year 185 B. C. ⁴ Collegia, sodalitia, sodalitates, τραπεζαίαι. The Greeks and Romans were fond of such connections, which had their basis partly in relationship (comp. the Roman gentes and curiae, the Athenian φάρμαι), partly in similarity of profession (so the collegia tibicinum, aurificum, architectorum, &c. at Rome). They had both their own sacred rites and a common fund, secret meetings and feasts (επαραι). Thus the priests of the same deities not only formed collegia of this nature (comp. sodales Augustales, Aureliani, &c.), but unions for the worship of certain deities were also reckoned collegia (for example, for the solemnisation of the rites of Bacchus, see note 3). So Cato says in Cicero de senectut. c. 13: Sodalitates me quaestore constitutae sunt sacris Idaeis Magnae Matris acceptis. So speaks Philo in Flaccum of the τραπεζαίαι καὶ συνδεδωτοὶ in Alexandria, αὶ δὲ προφάσει θεσιῶν ἐστιν ὁμοῖοι τοῖς πράγμασις ἐμπροσθεν. Cf. Compare the later jurists in the Pandects: Gajus (about 160), lib. iii. § 13.

RELATION OF PHILOSOPHY TO THE POPULAR RELIGIONS.

As soon as philosophy was cultivated in Greece, the unity of God was expressed in most of the schools,¹ while morality was placed on a more becoming and a religious foundation.² But while philosophy could not fail of producing a high religious feeling in the narrow circle of the initiated, it occasioned a crude scepticism among the more numerous class of the half instructed. Although Plato and Aristotle directly expressed their sentiments regarding the popular religion in a reserved and cautious manner, and even conformed externally to its requirements,³ yet their theology afforded a standard by which, when many parts of the popular faith were judged, they must necessarily vanish into nothing. The Stoic pantheism endeavoured to preserve the current mythology by considering the deities as the fundamen-

The scepticism of the middle and new academy exerted no better influence, at least in the larger circles.

Soon after Greek literature had been introduced at Rome after the time of Livius Andronicus (about 260 B. C.), sceptical doubts manifested themselves there also.⁵ Subsequently the academy, the porch, and epicureanism, finding a more general reception, from the time of the famous Athenian embassy (Carneades, Diogenes, Critolaus, 155 B. C.), the flourishing philosophy tended not only to weaken the popular religion,⁶ but to destroy the religious faith of many.⁷ But although scepti-

C.) wished to confirm anew the religion of the state by separating it from philosophy and mythology, whence proceeded its corruption;¹¹ and M. Terentius Varro, abiding by that separation, (about 50 B. C.), endeavoured to prepare for it a new basis out of the doctrine of the Stoics.¹² illos velut ruina liberari a se dicit, et in memoria bonorum per hujusmodi libros recondi atque servari. He also distinguishes (l. c. vi. 5) tria genera theologiæ, namely, mythicon, quo maxime utuntur poëtæ, physicon, quo philosophi, civile, quo populi. Primum, quod dixi, in eo sunt multa contra dignitatem et naturam immortalium ficta. Secundum genus est, quod demonstravi, de quo multos libros philosophi reliquerunt. In quibus est: dii qui sint, ubi, quod genus caet. (Augustine adds: Nihil in hoc genere culpavit. Removit tamen hoc genus a fore i. e. a populis: scholis vero et parietibus clausit. Illud autem primum mendacissimum atque turpissimum a civitatibus non removit.) Tertium genus est, quod in urbibus cives, maxime sacerdotes, nosse atque administrare debent. In quo est, quos deos publice colere, quæ sacra et sacrificia facere quemquam par sit. Prima theologia maxime accommodata est ad theatrum, secunda ad mundum, tertia ad urbem. (Plutarch also, Amator, c. 18, and De placitis philosoph. i. 6, distinguishes this threefold theology, τὸ μυθικόν, τὸ φυσικόν and τὸ πολιτικόν.) Respecting the religion of the Roman state, Varro, as reported by Augustine, l. c. iv. 31 said: non se illa judicio suo sequi, quæ civitatem Romanam instituissæ commemorat; ut, si eam civitatem novam constitueret, ex naturæ potius formula deos nominaque deorum se fuisse dedicaturum non dubitet confiteri. Sed jam quoniam in vetere populo essent accepta, ab antiquis nominum et cognominum historiam tenere ut tradita est debere se dicit, et ad eum finem illam scribere ac perscrutari, ut potius eos magis colere, quam despiciere vulgus velit. L. c. vii. 6: Dicit ergo idem Varro adhuc de naturali theologia præloquens, Deum se arbitrari esse animam mundi, quem Græci vocant κόσμος, et hunc ipsum mundum esse Deum. Hic videtur quoquo modo confiteri unum Deum, sed ut plures etiam introducat, adjungit, mundum dividi in duas partes, caelum et terram; et caelum bifariam in aethera et æra, terrem vero in aquam et humum. Quas omnes quatuor partes animarum esse plenas, in aethere et ære immortalium, in aqua et terra mortalium: a summo autem circuitu caeli usque ad circulum lunæ æthereas animas esse astra ac stellas, eosque caelestes deos non modo intelligi esse, sed etiam videri. obliged to divide their honours with the most miserable of men,¹ sank by degrees still lower in the faith of the people.² The attachment to traditional customs and institutions, decaying along with liberty, could no longer afford these gods a protection. Politics and habit secured them nothing more than a lukewarm, external worship.³ The relations of the times did not lead men away from the error that had been committed, towards a somewhat purer religion, but to a still grosser superstition. The cowardly weaklings, which were the offspring of a luxury surpassing all bounds,⁴ must have stood open to every superstition, especially as dangers daily threatened them from those in power. Curiosity, and an inordinate longing for the secret and the awful, con-

Tertullian's second book, ad Nationes, is directed against this theology of Varro. Comp. Hartung, i. 274. Krahner, S. 49.

¹ According to Polybius, 5, the custom of honouring benefactors with sacrifices and altars appeared first among the Asiatics, the Greeks, and Syrians. Similar honours were frequently paid to proconsuls in their provinces. (Cicero ad Atticum, v. 21. Sueton. Oct. c. 52. Mongault in the Mémoires de l'Acad. des Inscr. T. i. p. 353 ss.) Cæsar caused these honours to be decreed to him by the senate in Rome also. (Suet. Caes. 76.) Augustus accepted in the provinces temples and colleges of priests (Tacit. Annal. i. 10. Suet. Oct. c. 52); and so did all his successors, with the single exception of Vespasian. Domitian even began his letters with: Dominus et Deus noster hoc fieri jubet (Suet. Domit. 13.) J. D. tributed to increase the superstition. To this must be added the decline of the earnest study of the sciences (law and juridical eloquence being almost the only studies of the time); but, above all, the excessive corruption of the age.⁵ Cowardly vice sought partly to make magical rites subservient to its will,⁶ while it was, in part, driven to more powerful purifications by the stings of conscience. Already had the religions of the east, by their mysterious, fantastic worship, and the asceticism of their priests, made an impression on the superstitious disposition of the Romans, so that they had been restricted and opposed by the laws. But the current of the time that set in now broke through all laws. Foreign modes of worship and priests found their way into the state with a power that could not be repressed. In addition to them, a great number of astrologers (mathematici), who pretended to be initiated into the sacred sciences of the east, interpreters of dreams, and magicians, spread themselves through the empire.⁷ The object of such persons was to turn

The fruits of superstition were shared among the priests of Isis, who was particularly revered, the Galli, the priests of Dea Syra, the Magi, Chaldaei (s. the prevailing superstition as much as possible to their own advantage, and at the same time to strengthen it. The laws of the first emperors against foreign customs were of less avail, because they themselves believed in their efficacy, followed them in private, and were only afraid that they should be abused to the prejudice of their own persons.⁸

This superstition was promoted in no slight degree by philosophy making it subservient to its purpose.⁹ The more boldly philosophical scepticism had attacked not only the popular religions, but also the general truths of religion, so much the more zealously did the later philosophy endeavour to put together systems framed in part from earlier ones, and in part from the materials themselves of the popular religion. In these newly-invented systems every superstition found shelter. Under Augustus, the long forgotten doctrines of Pythagoras were suddenly

Strabo vii. c. 3, § 4: Ἀπάρτες τῆς δεισιδαιμονίας ἀρχηγοὺς οἰοῦνται τὰς γυναῖκας. αὗται δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἀνδρας παρακαλοῦνται πρὸς τὰς ἐπιπλεον θεραπείας τῶν θεῶν, καὶ ἐορτὰς καὶ ποτηριασμούς. σπάνιον δὲ, εἰ τις ἀνὴρ καθ' αὐτὸν ζῶν εὐρίσκειται τοιοῦτος. On the superstition of this period generally, see Plinii nat. hist. ii. c. 5: Vix prope est judicare, utrum magis conducat generi humano, quando aliis nullus est Deorum respectus, aliis pudendus. Externis famulantur sacris, ac digitis Deos gestant: monstra quoque, quae colunt, damnant et excogitant cibos, imperia dira in ipsos, ne somno quidem quieto, irrogant. Non matrimonia, non liberos, non denique quidquam aliud nisi juvantibus sacris deligunt. Alii in Capitolio fallunt, ac fulminantem pejerant Jovem: et hos juvant scelera, illos sacra sua poenis agunt.

Meiners, l. c. S. 276 ff. The example of the elder Pliny shows how unbelief and superstition united in the educated class. He says, Nat. hist. ii. c. 5: Irridendum vero, agere curam rerum humanarum illud quicquid est summum. Anne tam tristi atque multiplici ministerio non pollui credamus dubitemusve? vii. c. 56: Omnibus a suprema die eadem, quae ante primum: nec magis a morte sensus ullus aut corpori aut animae, quam ante natalem. revived in the most wonderful form by Anaxilaus, who was soon followed by the still more adventurous Apollonius of Tyana.¹⁰ While these men endeavoured to restore, out of their own resources, the Pythagorean philosophy, as if it had proceeded from the mysteries of Egyptian priests, and looked upon Platonism as an efflux of the doctrine of Pythagoras, a singular heterogeneous philosophy of religion grew up under their hands, in which all popular religions, no less than all magic arts, found their justification. From this time onward even the Platonic school forsook the scepticism of the new academy, attaching itself to those modern Pythagoreans, though it sought to assimilate its dogmatism to other systems also, particularly the Aristotelian. The mode of life among the Pythagoreans was not attractive to many, subject to the Persians, Egyptians, and Syrians, and then formed (from 167–63 B. C.) ruled over the land in dependence on the Romans, and afterwards divided it among his three sons, so that Archelaus was ethnarch of Judea, Idumea, and Samaria, while Philip and Herod Antipas, as tetrarchs, received possession,—the former, of Batanea, Ituræa, and Trachonitis,—the latter, of Galilee and Peræa. After the banishment of Archelaus, 6 A.D.), his territories became a Roman province, and were governed under the proconsul of Syria, by a procurator, (the fifth Pontius Pilate from 28–37 A.D.) The tetrarchy of Philip did not continue long after his death in the hands of the Romans, but was consigned to Herod Agrippa (37), who united with it the tetrarchy (39) of the banished Herod Agrippa, and was finally elevated by Claudius even to be king of all Palestine (41). After his death, his entire kingdom again became a Roman province, managed by procurators, (Cuspius Fadus, Tiberius, Alexander, Ventidius Cumanus, Claudius Felix, Porcius Festus, Albinus, Gessius Florus). His son, Agrippa II., afterwards obtained the kingdom of Chalcis (47), which he was soon obliged to change for the tetrarchy of Philip (52); whilst, at the same time, the superintendence of the temple at Jerusalem was entrusted to him as a Jew. With him the race of Herod became extinct (†100 at Rome).¹

Oppression under a foreign yoke, and especially the persecution of religion by Antiochus Epiphanes, had produced among the Jews a strict separation from all that were unjewish, inflaming their contempt and hatred for all foreign customs, and, at the same time, raising to a high degree their national feelings and attachment to the religion of their fathers. But, alas! a spiritual feeling for religion had expired with the spirit of prophecy. The priesthood, finding no longer any opposing obstacle, connected, with one-sided aim, the renovated zeal of the people with the external law, and, in particular, with the Levitical worship which was always enlarging itself, in which alone the priests, as such, had an interest. Even the synagogues that arose after the Babylonian captivity,² adapted as they were to promote a more spiritual religion, served still more to advance the legal spirit of the Levitical code. Hence, there arose at this time the most obstinate attachment—yea, a fanatical zeal for the Mosaic ceremonial, apart from any real religious feeling and moral improvement, and accompanied rather by a more general and deeper corruption of the people.³ Amid this disposition, which was directed only to the external, their pride in transmitted privileges, and in the peculiar favour of Jehovah, increased equally with the hope that God would soon free his favourite people from the yoke of the heathen, and, under the dominion of Messiah, elevate them to be the rulers of the earth. These earthly expectations and views, which the people painted to themselves in a highly sensuous degree, must have been very prejudicial to the inward religious feelings.⁴ At the same time, the opinion was not rare, that it was unworthy of the people of God to obey a foreign power.⁵ On the other hand, the prejudices and national pride of a people despised by the

Hence arose frequent rebellions against the Roman power, till at last the general insurrection under Gessius Florus (65) led to the devastation of the whole land, and the destruction of Jerusalem (70). By this means the strength of the people was broken for a time, but their disposition and aims were not changed.

It remains for us to notice three sects of the Jews: the Pharisees,⁷ in whom the Judaism of that time, with the new doctrinal sentiments acquired in exile, and its own continued culture of the Levitical law, presented itself in a completed form. All the traits of the national character were presented by this sect in a still more cultivated degree, and hence it was the greatest favourite among the people. *The Sadducees*⁸ endeavoured to give prominence to the old Hebraism which appears in the written law of Moses. The Essenes led an ascetic life in retirement,⁹ and exerted but little influence over the people.

SENTIMENTS OF THE HEATHEN NATIONS TOWARDS JUDAISM.

Judaism was respected by the heathen as an old popular religion ; and Jehovah, as the God of the Jews, received, particularly from the different rulers of this country, the honours due to the deity of the land.¹ But the Jews did not respect the religions of other people in the same manner, inasmuch as they treated their deities as nonentities, avoided all intercourse with foreigners as unclean, and expected that their own only true God would one day triumph over all other nations.² Hence they were despised and hated, especially since antiquity was accustomed to estimate the power of the gods by the condition of terised them had been formed independently of external circumstances out of the deeper religious meaning of the Old Testament, but that subsequently it received foreign, old-oriental, Parsic, and Chaldean, but not Alexandrian, elements.

² Certainly the Jewish idea of the Messiah was known to the heathens in general, but we must not derive the measure of this knowledge from the passages : Sueton. Vespas. c. 4, percrebuerat Oriente toto vetus et constans opinio, esse in fatis, ut eo tempore Judaea profecti rerum potirentur. Tacit. hist. 5, 13. Pluribus persuasio inerat, antiquis sacerdotum literis contineri, eo ipso tempore fore, ut valesceret oriens, profectique Judaea rerum potirentur. Both these historians have here manifestly copied Josephus (de B. J. vi. 5, 4 : ἡ χρησιμὸς ἀμφίβολος ὁμολογία ἐν τοῖς ἱεροῖς εὐρημέτος γράμμασιν, ὡς κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν ἐκείνον ἀπὸ τῆς χώρας τῆς αὐτῶν ἄρξει τῆς οἰκουμένης), as is proved not only by the similarity of the words and the common reference to Vespasian, but also the express mention of Josephus and his prophecy in Sueton. Vesp. c. 5. But Josephus, in this case, gave a Grecian expression to the Jewish notion of the Messiah, and the flattering application to Vespasian was made for the purpose of giving importance to the writer's nation and himself, and to remove suspicion from them for the present at least. Tacitus makes frequent use of Josephus in his history of the Jews, though he always takes a Roman point of view.

the people that served them.³ They were most hated by the neighbouring nations, particularly the Egyptians. In the eyes of the proud Romans, they were rather an object of contempt.⁴ We find, therefore, no attempt, under the dominion of the Romans, to extinguish this hated religion, such as that made by Antiochus Epiphanes, although, once and again, there seems to have been a design to make Roman customs universal in opposition to the national prejudices. This hatred and contempt produced singular stories respecting the origin and history of the Jews,⁵ as well as absurd notions of their religion;⁶ and these in their

The Jewish people were by no means confined to Palestine. Only the smaller part of them had availed themselves of the permission of Cyrus to return to their native land, and therefore numbers had remained behind in Babylonia, who, doubtless, spread themselves farther towards the east, so that in the first century they were very considerable, (ὁὐκ ὀλίγαι μυριάδες, Jos. Ant. xv. 3, 1.) In Arabia, the kings of the Homerites (about 100 B. C.) had even adopted the Jewish religion, and subsequently it had reached the throne of Adiabene, by the conversion of king Izates, (about 45 A.D. comp. Jos. Ant. xx. 2.) At the building of Alexandria, Alexander the Great brought a colony of Jews to settle there, (Jos. de B. I. ii. 36;) more were brought by Ptolemy Lagi to Egypt, Cyrene, and Lybia, (Jos. Ant. xii. 2, 4); and the Jews were very numerous in these places, (1,000,000, Philo in Flacc. p. 971. In Alexandria two-fifths of the population, ibid. p. 973). By trade they soon became rich and powerful.¹ Many Jewish colonists had also been carried into Syria by Seleucus Nicanor, (Jos. Ant. xii. 3, 1), especially to Antioch, where, in after times, a great part of the population consisted of Jews, (Jos. de B. J. vii. 3, 3). Antiochus Jews worshipped the heaven (Juvenal. Sat. xiv. 97, nil praeter nubes et coeli numen adorant). Others thought that they worshipped Bacchus (Plutarch Sympos. iv. Qu. 5, Tacit. hist. 5. 5). According to others, the object of adoration was an ass's head (Apion ap. Jos. c. Ap. ii. 7. Tacit. hist. 5, 4. Plut. l. c.) According to others, a swine (Plutarch. l. c. the Great was the first who sent a Jewish colony to Phrygia and Lydia, (Jos. l. c.), and from these two countries they had spread themselves not only over the whole of Asia Minor, but also over Greece. The first Jews in Rome had been brought as prisoners of war by Pompey. They afterwards obtained their freedom, (therefore they were styled libertini, Philo de legat. ad Caj. p. 1014, Tacit. ann. ii. 85), received permission from Julius Cæsar to erect synagogues, (Jos. Ant. xiv. 10, 8), and soon occupied the greatest part of the city beyond the Tiber, (Philo. l. c.) Thus, at the time of Christ, it was not easy to find a country in the whole Roman empire in which the Jews did not dwell, (Strabo, xiv. c. 2, Philo legat. ad caj. p. 1031).

All these widely dispersed Jews (ἡ διασπορά) considered Jerusalem as their common capital, the sanhedrim of that place as their ecclesiastical supreme court; and sent not only yearly contributions in money, (δίδραχμα) and offerings to the temple, (Philo de Monarch, lib. ii. p. 822, in Flacc. 971, legat. ad. Caj. 1014, 1023, 1031, Cicero pro Flacc. 12, Tacit. Hist. 5, 5), but also frequently repaired thither to the great festivals, (Philo de Monarch, lib. ii. p. 821), without detriment being done to this common sanctuary by the temple built in Leontopolis (152 B. C.) by Onias.² They obtained peculiar privileges, not only in the places where they settled as colonists, at the desire of the princes of the country, but Cæsar had allowed them the free exercise of their religion,³ in a series of regulations enacted for the purpose, while he granted them several favours in relation to their law.⁴ But these very distinctions merely served to ² The temple of Onias was as far from causing a schism among the Jews as the dispute between the Pharisees and Sadducees, although the building of it was disapproved by the Palestinian Jews.

In the mean time, Judaism had been introduced in many ways among the heathen. It is true that only a few became complete converts to it by submitting to circumcision (proselytes of righteousness);⁵ but several, particularly women,⁶ attached themselves to it for the purpose of worshipping Jehovah as the one true God, without observing the Mosaic law, (proselytes of the gate),⁷ which was sufficient for those who were not Jews, according to the opinion of the more liberal Jewish expositors.⁸

But now, under altered circumstances, all heathens who attached themselves to Judaism by the spontaneous observance of those precepts, received the same appellation. These precepts, which, in the opinion of the Jews, were delivered even to Noah, (comp. Genesis ix. 4 ff.), and in him to the whole human race, are said to be seven. 1. A prohibition of idolatry; 2. Blasphemy; 3. The shedding of human blood; 4. Incest; 5. Theft; 6. The command to practise righteousness; 7. To eat no blood, and no animal in which the blood still remains. Others, on the contrary, especially in Rome, which longed after foreign rites, felt themselves attracted not so much by the religion as by the religious ceremonial of the Jews. These individuals observed Jewish ceremonies without separating themselves on that account from the heathen forms of worship, kept Jewish festivals, and trusted in Jewish conjurations. There soon appeared, also, Jewish jugglers, who ministered to this heathen superstition as conjurors and soothsayers.⁹

allowed these proselytes a part in the kingdom of the Messiah; the school of Shammai excluded them from it,—both with reference to Ps. ix. 18. See E. M. In this way the Jewish names for deity came into the formula of heathen impostors, though at a later period; and were supposed to possess a peculiar magical power in union with the heathen appellations of God, (Origenes c. Cels. iv. p. 183, v. p. 262), and were found on gems; see my remarks in the Theol. Stud. u. Kritiken, 1830, Heft. 2, p. 403. To this influence of Judaism Seneca refers, de superstitionibus (*ap. Illi tamen causas ritus sui noverunt, sed major pars populi facit, quod cur faciat ignorat. It might be expected that with this heathen tendency many should make a mere external profes-

At the same time, intercourse with the pagans could not exist without exerting some influence on the Jews. It must have partly smoothed away many rough points of their national character, and have partly communicated to them a great portion of the cultivation of the nations among whom they lived. A philosophical mode of treating their religion was developed especially at Alexandria, under the Ptolemies, in consequence of the study of Grecian philosophy, and thence a peculiar philosophy of religion, which may be traced from Aristobulus, (about 160 B.C.), throughout the Book of Wisdom,¹⁰ and the Therapeutæ,¹ to its most distinguished representative Philo, († 41 A.D.)¹² Though Philo's Platonic Judaism in this complete form

Hence we can explain why the Talmudists passed so severe a judgment on the Pharisees, although the latter were still very zealous in making proselytes at the time of Christ (Matth. xxiii. 15): Proselyti impediunt adventum Messiae, sunt sicut scabies Israeli, &c. Othonis lexicon rabbin. p. 491. THE SAMARITANS.

The mixed people¹ who had grown up into a society after the destruction of the kingdom of Israel, in the tract belonging to it, (2 Kings 17, 24 ff., סַמְרִיטַיִם, Samaritai), had constantly been an object of detestation to the Jews because of their religion, which had been at first compounded of Judaism and heathenism. The Samaritans, indeed, under the direction of the Jewish priest Manasseh, supported by the Persian viceroy Sanballat, had retained the Pentateuch, (409 B. C.), erected a temple on ¹³ I cannot agree with the prevailing view, that the strictly monotheistic Philo thought of the Logos as hypostatically different from God. Since the infinite cannot be revealed in the finite, God was under the necessity, so to speak, of making himself finite for this purpose, i. e. of separating from his own infinite perfections a finite measure of ideas and powers. God, in this aspect, is the Logos. Accordingly, the Logos is less than God, the revealed God less than deity in himself, but not on that account a hypostasis different from God.

Gerizim, established a levitical priesthood,—in short, the whole of Judaism as it then was;² but all served merely to increase the hatred of the Jews against them, although they were united from this time onward, not only by neighbourhood, but also by a similar religion, and a series of like fortunes. This hatred entertained by the Jews, which the Samaritans seemed not to have returned with like virulence, was not abated in their native land by the destruction of the temple on Gerizim by John Hyrcanus, (109 B.C.); it was transferred to Egypt, where Jewish and Samaritan colonies had been planted by Alexander and Ptolemy Lagi,³ and has continued to the latest times.

The Samaritans held fast by Judaism, as it had come to them by Manasseh, with rigid strictness; and therefore the later developments of it among the Jews remained unknown to them, as they did also to the Sadducees.⁴ Besides, in the history of this people there was no ground for the same degree of national arrogance and hatred of every thing foreign as existed among

Their pentateuch was printed along with the Samaritan translation in the Paris Polyglot 1629. A more accurate knowledge of their condition and doctrines in modern times has been obtained from the letters of the Samaritans to Jos. Scaliger 1589; to men at Oxford, through the medium of Robert Huntington 1671; to Job Ludolf 1784, (see these letters in Eichhorn's Repertorium ix. and xiii.); and to De Sacy (since 1808), *comp. In addition, a letter of 1700 was made known by Hamaker in the Archief voor kerkelijke Geschiedenis door Kist en Royaards, v. 1, (Leiden 1834).—Besides this, Samaritan poems exist, which belong to the times of the Arabs, and were first used in Gesenius de Samaritanorum theologia ex fontibus ineditis comm. (*Weihnachtsprogramm. the Jews. And while among the Jews the extravagant national feeling fostered a more sensuous apprehension of the doctrine of a special Divine providence in favour of their nation, and of the Messiah, and by this means favoured a worldly view of the doctrines of religion; that smaller measure of national pride existing among the Samaritans was the cause of their looking at Judaism more in its spiritual aspect.⁵ This tendency was certainly promoted by the connection of the Samaritans with those of the same faith who had settled in Alexandria, and who were then partakers of Grecian culture. Still, however, the

⁶ In the later Samaritan writings a progressive development of several doctrines by the influence of the Alexandrian peculiarities cannot be mistaken. The characteristics of Samaritan theology are strict Monotheism, aversion to all Anthropomorphism (Gesenius de theol. Sam. p. 12 ss), both which were manifested even in their Pentateuch (Gesenius de pentat. Sam. p. 58 ss). According to Leontius de sectis, they denied the doctrine of angels, i.e. the improved Jewish doctrine regarding them. In the later poetical writings angels appear as uncreated influences proceeding from God יְהוָה (יְהוָה דְּנִימֵי), comp. Gesenius de theol. Sam. p. 21, which resembles a gnostic development, of which the first trace appears to be in Acts 8, 10. They magnified Moses and the law, rejecting all the later prophetic writings. The Sabbath and circumcision were regarded as the most important pledges of the covenant with Jehovah. The temple on Gerizim was the only true one (Deuteron. xxvii. 4, יְהוָה altered into יְהוָה). Gesen. de Pent. Sam. p. 16). According to the fathers, they denied immortality and the resurrection, i. e. they maintained the insensible state of the soul in Sheol. We find among them afterwards a resurrection to a life entirely different from the present (Gesenius de theol. Sam. p. 38). The Messiah (הַמְּשִׁיחַ or הַמְּשִׁיחַ Ges. l. c., p. 44: reductor, conversor), probably a יִשְׁרָאֵל, will lead the people to repentance, and then to happiness, the nations will believe in him, and by him will be won over to the law and to the temple on Gerizim. (Comp. John iv. 25.)

spiritual tendency which characterized the constantly oppressed people received no scientific improvement. In the mean time there appeared in the first century in succession three founders of sects, of whom *Dositheus*⁷ departed from the prevalent Samaritan Judaism in a very few particulars. *Simon Magus*⁸ drew the germ of his syncretic magical system from the philosophical opinions then current, probably at Alexandria, and unfolded them farther, instigated perhaps by Christianity, which had gave himself out to be the prophet promised in Deut xviii. 18. The church fathers falsely ascribe to him many peculiar doctrines which were held by all the Samaritans. (According to Jewish tradition, the priest sent by Sennacherib, 1 Kings xvii. 27, 28, was one R. Dosthai. Drusius de tribus sectis Jud. iii. 4. It is probable, therefore, that the two persons were confounded.) A strict ascetic life and an overscrupulous observance of the Sabbath were peculiar to him. The statue on the island in the Tiber, as Justin relates, Apol. Maj. c. 26 and 56, with the inscription Simoni sancto Deo, was found in 1574, and has on it, Semoni Sancto Deo Fidio Sacrum, &c. (See Baronius ad ann. 44. no. 55.) On Semo Sancus or Sangus, comp. Ovid. Fast. v. 213. Justin's mistake is apparent, although Baronius, Thirlby, Maranus, especially Fogginus de Romano Divi Petro itinere et episcopatu, Florent. 1741, 4to. p. 247 ss., wish to justify his account; and Braun (S. Justini M. Apologiae, Bonnae 1830, p. 97) has promised a new defence of it. The followers of Simon must be regarded as Samaritan Gnostics, (Justin. M. Apol. maj. c. 26: καὶ σχεδὸν πάντες μὲν Σαμαρεῖς, ὅλγιοι δὲ καὶ ἐν ἄλλοις ἔθνεσιν, ὡς τὸν πρῶτον θεὸν ἐκείνων ὁμολογοῦντες, ἐκείνων καὶ προσκυνοῦσι), whose system may have been developed parallel with the Christian Gnosis. Among Christians Simon has always been looked upon as the master and progenitor of all heretics, (Irenaeus adv. haer. i. 27, ii. praef.), and although he never was a Christian, yet, in later times, he was thought to be the first here-lately appeared. In the third place, Menander,⁹ the disciple of Simon Magus, departed little from the footsteps of his master. All three left behind them sects which continued for several centuries. The followers of Simon and Menander were often confounded with Christians by the heathen,¹⁰ and actually endeavoured to insinuate themselves into the Christian church after Christianity had become the prevailing religion.¹¹

RELATION OF THE TIMES TO CHRISTIANITY IN ITS INFANCY.

From the view that has been given it may be seen, that the popular religions of the heathen had become superannuated at the time of Christ, and that unbelief and superstition were on the point of putting an end to all true religion. It is further apparent, that Judaism, losing more and more its spiritual character, threatened to sink down in externalities. Under these circumstances many heathens must have longed for a religion which put an end to their doubts and agitations, satisfied the demands of their moral nature, and afforded them consolation and inward peace. The circumstance of Christianity coming from the east, whose mystical religions had at that time attracted general attention to itself, must have facilitated at least the introduction of it. Nor could it be otherwise than that many Jews felt the emptiness of their ceremonial service, especially as they had been already guided to a more spiritual worship of God by many passages in their own prophets. On the other hand, expectations of the Messiah prepared the way for Christianity among the Jews.

But, however much there was in the circumstances of these times which must have promoted Christianity, there was not less to obstruct it. Among the Jews, national pride, earthly hopes of Messiah, and habituation to an almost external religion; among the heathen, unbelief as well as superstition, which prevailed at this time, the stain attaching to Jewish origin, and the political grounds which, in the universal opinion, rendered it necessary to abide by the national religion. Christianity could reckon on toleration on the part of the state, agreeably to the principles of the Romans, only as long as it was confined to the Jewish people. But a religion which, like the Jewish, did not only declare all other national religions false, but was likewise gathering adherents among all nations in a much greater degree than the Jewish, and was threatening to extinguish all others, could not be endured by the Roman government without an abandonment of the old state religion. The toleration which all philosophical systems and foreign superstitions found at Rome could not, therefore, be expected by Christianity;¹ for an external observance of the state religion was at least consistent with the nature of such systems and superstitions.²

CHRONOLOGICAL DATA RESPECTING THE LIFE OF JESUS.

¹ According to Wieseler, Christ was born in February 750 A.U. (4 B. C.), baptized in spring or summer 780, (27 A.D.), crucified on the 7th April 783, (30 A.D.). A work so acute and learned as that of Wieseler cannot be sufficiently characterised in a few words. The exact coincidence, however, of different investigations produces more doubt than conviction, since the separate data may be bent, on account of their vacillating nature, in subservience to one object, without completely removing scruples in regard to them. In particular, ωρε, in Luke iii. 23, p. 126, appears to be taken too strictly; it is incredible that the chronological designation of Luke iii. 1, should reach to the captivity of the Baptist,

The only definite date in the evangelical history² is in Luke iii. 1, relating to the appearance of John the Baptist.³ On the supposition that Jesus appeared in public half a year after John, as he was born half a year after him, the designation of his age in Luke iii. 23 gives nearly the time of his birth, which, perhaps, may be still more closely determined by the circumstance that it must have happened before the death of Herod, († shortly before the passover, 750 A.U.) Matth. ii. 1, 19.⁴ Even in the first centuries accounts of the year of Jesus' birth are given;⁵ but the Romish abbot Dionysius Exiguus (525), reckoned, inde-

Epiphan. haer. li. 22, and Orosius histor. i. 1, the 42d year, 752 A.U.—Sulpicius Severus hist. sacr. ii. 27, gives the 33d year of Herod, Coss. Sabinus and Rufinus, (which does not suit, as Sab.

The ministry of Jesus was supposed by many of the older church fathers, after the example of the Alexandrians, to have continued one year, agreeably to Isaiah lxi. 1, 2, comp. Luke iv. 19, (ἐνιαυτὸς κυρίου δεκτὸς).¹⁰ On this was founded the hypothe-

⁶ The Incarnatio, ἐκφώνησις, always means in the fathers the annunciation. Dionysius, therefore, placed the birth of Christ in the conclusion of the first year of his era. When first, about the time of Charlemagne, the beginning of the year was made to coincide with the 25th of December, the incarnation appears to have been taken as synonymous with the nativity. ⁹ Clem. Alex. Strom. i. p. 340, relates, that some regarded the 25th of Pachon (20th May), others the 24th or 25th Pharmuthi (the 19th or 20th April), as the birth-day. After the 6th of January, solemnized as a day of baptism by the followers of Basilides, was kept by the Oriental Christians since the third century as the day of baptism and birth, people began to keep this day as the true day of birth (Epiph. haer. li. 21). After the 25th December was solemnized in the fourth century in the west, as the birth-festival, this day came soon to be looked upon as the day of birth (Sulpic. Sever. hist. sacr. ii. 27).

¹⁰ So the Valentinians (Irenæus ii. 38, 39), in opposition to whom Irenæus puts forth the singular assertion that Jesus was baptized in his thirtieth year, but did not appear as a teacher till between his fortieth and fiftieth (John viii. 57), and then taught three years. One year, however, was adopted by Clem. Alex. Strom. i. 340. Origenes hom. 32 in Lucam, and de princip. iv. On the other hand, c. Cels. ii. p. 397, sis, which became almost traditional in the ancient church, that Jesus was crucified in his thirtieth year, Coss. Rubellius Geminus and Fufius Geminus,¹¹ (in the 15th year of Tiberius, 29th of the Dionysian era). But, according to the gospel of John ii. 13, (v. 1), vi. 4, xi. 55, three, or perhaps four passovers, happened during the public ministry of Christ. It must, therefore, have continued more than two years, and may, perhaps, have extended over three. Thus, the year of his death falls between 31 and 33 aer. Dionys., making his age from thirty-four to thirty-eight years. Even if we could agree on the preliminary question whether the Friday on which Jesus died was the day before the passover, or the first day of the passover;¹² yet, amid the uncertainty of the Jewish calendar of that time, an astronomical reckoning of the year of his death can scarcely be established.¹³

¹² The first three evangelists designate the last supper as the passover, (Matth. xxvi. 17, ss. Mark xiv. 12, Luke xxii. 7), and hence it has been usually assumed in the Western Church that Christ was crucified on the first day of the passover. On the contrary, the day of Christ's death was, according to John xiii. 1, 29, xviii. 28, xix. 14, 31, the day before the passover. The latter is followed by Tertullian, adv. Jud. c. 8, the Greeks, Scaliger, Cassaubon, Capellus, Lampe, Kuinoel, &c. It is strongly in favour of the latter hypothesis that the first day of the passover can never fall on a Friday, at least according to the present calendar of the Jews. See Ideler's chronologie, Bd. i. p. 519. Probably the account of the first three evangelists is to be explained by the circumstance, that they took the last supper of Jesus to be the Christian passover; see Theile in Winer's Krit. HISTORY OF THE YOUTH OF JESUS.

The history of Jesus' life before his public appearance is very obscure,¹ and affords no disclosures in relation to the important question of the mode and progress of his spiritual development. Modern scholars have endeavoured to supply this deficiency by conjectures, and have attributed a decided influence on his character, sometimes to the doctrines of the Essenes,² sometimes to those of the Sadducees,³ sometimes to a combination of Pharisaism and Sadduceism,⁴ sometimes to an Alexandrian-Jewish education.⁵ But such a spirit could not have received its direction from any school, and, least of all, from the schools of those times, which were better adapted to fetter the spirit, partly by

Christianity is supposed to be the public revelation of the Essene doctrines, and that these were connected with the ancient schools of the prophets, with Parsism, the Egyptian and Grecian mysteries, and through them with Brahmaism! According to Gfrörer, (das Heiligthum u. die Wahrheit, Stuttgart, 1838, s. 382), Jesus was educated among the Essenes, and afterwards followed his own course, but continued to hold what was sound in their doctrines and customs. their literal externality, partly by their fanatical idealism, than to prepare it for a clear and great self-development.⁶ On the contrary, the reading of the prophets of the Old Testament must have quickened in the kindred spirit a religious feeling as spiritual as that of the time was literal and carnal, and must have given it a measure for estimating the condition of the Jewish nation at that period, and for judging of the means by which alone it could be elevated, very different from the usual view.

Before Jesus, appeared one of his relatives John, in the wilderness of Judea, with the solemn call, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," and dedicating his followers to this altered state of mind by a symbolical washing of the body.¹ It is certain that John and Jesus had been earlier acquainted with one another; but it is improbable that there existed a close connection between them, or the concerting of a common plan. The peculiarities of John point to an earlier connection with the Essenes.² The same character was possessed by his disciples, who, after Jesus' appearance, continued apart from the disciples of the latter, (John iii. 26; Luke v. 33; Matth. ix. 14; xi. 2 ff.),³ and of whom we meet with remains in Asia Minor, long after John himself had fallen a sacrifice to his intrepidity (Acts xviii. 25; xix. 1. ff.).⁴

⁴ Cf. Recog. Clem. i. 54 and 60. In the middle of the 17th century, the existence of a sect was made known by Carmelite missionaries, whose head-quarters were Basrah and Suster, calling themselves Nazoreans, (not to be confounded with the Muhammedan sect Nasaireans), or Mendeans, but by the Muhammedans they were named Sabians, (Sabaei, probably the name was borrowed from the star-worshippers of the Koran). They got the name Christians of St John from the missionaries. Cf. Ignatii a Jesu narratio originis, rituum et errorum (Christianorum S. Johannis, Rom. 1652, 8vo. The language of their sacred books is an Aramaean dialect, which occupies a middle position between the Syriac and Chaldaee. They allege that they came from Jordan, from whence they were driven by the Muhammedans. Most scholars assume the descent of this sect from the

THE PUBLIC LIFE AND MINISTRY OF JESUS.

Jesus also came out of Galilee to Jordan to be baptised by John, and was recognised in such a way by the latter that he considered it more befitting to receive baptism from Jesus than the contrary. The import of this is, that the Baptist looked upon himself as called to higher purity. This baptism was to Jesus the consecration to his Messianic activity. It is true that he began with the same call to his nation as John the Baptist (Matth. iv. 17); but he soon unfolded a far more comprehensive system in the discharge of his ministry, which, though it directly affected the Jewish people only, yet in its very nature belonged to all humanity. The Jewish people at that time presented an aspect the most deserving of compassion. In the deepest external degradation, always cherishing the most extravagant hopes in regard to the immediate future, they were exposed by their very religion to the corruption into which they sank. And yet this very religion, when judged, not by the partial, priestly form which it had been received, but as drawn from its original documents, and pervaded by the living prophetic spirit which animated it as there described, must have marvellously revealed itself to every human breast as directly certain, as the only true source of human happiness. It was the aim and object of Jesus to awaken, by his life and doctrine, this prophetic element of the Mosaic religion, but in a purer form and in greater development, among his countrymen; and to bring it into the hearts of men as a spontaneous principle of action. By such spiritual regeneration alone could the Jewish people be delivered even from external corruption; and we cannot doubt that Jesus would gladly have effected this outward deliverance also. But his plan extended far wider, although the germs which lay in the compass of his ministry proceeded forth, and became visible, for the most part, only after he had left our world. Jesus appeared first in Galilee, and resided not at Nazareth (Luke iv. 24), but usually at Capernaum. From this place, however, he not only traversed Galilee, but often abode for a long time in Judea in his journeys to the festivals at Jerusalem. He was only in Samaria occasionally as he went through it; and we find him but once beyond the confines of Judea (Mark vii. 24 ff.) By degrees he drew around him twelve young men, illiterate (Matth. xi. 25), and from the lower orders of society, for the purpose of initiating them into his spirit and plan by their living with him and continually receiving his instructions. They accompanied him in his smaller journeys on which he appeared, sometimes among small domestic circles, sometimes in synagogues, sometimes among great multitudes under the canopy of heaven; and much as he attracted to himself universal attention by the extraordinary works he wrought, he excited no less astonishment and wonder by his doctrine, which directly convinced and carried captive the hearer (Matth. vii. 28, 29; Luke iv. 32). At first he avoided observation (Matth. ix. 30); he even forbade the disciples to make him known as the Messiah (Matth. xvi. 20;) but afterwards he declared himself to be the promised Messiah with a firmness which forbids the idea of mere accommodation (Matth. xvi. 20, 26, 64). But the religious idea of the Old Testament had obtained within him a new and higher life, reaching far beyond the local and temporal form handed down among the Jews by tradition.¹ The Old Testament conception of a Theocracy was transformed in him into the high idea of the kingdom of God, in which men, animated by the Spirit of God, should be united with Deity and one another in moral unity. This kingdom of God he wished, as the Messiah, to establish on earth; on which account he required of his contemporaries, sunk as they were in the external and the literal, first of all, change of heart, that they might be susceptible of the Spirit of God; next, faith in himself as the Christ, that, by yielding itself up to the higher spirit, even the weaker mind might be elevated to free communion with God. It follows, of course, that nothing stood more in his way than the Pharisaic righteousness which rested on works. Hence he levelled his attacks chiefly against it. He did not indeed abolish the ceremonial law of Moses, constantly observing it himself; but he could not look upon it in any other light than as an expression of inward religious feeling; and all value attached to religious external observances, independently of true devotional feelings, was worthless in his eyes (Matth. xii. 1 ff.; xv. 1 ff.; v. 24; xii. 9). So far as he designated the free development of this internal religious feeling, the only genuine religious culture, it necessarily followed from his doctrine, and must have been sooner or later expressed publicly by his disciples, that no religious law for men can be in the form of a rule that requires something merely external. Thus the removal of the ceremonial law necessarily followed his teachings. In like manner Jesus confined his immediate efforts to the Jews alone, and avoided coming in contact with those who were not Jews, out of regard to the very prejudices of his nation (Matth. x. 5; xv. 21—28). But still there lay always in his doctrine, which rejected all reliance on externalities, an adaptation for all mankind, as he himself often intimated with sufficient distinctness (Matth. viii. 11, 21, 43).

While Jesus endeavoured to guide his disciples to this purer religion and moral communion in the kingdom of God, he also drew them gradually away from the common notion of retribution which prevailed among the Jews, (Luke xiii. 2 ff.; John. ix. 2, 3,) announced to them the forgiveness of sins in the way of repentance and faith, and then taught them, in this inward communion with God, to meet all external fortunes with submission, and confidence, and the firmest trust in God, (Matth. vi. 33; x. 28). The kingdom of God, as it was then begun, was only an inward thing (Luke xvii. 21), in continual conflict with the world and with evil; but Jesus promised that he should appear again, to judge the evil, and to place piety and happiness in their natural relation, in the kingdom of God, (Matth. xxiv. 30; xxv. 31). The notion of such a triumphant kingdom of God had been already set forth, though in a sensuous form, in the description given of Messiah's reign; and since it could be spoken of generally only in figures, Jesus borrowed his figures from it, giving at the same time sufficient intimation of a more spiritual, universal, and purer view. (Matth. xxii. 30.) It could not be otherwise than that these figures should be more or less spiritually understood, according to the different degrees of religious culture: but the leading idea on which all depended, the idea of a future adjustment of the relation of happiness to piety in the kingdom of God triumphant, must have always been maintained. The disciples, accustomed to entertain the conception of an earthly Messianic kingdom, not only took all those images in a sensuous acceptation, but also introduced into them many minute definitions. Thus, although Jesus had declared the point of time when he should come again, to be a secret with God the Father, (Matth. xxiv. 36), yet they annexed to the admonition to be always ready (Matth. xxiv. 43, 44), the expectation of the near approach of his coming (Matth. xvi. 27). These sensuous expectations could not at once be eradicated from their minds, without at the same time endangering their faith in Jesus; but they were gradually purified and spiritualised by a series of events. Probably the closing fortunes of Jesus' life, though even they did not destroy those sensuous hopes, were required to convince the disciples that God's ways are very different from man's expectations, and to confirm their faith in the Divine mission of Jesus; while, at the same time, they furnished the highest example of a mind renouncing the earthly, entirely devoted to God, and of a self-sacrificing love.

The Pharisees contemporary with Jesus, affected and exasperated by the truth of his doctrine, did not rest till they had brought him to the death he had long foreseen (Matth. ix. 15; xvi. 21—et seq.) Delivered up to them by a disciple, after he instituted shortly before a covenant-supper, as a symbol of internal union with him, and of unity among his disciples themselves, he was accused by them of insurrection before Pontius Pilate, and condemned by him through unworthy views. The courage of the disciples, which had almost vanished away, returned after his resurrection with so much strength and purity, that an unshaken attachment to Jesus was now to be expected from them, even amid outward renunciations of His cause. It was still reserved, however, for later occurrences to correct many remaining prejudices. Thus it was some time before they fully understood the last commission of Jesus to carry the glad news of the beginning of God's kingdom on earth to all nations, to invite all into it, and to initiate them into it by baptism.

This passage was first mentioned and cited by Eusebius (hist. eccles. i. 11, demonstr. evangel. iii. 5), and for a long time repeated by succeeding writers without any hesitation. The first who entertained doubts of its authenticity were Hubert Gifanius ICTus (the letter in refutation of Sebastianus Lepusculus dd. Basilae the 24. Febr. 1559. See in Melch. Goldasti centuria epistolarum philologicarum Nro 61), and Lucas Osiander (in Epitome hist. eccles. Centur. i. lib. 2, cap. 7. Tübing. 1592). More searching investigations of various scholars, respecting the matter from 1646—1661, first occasioned by the Altdorf. Professor Sebastian Snellius, who denied the authenticity, are collected in: Epistolae xxx. philol. et hist. de Fl. Jos. testim. quod J. C. tribuit, rec. Christoph. Arnold, Noriberg. 1661, 12. The agreement of all MSS. from the time of Eusebius. 2. The number of Christians was too great to allow Josephus to pass over their origin without mention. 3. Josephus mentions John the Baptist. Against the genuineness : 1. The silence of the fathers before Eusebius, while Josephus, in Orig. c. Cels. i. p. 35, is said to be ἀναγινώσκων τὸ ἱερὸν ὡς Χριστὸν. 2. The passage interrupts the connection. 3. The contents betray a Christian. 4. The other Jewish historian, Justus Tiberiensis, has not mentioned Christ, Photii. Bibl. cod. 33. The assumption of interpolations which found their way into all the MSS. of Josephus out of the far more extensively circulated church history of Eusebius, is the most probable, since Josephus was read and copied only by Christians. Chrysostom appears, however, not to have been acquainted with these interpolations, since he mentions Josephus several times, and in hom. in Joann. 12, quotes his testim. de Joanne, but is silent in regard to this passage. Remarkable is the silence of Photius in his accounts regarding Jos. Archaeol. (bibl. cod. 76 and 238), especially as he remarks respecting Justus, cod. 33, that he, being a Jew, and encumbered with Jewish prejudices, does not mention Jesus and his miracles. The following writers have decided in favour of an interpolation formed by altering single expressions : Knittel (nova biblioth. phil. et crit. vol. i. i. 118. Goetting. 1782, 8.) and Paulus (Heidelb. Jahrb. August 1820, S. 734). ³ Two classes of apocryphal gospels may be distinguished : I. The older, which contained much the same cycle of narrations as the canonical ; for example, the gospels of the Hebrews and of the Egyptians, &c. II. The later, which refer to the youth, the parents, and the last fortunes of Christ. A.) Respecting the history of Christ's youth, we find fabulous writings first of all among the Marcosians in the second century. (Irenaeus, i. c. 17). The orthodox, at the same time, received a doctrinal interest in maintaining the miraculous stories of Jesus's youth in opposition to those Gnostics who asserted that the Aeon was first united with the man at the baptism of the latter. (Epiphan. haer. li. c. 20.) Several of these traditions are found in the Koran (comp. August. christologiae Coranicae lineamenta. Jen. 1799). Gospels of the infancy, still extant are the gospel of Thomas, an Arabic gospel of the infancy, and a Latin history of the nativity of Mary and the infancy of the Saviour. At a later period the virgin Mary also began to invite men to similar fabrications. Compounds of the two are exemplified in the Protevangelium of James, the Arabic history of Joseph the carpenter, and the Latin gospel of the nativity of Mary. B.) Respecting the last days of Jesus, Justin Martyr, apol. i. c. 35 and 48, refers to the τὰ ἐν Πιλάτῳ Πιλάτου γεγόμενα ἅκτα; in the same way he himself alludes, c. 34, and also Chrysostom, hom. 31. de natali Christi, to the acts regarding the census of Quirinus, not that he had seen them himself, but because he presupposes their existence in the Roman archives. Hence arose Christian traditions in relation to the contents of these acts, out of which Tertullian, apolog. c. 5, 21, draws the fabulous. During the persecution of Maximin, the heathen, taking occasion from these traditions, produced wicked Acta Pilati (Euseb. h. e. ix. c. 5), to which the Christians of that day had none other to oppose. The latter, however, soon made their appearance afterwards (Epiphan. haer. l. c. 1), and were fashioned and moulded in various ways. One of these fabrications has received in latter times the name, Gospel of Nicodemus. Cf. Henke de Pilati actis probabilia, Helmst. 1784, (opusc. academ. Lips. 1802, p. 199). W. L. ⁴ The first traces of likeness of Christ are to be found among the Carpocratians (Iren. i. 25), and in the lararium of Severus Alexander (Lamprid. c. 29). The persecuted church of the first centuries needed in Christ the pattern of a sufferer. Hence arose the general opinion that he was of unsightly form, according to Isaiah liii. 2, 3. At the same time all representations were forbidden, according to Exodus xx. 4. As soon as art began to represent Jesus, it must also have sought to express his excellence even in external form. Hence, from the fourth century onward, Jesus was supposed to have Yet they confessed still that there was no authentic likeness of Jesus to be seen. (Augustin. de trinitate, viii. 4. Nam et ipsius dominicæ facies carnis innumerabilium cogitationum diversitate variatur et fingitur, quæ tamen una erat, quæcunque erat, and c. 5, qua fuerit ille facie, nos penitus ignoramus.) Eusebius (h. e. vii. c. 18. Comp. the excursus in Heinichen's edition, Tom. iii. p. 396 ss.) relates concerning a statue at Paneas that it was there supposed to point to Jesus and the occurrence in Matth. ix. 20. All later writers repeat the story after him, and John Malala (600 A.D.), in his Chronog., p. 305, gave the name of the woman Beronice. This monument was destroyed by Julian (Sozom. v. 21. Philostorg. vii. 3), or according to Asterius, bishop of Amasia (about 400 in Photii bibl. cod. 271 in fine), by Maximin at a time when copies of it were hardly taken. Judging by the analogy of many coins, the memorial had been erected in honour of an emperor (probably Hadrian), and falsely interpreted by the Christians, perhaps on account of a συνήρη or θεῶς appearing in the inscription (cf. Th. Hasæi diss. ii. de monumento Paneadensi, Bremæ 1726, 4. and in ejusd. sylloge dissertt. ii. 314. Beausobre über die Bildsäule zu Paneas in Cramer's Sammlungen zur Kirchengesch. und theolog. EARLY HISTORY OF THE CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY TILL THE CONVERSION OF PAUL.

The adherents of Jesus, more than 500 in number, (1 Cor. xv. 6), and among them the twelve disciples, Simon (Cephas, Peter), and Andrew, sons of Jonas, James and John, sons of Zebedee, (Boanerges, sons of thunder, Mark iii. 17),¹ Philip, Thomas (called Didymus, John xx. 24), Bartholomew, (Nathanael? John i. 46), Matthew, (Matthew ix. 9, Levi, the son of Alphaeus, Mark ii. 14), James (the son of Alphaeus, Matthew x. 3, and of Mary, Matthew xxvii. 56, the wife of Cleopas, John xix. 25)² Thaddeus, (Lebbaeus surnamed Thaddeus, Matth. x. 3, Jude the brother of James, Luke vi. 16; Acts i. 13), Simon Zelotes (the Canaanite, Matth. x. 4), and Matthias, who was chosen in place of Judas Iscariot, to whom were now added the brethren of Jesus who had become believers,³ spent the first days after

³ Act. i. 14, comp. John vii. 5.

Christ's ascension in retirement in Jerusalem, till the Divine Spirit, who had been in the prophets and in Jesus, began to manifest his living power in them in an extraordinary manner on the day of Pentecost. Furnished with power and courage, the apostles now appeared more publicly, and the number of Christ's confessors increased every day. The community, however, did not renounce Judaism and the Jewish law, but rather considered themselves to be the society of genuine Israelites, (μαθηταὶ ἀδελφοί, πιστευόντες, σωζόμενοι, φοβούμενοι τὸν θεόν, called in derision by the Jews Nazarenes and Galileans) who having been saved from that untoward generation (Acts ii. 40), were preparing themselves for the unfolding of the Messiah's kingdom in its excellency. It must certainly be admitted, however, that sensuous expectations and erroneous opinions of the near approach of Christ's return (Acts i. 6; iii. 19—21), were mixed up with their better principles.⁴ The conditions of reception into this kingdom were repentance and faith in Christ, on which forgiveness of sin was promised in baptism, and the Holy Spirit imparted by the imposition of hands. Though they knew that the heathen also were admitted into the kingdom of God, still more that they should be invited, they yet believed that these Gentiles should first be incorporated among the Jewish people as proselytes of righteousness, and necessarily observe the entire Mosaic law. With this opinion they could not be in haste to invite the heathen also to embrace Christianity.

But, although the community did not separate itself from the religion of the Jews, yet they were more closely connected together by the peculiar direction which their religious feelings naturally took, and by their peculiar hopes. Thus there arose by degrees a regularly constituted society among the brethren. For this the Jewish synagogue presented itself as the most natural model.⁵ At first, the apostles themselves performed the duties of the society, but by degrees special officers were appointed. The apostles caused seven distributors of alms to be chosen (Acts vi. 1—6),⁶ inasmuch as the brethren showed very great liberality towards their poor,⁷ and because the administration of these gifts threatened to be detrimental to the proper calling and ministry of the twelve. Soon after this, we find πρεσβυτερος elders, (Acts xi. 30 = רַבִּי), chosen not so much for the purpose of teaching, as for the management of common concerns, and for maintaining the ordinances of the church. In all these appointments of the society, the apostles did not act despotically, but allowed the church to determine them, (Acts vi. 2; xv. 22, 23).

The bold appearance of the apostles, and the enlargement of their party, soon excited attention. The Sadducees were now the bitterest enemies of those who confessed the name of one risen from the dead, (Acts iv. 2; v. 17; xxiii. 6). On the other hand, priests (Acts vi. 7) and Pharisees (xv. 5) joined the Christians. After threatenings had been used with the apostles in vain, (Acts iv.), the Sadducean party in the Sanhedrim wished to apply violent measures, (v. 17 ff.), but were restrained by the prudent counsel of the Pharisee Gamaliel, (v. 34 ff., comp. xxiii. 6). Some Hellenists, however, provoked by the zeal of Stephen, stirred up the popular fury, to which the San-times they have for the most part been regarded as the first deacons. So Cyprian, as early as his time; epist. 65 ad Rogatianum. They are, however, distinguished from the deacons by Chrysostom, hom. 14 in Acta, § 3 (ed. Montfaucon. ix. 115), and the council of Trulla, canon 16. Vitranga de syn. vet. lib. iii. p. ii. cap. 5, compares them with the רַבִּי of the synagogue; and, on the other hand, the διακονοι of Paul with the רַבִּי. Boehmer, diss. jur. eccl. ant. diss. vii. p. 377, actually looked upon them as the first presbyters. See on the other side Mosheim de rebus Christ. ante Const. p. 122. Without doubt the deacons arose from the seven by the enlargement of the circles of duties required. See Mosheim, l. c. p. 120. Neander's apost. Kirche, i. 142. R. Rothe's Anfänge d. christl. Kirche, i. 162. Another opinion of Vitranga (l. c.) supported by Mosheim (l. c. p. 118), is, that those seven were appointed for the Hellenist poor. But the Grecian names do not necessarily indicate Hellenists; comp. the names of the apostles Andrew and Philip. Perhaps three were Hebrew, three Hellenistic Jews, and one a proselyte.

hedrim soon gave way. Stephen fell as the first martyr, (vi. 8—vii. 60); but the very persecution that now set in was the first means of spreading Christianity still farther. The Christians, driven from Jerusalem, preached the gospel in Judea, Samaria, (viii. 1—4), even as far as Damascus, (ix. 10, 19), Phœnicia, Cyprus, and Antioch, but yet only to the Jews, (xi. 19). In the mean time, they had cast off the Pharisaic prejudice against the Samaritans; and in Samaria itself Philip gained many converts to Christianity. The same individual preached the gospel in the towns on the sea-coast of Palestine, and finally took up his abode in Caesarea, probably as the founder of a church there, (viii. 40, comp. xxi. 8). The apostles, who had hitherto remained always in Jerusalem, now sent Peter and John to Samaria, in order to carry on the work there begun, (viii. 14 ff.) Peter then went to the towns on the sea-coast, where he was commanded by Heaven to baptize a pious proselyte of the gate, the centurion Cornelius, in Caesarea, (Acts x.) He quieted, indeed, the believers in Jerusalem who were not pleased with this transaction, (xi. 1—18); but the greatest part of them did not proceed farther than to allow that the heathen should be baptized rather than circumcised. In this sense alone the church at Jerusalem approved of the conduct of some Hellenistic Jews in Antioch who had converted even Gentiles to Christianity, (xi. 20, comp. ver. 22.) They still maintained the view, that the Mosaic law was absolutely binding on all nations,⁸ which was held particularly by some believing Pharisees, (xv. 5), regarding the universal and strict observance of that law as an essential characteristic of the times of Messiah, (according to Isaiah lii. 1, lxvi. 17, 20; Zech. viii. 21—23, xiv. 16, &c.)

In the mean time, however, that man had been previously converted to Christianity, to whom the mystery was to be announced that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs of the promises,¹ (Ephes. iii. 3—6). Saul, born at Tarsus in Cilicia, and a Roman citizen,¹ but educated in Jerusalem under Gamaliel, a Pharisee, from being a dangerous enemy of Christianity suddenly became a zealous adherent to it, (37—40 A.D.) After a three years' abode in Damascus and Arabia he came to Jerusalem, where *Barnabas*² introduced him to the apostles Peter and James, (Gal. i. 17—19; Acts ix. 19—27). The very same person conducted him also to the great scene of his apostolic labours; for, having been sent by the apostles to Antioch in order to establish the infant church there, he recalled Paul from Tarsus, and took him as his assistant, (Acts xi. 22—26). After this, when Herod Agrippa (41—44), for the purpose of ingratiating himself with the people, persecuted the church at Jerusalem, when James the elder was put to death, and Peter was saved from a like fate only by a miracle, (Acts xii.), Jerusalem ceased to be the secure seat of the apostles;³ and James, the brother of the Lord, and a Nazarite, appeared at the head of the church with a reputation equal to that of an apostle.⁴ In the mean time, Barnabas and Saul at Antioch gathered from among Jews and Gentiles a church so numerous, even in wealthy members, (χριστιανοί, Acts ii. 26),⁵ that they were able to bring contributions thence to the brethren at Jerusalem when a famine occurred, (44 A.D., Acts ii. 27—30; xii. 25). After this, the two

⁴ Hegesippus in Euseb. h. e. ii. 23: Διαδέχεται τὴν ἐκκλησίαν μετὰ τῶν ἀποστόλων ὁ ἀδελφὸς τοῦ κυρίου Ἰάκωβος, ὁ ὀνομασθεὶς ὑπὸ πάντων δίκαιος. —Οὗτος δὲ ἐκ κοίλας μητρὸς αὐτοῦ ἁγίος ἦν. sacr. i. 214. Heinichen ad. h. l. Kimmel de Rufino, p. 278.) Here the principles of the Essenes are mixed with the Nazarite, doubtless in the traditional account of the latter Ebionites, who fathered their asceticism upon James. Clement of Alexandria related, in the sixth book of his Hypotyposes (Euseb. ii. 1), Πέτρον καὶ Ἰάκωβον καὶ Ἰωάννην μετὰ τὴν ἀνάληψιν τοῦ σωτῆρος, ὡς ἐν καὶ ὑπὸ τοῦ κυρίου προτετιμημένους, μὴ ἐπιδιδάσκειν, δόξης, ἀλλ' Ἰάκωβον τὸν δίκαιον ἐπίσκοπον Ἱεροσολύμων ἐλθεῖναι. The three apostles selected are also those named in Matth. xvii. 1, 26, 37; consequently the James specified is the son of Zebedee. It has been disputed whether the person chosen, the same who appears at the head of the church in Jerusalem (Acts xii. 17; xv. 13; xxi. 18; Gal. i. 19; ii. 9), was the son of Alphaeus, or the brother of the Lord, or both (comp. § 25, note 2). Hegesippus manifestly points out the brother of the Lord, different from the apostle. So also the Apost. Constit. ii. 55; vi. 12. In vi. 14, they gave a list of the twelve apostles, and then put in equal rank with them: Ἰάκωβος τε ὁ τοῦ κυρίου ἀδελφὸς καὶ Ἱεροσολύμων ἐπίσκοπος, καὶ Παῦλος ὁ τῶν ἐθνῶν διδάσκαλος; a testimony which deserves consideration as belonging to the third century and to Syria. It need not appear remarkable that James the son of Alphaeus, as well as most of the apostles, should disappear from the record of the New Testament, and that Luke and Paul did not consider it necessary to separate from him, and to characterise particularly the James who is conspicuous in all Christendom.

entered on the first large missionary journey through Cyprus, Pamphylia, Pisidia, Lycaonia, during which the gospel was preached to Jews and Gentiles. After they had again abode for a long time in Antioch, Hebrew Christians came thither who excited divisions in the church, by the assertion, that the newly converted Gentile Christians must also necessarily become Jewish proselytes of righteousness. Hence Paul and Barnabas were sent to Jerusalem, where they received from the collective apostles, and the assembled church, a decision to the effect, that the Gentiles should only be required to accede to proselytism of the gate, (Acts xv.)⁶ They were also, at the same time, recognized as apostles of the Gentiles by Peter, James, and John, who resolved to continue their labours among Nösselt diss. de vera vi et ratione decreti Hierosolymitani Act. xv. (in ejusd. exercitatt. ad. sacr. script. interpret. p. 95.) When many writers assume that the abstaining from flesh offered in sacrifice to idols, from blood and things strangled, was enjoined on the Gentile Christians, because the Jews held these things in greater abhorrence, it should be remarked that this greater abhorrence of them had its foundation in the circumstance of those things being forbidden of God, according to the Jewish opinion, not merely to the Jews but to all men.

the Jews, (Gal. ii. 9, A.D. 52). Soon after, Barnabas and Mark made a second journey to Cyprus, while Paul and Silas repaired to the churches of Asia Minor. In Lystra, Paul took Timothy with him, travelled through Phrygia and Galatia, passed over into Macedonia, where churches had been founded at Philippi, Thessalonica, and Berea, and came by Athens to Corinth, (Epistles to the Thessalonians.)⁷ After remaining there a year and a half, he returned by Ephesus, Caesarea, and Jerusalem to Antioch, (Acts xv. 36—xviii. 22). But he soon entered on the third great journey to Asia Minor, where he passed at Ephesus the first two years and three months. Here, and in the vicinity, he established Christianity more firmly, (Epistle to the Galatians ? First Epistle to the Corinthians), and then travelled through Macedonia (Second Epistle to Corinthians) to Corinth (Epistle to the Romans). After a three months' abode in this city he returned to Jerusalem by Miletus, (Acts xviii. 23; xxi. 17.) Here, having been taken in the temple, (58 A.D.), he was brought to Caesarea, and thence to Rome, (60—61 A.D., epistles to the Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, and to Philemon). The Acts of the Apostles closes with the second year of the Roman captivity (63 A.D.); but, according to later, though ancient testimonies, he was again liberated from this bondage, made several other journeys, (First Epistle to Timothy,⁸ Epistle to Titus), and then fell into a second captivity at Rome, (Second Epistle to Timothy), which terminated in his death, (67 A.D.)⁹

⁹ So Eusebius h. e. ii. c. 22, supported by Clemens Rom. Ep. i. § 5: Διά τὴν ἡλικίαν ὁ Παῦλος ὑπομονῆς βραβεῖον ἀπέσχετο.—Κήρυξ γενόμενος ἐν τῇ ἀπαρχῇ καὶ ἐν τῇ ὀψει, τὸ γενναῖον τῆς πίστεως αὐτοῦ κλέος ἔλαβεν. Δικαιοσύνην διδάξας ὅλον τὸν κόσμον, καὶ ἐπὶ τὸ τέρμα τῆς δόσεως ἐλθὼν, καὶ μαρ-

Among Paul's disciples the most distinguished were Silas or Silvanus (Acts xv. 40 ss., as far as xviii. 5; 2 Cor. i. 19), who was afterwards with Peter (1 Peter v. 12); Timothy, who, commissioned by Paul, abode for a long time at Ephesus, in order to arrange the affairs of the church at that place; Titus, who had been left for the same purpose in Crete (both considered in later times as the first bishops of these churches, Euseb. iii. 4); and Luke.

The history of the other apostles, and their early pupils, is involved in great obscurity, and has been frequently much disfigured by mistakes and fabrications. Among these distortions may be reckoned principally, the traditions respecting the apostles determining by lots to what countries they should go from Jerusalem,¹ the joint composition of the apostles' creed,²

Even the fragmentum de canone in Muratorii antiquit. ital. medii aevi, iii. 854, which belongs to the third century, mentions the departure of Paul setting out from the city for Spain. A single captivity of Paul in Rome, ending with his death, is assumed by Petavius, Lardner, J. E. C. Schmidt, Eichhorn, E. F. R. Wolf (de altera Pauli Ap. captivitate diss. ii. Lips. 1819—20, 8), Schrader (Paulus i. 227), Hensen, Baur, Reuss (Gesch. d. Schriften d. N. T. § 54), Matthiä (Pastoralbr. S. 185, 593), de Wette (Einl. in d. N. T., § 122, Schenkel (theol. A violent catholic defence is presented in Frid. Windischmanni vindiciae Petrinae, Ratisb. 1836. If, according to Baur, this tradition proceeded from Judaising Christians at Rome for the purpose of exalting Peter above Paul, we cannot understand how the fabrication did not forthwith meet with a decided contradiction from the adherents of Paul at Rome, nor how Caius, a disciple of Paul, is a leading witness for its truth. Philip spent the last years of his life in Hierapolis in Phrygia, (Polycrates about 190 ap. Euseb. l. c. iii. 31, and v. 24). John also went to Asia Minor, but a great part of his life belongs to the following period. The traditions are ancient respecting Thomas preaching the gospel in Parthia,⁷ Andrew in Scythia, (Origenes ap. Euseb. iii. 1), Bartholomew in India,⁸ (Euseb. v. 10,) and it is reported that John Mark, first the companion of Paul and Barnabas, then of Peter, was the founder of the church in Alexandria (Euseb. ii. 16). The later traditions respecting the apostles, and apostolic men, which have been partly indebted for their origin to the wish of many nations to trace their Christianity up to the apostolic age, are, to say the least, uncertain, and in part so marvellously forged, that they sufficiently prove their own falseness.⁹

licet ut illi episcopatus curam gererent, ipse vero apostolatus impletet officium. Epiphanius also has the correct opinion respecting the episcopate of the apostles, haer. xxvii. 6 : ἐν Πάμῃ γὰρ γεγενῆσσι πρῶτος Πέτρος καὶ Παῦλος οἱ Ἀπόστολοι αὐτοὶ καὶ Ἐπίσκοποι.—Peter is named the first bishop of Antioch, first of all by Chrysostom, hom. xlii. in Ignat. Augustin. ep. liii. ad Generosum and contra lit. Petilian iii. Jerome was the first that knew that he had been twenty-five years bishop of Rome. The tradition of the modern Roman church is most fully developed in Gregor. Cortesii de Romano itinere gestisque principis Apostolorum, libri ii. Vinc. Al. Constantius recensuit, notis illustravit, annales ss. Petri et Pauli et appendicem monumentorum adjecit, Rom. 1770, 8.

⁸ Probably Yemen. Rufinus, h. e. x. 9 : Thomas Parthia, et Mattheo Aethiopia, eique adhaerens exterior India Bartholomæo dicitur sorte decreta. Inter quam Parthiamque Media, sed longo interior tractu India ulterior jacet. So also Philostorgius, h. e. ii. 6, calls the Sabæana, or Homerites, τοὺς ἐπὶ θάλαττῃ Τυβούς.

⁹ Thus the Spaniards pretended that James the elder was seen in their country, (his body is said to be in Compostella since A.D. 816); the French claim Dionysius the Areopagite, Lazarus, Mary Magdalene, and others; the English, Simon Zelotes, and especially Joseph of Arimathea;

RECEPTION OF CHRISTIANITY AMONG JEWS AND GENTILES.

(Comp. § 19.)

Neander's Kirchengesch., 2te Auflage, i. i. 117 ff.

With the Jews, their earthly expectations of the Messiah always presented a special obstacle to Christianity. When the Christians not only took into their society the Samaritans, but when Paul admitted the very heathen into it, without requiring of them circumcision, the fact appeared to the Jews to afford sufficient proof that the confessors of Christ could not be followers of a true Messiah; and Christianity now appeared to them only a form of Judaism profaned by a mutilated impartation of it to the heathen, as is expressed even in the appellation of the Christians, נוצרים which originated, perhaps, somewhat later. On this account Paul and his disciples were most violently hated by the Palestinian Jews, (Gal. v. 11, Rom. xv. 31), who could even spread the report concerning him, that he had introduced heathen into the temple, the uproar arising from which caused his imprisonment, (Acts xx. 27 ff.) Among the Hellenistic Jews Paul found once and again much susceptibility of mind in relation to Christianity, as in Berea (Acts xvii. 11, 12), Ephesus (xviii. 19, 20), and Rome (xxviii. 17). In other places these very Jews were his most dangerous enemies, as in Thessalonica (xvii. 5 ff.) and Corinth (xviii. 12 ff.), partly from the usual national prejudice, and partly also, perhaps, from fear lest the publication of their Messianic hopes might injure them in the eyes of the Romans, (Acts xvii. 6—8).

In addition to the inward power of Christian truth on the human spirit, the miraculous origin of Christianity and the prevailing inclination to foreign superstitions, influenced the heathen in its favour. On the contrary, with the higher classes, and especially the philosophers, (1 Cor. i. 18 ff.), its Jewish origin, the simple form in which it appeared (Acts xvii. 18 ff.), and the doctrine of the resurrection of the body (l. c. 32) hindered its reception. Christianity was looked upon at this time by the heathen only as a Jewish sect,¹ an opinion which from many indeed may have drawn upon it contempt, but which secured for it, notwithstanding, the protection of the civil government (Acts xviii. 12 ff.); for now, the Christian societies, like the Jewish, passed for Sodalitas licita (comp. § 12). The circumstance, that even some heathens were drawn away from their own religion by means of these communities, served indeed to raise complaints against them (Acts xvi. 20 ff. xvii. 18); these, however, were generally overlooked by the Roman magistrates, just as the circumstance of many heathens becoming proselytes of the gate had been formerly passed over, since amid the general inclination to foreign superstitions,² the old religious laws were not strictly enforced. When Claudius, on account of a dispute between the believing and unbelieving Jews at Rome, expelled both parties from the city, this act cannot naturally be reckoned a persecution of the Christians.³ As little were the Christians

² When Tertullian relates that Tiberius wished Christ to be admitted among the Roman deities (Apologeticus, c. 5: detulit ad Senatum cum praerogativa suffragii sui. Senatus quia non ipse probaverat, respuit. Caesar in sententia mansit comminatus periculum accusatoribus Christianorum), this is in contradiction to the Roman spirit, the character of Tiberius (Sueton. Tiber. c. 36: Externas ceremonias, Aegyptios Iudaicosque ritus compescuit, c. 69: Circa deos ac religiones negligentior: quippe addictus mathematicae, plenusque persuasionis, cuncta fato agi), and the historical relations; while the silence of the Roman historian in regard to it would be inexplicable. The less credit is to be given to Tertullian's single testimony, inasmuch as he falsely ascribes to his contemporary Marcus Aurelius, partiality for the Christians, in a passage subsequent to the one in which he speaks of Tiberius. Yet the account is defended by J. W. T. Braun de Tiberii Christum in Deorum numerum referendi consilio comm., Bonnæ 1834, 8.

persecuted on account of their religion by Nero, when, to turn from himself the suspicion of setting fire to the city, he gave up the despised sectaries to all kinds of torture (64).⁴ Probably the Neronian persecution was confined to Rome,⁵ though it appears to have continued with some interruptions till the death of the tyrant (Peter and Paul suffered under him).⁶

⁵ First extended to the provinces also by Orosius, vii. 7, whose opinion gained the assent of many, till H. Dodwell in dissertt. Cyprianicarum (Oxon. 1684, 8.), dissert. xi. de paucitate martyrum, § 13, proved the opposite. Yet Theod. Ruinart in præfat. ad acta Martyr. sincera, § 3, still defended the opinion of Orosius. The inscription pretending to have been found in Spain or Portugal: Neroni ob provinciam latronibus et his qui novam generi humano superstitionem inculcabant, purgatam (Jan. Gruteri inscriptt. T. i. p. 238, n. 9), is spurious, and was forged perhaps by Cyriacus of Ancona. See Ferreras histoire d'Espagne, i. 192. Defended by J. E. J. ⁶ Since the Christians constantly expected Antichrist as the forerunner of Christ to be near at hand, it is not to be wondered at that Nero during his persecution, should appear to them as Antichrist, and that they entertained the opinion, after his death, that he had not actually died, but should soon return again to undertake a final persecution. Hence the Sybilline oracles, iv. 116 (which verses, according to Bleek in Schleiermacher's, De Wette's and Lücke's theol. Zeitschrift, i. 244, were composed about the year 80 A.D.) That the like report among the heathen originated in that sentiment of the Christians, is at once apparent from the form of it, comp. Sueton. Nero, c. 40: Prædictum a mathematicis Neroni olim erat, fore, ut quandoque destitueretur. Sponderant tamen quidam destituto Orientis dominationem, nonnulli nominatim regnum Hierosolymorum. § 29.

INTERNAL DEVELOPMENT OF CHRISTIANITY.

The assembly of the apostles and church at Jerusalem had allowed the Gentile Christians to observe the Mosaic law, but in so doing they had tacitly recognised its binding force on the posterity of Abraham. Since, therefore, on this account the Jewish Christians must have avoided intimate intercourse with the Gentile Christians, for the sake of Levitical purity; and since the one party looked upon James, the Lord's brother, and on Peter, as their leaders, while the other took Paul for their head (Gal. ii. 9), a certain wall of partition necessarily stood between them, and perfect incorporation into one brotherhood was impossible. This must have been first felt in many churches gathered from among Jews and Gentiles by Paul out of Palestine (Gal. ii. 11 ff.). The very circumstance, however, contributed, in no small degree, to lead that apostle to a more spiritual development of Christianity, and one freer from the national prejudices of the Jews.¹ He attained, accordingly, to the inward perception of the truth, that spiritual communion with God by faith in Christ alone constitutes the essence of Christianity. In this conviction, he was not afraid to overstep those rules of the council at Jerusalem in a twofold manner, both by declaring the obligation of the Jews to observe the Mosaic law invalid (Romans vii. 1 ff.; 1 Cor. ix. 20, 21; Gal. ii. 15 ff.), while he regarded that law merely as preparatory to Christ (Gal. iii. 24); and also by denying the absolute binding force of the laws regarding food given to the Gentile Christians (1 Cor. viii. 10, 23, ff.), while, with reference to all such external institutes he merely required some regard for the consciences of weaker brethren, and practised himself such forbearance (1 Cor. viii. 9 ff.; x. 32; Acts xxi. 26). The other national prejudice of the Jewish Christians, viz. carnal millennarianism, likewise disappeared from his mind along with an overweening estimate of the Mosaic law. He thought, indeed, of the return of Jesus as near at hand (Phil. iv. 5), but he expected the triumph of God's kingdom in a state above the earthly (1 Thess. iv. 16, 17; 2 Cor. v. 1, 2). Christ himself was conceived of by Paul, who had seen him in the clouds of heaven, more in his spiritual and divine aspect; while the Jewish apostles, in consequence of the personal intercourse with him which they had enjoyed, dwelt more on his human appearance.

The Palestinian Christians might have overlooked the new development of doctrine, inasmuch as they had been accustomed to much more important doctrinal differences springing out of Judaism, without forfeiting the privileges of ecclesiastical fellowship. On the other hand, they attributed to Paul's loose view of the law, by which he drew away so many Jews from the observance of its precepts, in the Gentile-Christian churches, so much the greater mischief, because the other apostles conformed to the stricter view (Acts xxi. 20 ff.). Nor, on the other side, could the Palestinian appear to the Pauline Christians in any other light than as obtuse, because they had not long ago penetrated into the essence of Christianity (Heb. v. 11, 12).

The difference between these two parties is still more strongly manifested, in the aberrations into which they respectively fell from the positions they had assumed. Among the Jewish Christians,² a party always continued, who asserted the absolutely binding nature of the Mosaic law in relation to the Gentiles. By this means many belonging to Gentile-Christian churches were led astray, so that Paul felt the necessity of combating the error (Ep. to the Galatians; Phil. iii. 2). And when persecutions befel the Christians in Palestine, shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem, many of them were on the point of falling away entirely from Christianity (Hebrews vi. 4. ff.; x. 25 ff.),³ having been rendered impatient, partly by the long-continued disappointment of their millennarian expectations, partly because they could not decide upon a complete separation from Judaism, which now appeared necessary.

Among the Gentile Christians, on the contrary, philosophy

early began to mingle itself with Christianity. Thus much we know, that Apollos, a cultivated Alexandrian Jew, was the first who looked at Christianity from a more speculative point of view, and first preached it in this form with great eloquence at Corinth.⁴ Little as he desired to appear in an antagonist position to Paul, the latter declined in reputation, notwithstanding, among many of the Corinthians, and divisions arose in the church (1 Cor. 1—4).⁵ Paul wishes to leave it to time to discover the value of such a philosophical system erected on the foundation of Christian faith (1 Cor. iii. 11 ff.); but he blames the divisions occasioned by it, agreeably to his manner of inculcating toleration even in regard to errors, provided they be not practically scandalous or claim for themselves exclusive adoption (Rom. xiv. 1 ff.). Afterwards, however, there appeared among the Gentile Christians actual errors, and those too of an important moral bearing, which Paul was obliged to combat with all his might.

The Christians considered themselves, in opposition to the rest of the world (ὁ κόσμος, ὁ αἰὼν οὗτος, under the κοσμοκράτωρ, Eph. vi. 12, the θεὸς τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου 2 Cor. iv. 4) hastening in their perversity to destruction, a chosen people dedicated to God, ἁγιοί, ἐκλεκτοί, κλητοί. In these appellations there was no claim to moral perfection, but a remembrance of their high calling in Christ. Though it is certain that Christianity in its first beginning imparted spiritual enlightenment to many of its adherents, and transformed them in a moral view, yet it could so much the less purify them all from the imperfections of the education belonging to their nation and time, because it is certain that many of them had been led to embrace it by superstitious, or other interested motives.⁷ This explains the reason why Paul found that he had

But, after a philosophical treatment of Christianity had procured friends to the Gentile Christians in many churches, the superstitious philosophy of the times also speedily crept in among the Christians, first of all, as it would appear, in Asia Minor, and threatened morality with still greater danger by recommending chimerical, mysterious doctrines, and an arbitrary asceticism, as the true mode of purifying the soul. As the names of sects were usually formed after the name of the founder, the fathers thought of Nicolaus, Acts vi. 5, who, according to Irenaeus, i. 26. iii. 11, and Tertullian de praescr. haer. c. 46, is said to have been the founder of the party; but according to Clemens Alex. Strom. ii. p. 490, iii. p. 522, he was merely the unconscious cause of the appellation on account of his words which were misunderstood by others, ὅτι παραχρήσασθαι τῇ σαρκὶ θεῖ. (παραχρᾶσθαι is, 1. to abuse, used particularly, according to Suidas de concubitu immodico; 2. equiv. to διαχρᾶσθαι, to put to death, as Justin. apol. mag. c. 49.)

Jewish-heathen asceticism with a peculiar philosophy, Paul had first to warn the Colossians (Col. ii. 8, 16, ff.).⁹ The same tendency spread itself as far as Ephesus, where it manifested itself in high-flying speculations, in prohibitions of marriage and meats (1 Tim. i. 5—7; iv. 3, 7; vi. 20), and manifestly contributed to the immorality of that place (2 Tim. iii. 6). The attempt, also, of Hymeneus and Philetus to explain spiritually (2 Tim. ii. 18) the doctrine of the resurrection of the body, so offensive to the heathen (1 Thessal. iv. 13 ff.; 1 Cor. xv. 12, 35, ff.), an attempt that proceeded from the same tendency, was not destitute of a moral influence at this time, when the doctrine was most intimately connected with that of retribution.¹⁰ That Paul did not reject philosophy as such, he has proved in his conduct towards Apollos; the philosophy against which he warns his readers (Col. ii. 8) is that science, falsely so called (1 Tim. vi. 20), which, as Paul had before judged, became now, for the first time, the source of still greater errors, of the later gnostic revelations (2 Tim. iii. 1 ff.).¹¹

In strong relief to these defects of the time, the brotherly love the benevolence (2 Cor. viii. 1 ff.; Heb. vi. 10; xiii. 1 ff.), the patient endurance of the hostility of the unbelieving (Phil. i. 29; 1 Thess. i. 6; ii. 14; 2 Thess. i. 4 ff.; Heb. x. 32 ff.), and the holy zeal for Christianity, form the bright part of the picture presented by the first Christians. CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH.

¹ That both appellations are the same follows from Acts xx. 17, 28; Tit. i. 5, 7; Phil. i. 1; 1 Tim. iii. 1, 8. Acknowledged by Hieronymus Epist. 82, (al. 83) ad Oceanum: apud veteres iidem episcopi et presbyteri, quia illud nomen dignitatis est, hoc ætatis. Epist. 101, ad Evangelium, see below § 34, not. 2.—Idem ad Tit. i. 7. Idem est ergo presbyter, qui episcopus: et antequam diaboli instinctu studia in religione fierent, et diceretur in populis: ego sum Pauli, ego Apollo, ego autem Cephae, communi presbyterorum consilio ecclesiae gubernabantur. Postquam vero unusquisque eos, quos baptizaverat, suos putabat esse, non Christi; in toto orbe decretum est, ut unus de presbyteris electus superponeretur caeteris, ad quem omnes ecclesiae cura pertineret, et schismatum semina tollerentur. Putat aliquis non scripturarum, sed nostram esse sententiam, episcopum et presbyterum unum esse, et aliud ætatis, aliud esse nomen officii: relegat apostoli ad Philippenses verba, dicentis. Here follow the above cited passages; then: Haec propterea, ut ostenderemus, apud veteres eisdem fuisse presbyteros, quos et episcopos: paulatim vero ut dissensionum plantaria evellerentur, ad unum omnem sollicitudinem esse delatam. Sicut ergo presbyteri sciunt, se ex ecclesiae consuetudine ei, qui sibi praepositus fuerit, esse subjectos: ita episcopi noverint se magis consuetudine, quam dispositionis dominicae veritate, presbyteris esse majores, et in commune debere ecclesiam regere. Philipp. i. 1. It is remarkable how long afterwards persons maintained this view of the original identity of bishops and presbyters. Isidorus Hispal. etymol. vii. c. 12, transcribes that passage from Hieron. epist. ad Oceanum. Bernaldus Constantiensis (about 1088) the most zealous defender of Gregory VII. appeals on this subject in his de presbyterorum officio tract. (in monumentorum res Allemannorum illustrant. S. Blas. 1792, 4. T. ii. p. 384 ss.) to the New Testament and Jerome, and then continues: Quum igitur presbyteri et episcopi antiquitus idem fuisse legantur, etiam eandem ligandi atque solvendi potestatem et alia nunc episcopis specialia habuisse non dubitantur. Postquam autem presbyteri ab episcopali excellentia cohibiti sunt, coepit eis non licere, quod licuit, videlicet quod ecclesiastica auctoritas solis pontificibus exequendum delegavit. Even a pope, Urbanus II., in Conc. Benevent. ann. 1091, can. 1: Sacros autem ordines dicimus diaconatum et presbyteratum. Hos siquidem solos primitiva legitur ecclesia habuisse: super his solum praeceptum habemus apostoli (pretty nearly the same words are found in Petri Lomb. sentent. lib. iv. dist. 24, c. 8). Hence even Gratian receives the above passages of Jerome ad Tit. i. (dist. xcv. c. 5), epist. ad Evangel. (dist. xciii. c. 24) u. Isidori Hisp. (dist. xxi. c. 1) without scruple. The same view is maintained by the Glossa ad Gratiani decret. dist. xciii. c. 24, Cardinalis S. Marci at the Costntr Concilium 1414 (v. d. Hardt. Conc. Const. ii. 228), Nicolaus Tudeschus, archiep. Panormitanus (about 1428) super prima parte Primi, cap. 5 (ed. Lugdun. 1547, fol. 112, b.: olim Presbyteri in commune regebant ecclesiam et ordinabant sacerdotes), Nicolaus Cusanus (about 1435) de concordantia cath. lib. iii. c. 2, (in Schardii syntagma tractatum, p. 358), where he remarks, in opposition to the genuineness of the Pseudo-Isidore letters of Clement: Invenitur insuper in ipsis epistolis de episcoporum a sacerdotibus differentia, quae longo tempore post hoc, ut Hieronymo placet et Damaso, in ecclesia orta est. Even the papal canonist Jo. Paul Lancelottus, in his Institut. juris canon. lib. i. Tit. 21, § 3, unfolds the same view (1563) with a sunt, qui affirmant, without adding anything in refutation of it. Since no value was set, during the middle ages, on the distinction between the institutio divina and ecclesiastica, a distinction on which modern Catholics insist, ecclesiastical practice could not disturb that view. But after the Council of Trent, sess. xxiii. (45th July 1563) cap. 4, had declared, episcopos, qui in apostolorum locum successerunt,—positos—a spiritu sancto, regere ecclesiam Dei, eosque presbyteris superiores esse, etc. the old view became suspicious, although the council did not expressly or definitely maintain the institutio divina. Michael de Medina (about 1570) de orig. sacr. homin. did not hesitate to declare, illos patres materiales fuisse haereticos, sed in his patribus ob eorum reverentiam hoc dogma non esse damnatum. But Bellarmin de clericis, lib. i. c. 15, calls this sententia valde inconsideratam, and would rather resort to the expedient of an interpretation. Although, afterwards, among Catholic theologians Edmundus Richerius (defensio libelli de eccles. et polit. potest. T. ii. p. 52 ss.) defended the view of Jerome, and John Morin (de sacris ecclesiae ordinationibus, p. iii. Exerc. iii. c. 3) asserted, that the opinion was at least not heretical, episcopos authority over the others.* Under the superintendence of these elders were the deacons and deaconesses (Rom. xvi. 1; 1 Tim. v. 9, 10).³ All these officers received their support, in so far as they needed, as well as the poor, from the free will contributions of the church (1 Tim. v. 17; 1 Cor. ix. 13). The duty of teaching as an office was by no means incumbent on the elders,⁴ although the apostle wishes that they should be διδασκαλοί, apt to teach (1 Tim. iii. 2; 2 Tim. ii. 24). The capacity for instructing and edifying in the assemblies was rather considered as a free gift of the Spirit (χάρισμα πνευματικόν), which manifested itself in many Christians, although in different modes (προφήτης—διδάσκαλος—γλώσση λαλῶν, 1 Cor. xii. 28—31, c. 14). Still less was a distinct priestly order known at this time; for the whole society of Christians formed a royal priesthood (βασιλεὺς ιερᾶν, 1 Peter ii. 9), God's peculiar people (κλήρος ἡλῆν, 1 Peter v. 3; cf. Deut.

non jure divino esse presbyteris superiores; yet, since the Tridentine council, the institutio divina of episcopacy and its original distinction from presbyteratus became the general doctrine of the Catholic church, which the English Episcopalians also followed in this particular, while the other Protestant churches returned to the most ancient doctrine and regulation on the subject. The first leading works in favour of the modern Catholic view are Petavii de ecclesiastica hierarchia, libb. v. and dissertatt. theologic. lib. i. in his theolog. dogmat. tom. iv. p. 164. The controversy was still continued; on the side of the Episcopalians by Jo. Pearson, William Beveridge, Henr. Dodwell, Jos. Bingham, Jac. Usserius. The view of the Presbyterians was defended by Jo. Theol. ii. 2, 54), thinks that these churches in houses, belonging to one town, were established by different teachers, and without a common government. Baur (Pastoral-briefe s. 78 ff.) infers from Titus i. 5, that every church had but one elder, and that where several elders are represented as being in one city, each governed independently a particular church. The analogy of the synagogue, however, is in favour of the plurality of elders in a church; for the connection of the elders of one city into a college, and, consequently, of the churches in houses into one church, (even if every house-church, as every synagogue, had its particular elders), those passages speak in which the collected elders of one city appear and act as a united whole. ing meal (ἀγάπη, 1 Cor. xvi. 20).⁸ The kiss of charity was customary, the token of brotherly love in the assemblies (φίλημα ἀγάπης, φίλημα ἀγίου, Rom. xvi. 16; 1 Pet. v. 14). The other regulations of the churches were left free to each society, innocent national customs being observed (1 Cor. xi. 4); and therefore they differed in separate communities. While the Jewish Christians of Palestine retained the entire Mosaic law, and consequently the Jewish festivals, the Gentile Christians observed also the sabbath and the passover (1 Cor. v. 6—8), with reference to the last scenes of Jesus's life, but without Jewish superstition (Gal. iv. 10; Col. ii. 16). In addition to these, Sunday, as the day of Christ's resurrection (Acts xx. 7; 1 Cor. xvi. 2.—Apoc. i. 10. *ἡ κυριακὴ ἡμέρα*⁹), was devoted to religious services. All bodily asceticism was valued only as a means of virtue, and left to the free discretion of individuals. Thus, fasting was looked upon as a suitable preparation for prayer (Acts xiii. 2, 3; xiv. 23); celibacy was regarded by Paul desirable on account of the distressing times impending (1 Cor. vii. 26); but this very apostle requires that all these abstinences should be left to the free choice of every one (Romans xiv. 17; 1 Cor. viii. 7; 1 Tim. iv. 3).—Immoral members were excluded from the church (1 Cor. v. 2—3), repentance and improvement forming the conditions of restoration (2 Cor. ii. 5—8).

The idea set forth by Christ of the union of his people with himself, and with one another in one joint body (John x. 16; xv. 1 ff.), was kept alive by the apostles (σῶμα τοῦ Χριστοῦ. Romans xii. 5; 1 Cor. x. 17; xii. 13; Ephes. ii. 16; iv. 4; xii.; xvi.; Col. iii. 15. ἐκκλησία, Acts ix. 31; xx. 28; 1 Cor. x. 32; xii. 28; Ephes. iii. 10).¹⁰ This unity did not, indeed, obtain, for a long time, the corresponding external form; but it had an external opposition in the unbelieving, and an external centre-point in the apostles,¹¹ who exercised a general survey over all the churches (2 Cor. xi. 28), and were co-overseers in every single church (συμπρεσβύτεροι 1 Peter v. 1). of their activity by the separation into apostles of the Jews and of the Gentiles (Gal. ii. 7—9); so, again, did each one find in the churches he had himself founded, his narrower field of labour (Romans xv. 20), without, however, being prevented by this circumstance from being zealous for Christianity in other churches also. The first arrangement in the newly planted churches, even the appointment of elders in them, was made by the apostles themselves (Acts xiv. 23.) Afterwards, the officers belonging to societies of Christians were nominated by elders with the consent of the churches.¹² In the newly established churches, Paul was accustomed to transfer the first arrangement and superintendence to one of his assistants (Acts xvii. 14; 1 Tim. i. 3 ff.; Titus i. 5 ff.), who then had a routine of duties similar to those of the later bishops, though not bound to any particular church.¹³ They belonged rather to the class of teachers who, without being confined to one place, preached the gospel as opportunity offered (εὐαγγελισταί 2 Tim. iv. 5). James, the Lord's brother, occupied a peculiar position. He stood in Jerusalem, where he continued to reside, at the head of the church, in equal esteem with the apostles, and with extensive influence and reputation, quite in the relation of a later bishop, but without the appellation.¹⁴

TIME OF THE JEWISH DISTURBANCES.

The Jewish expectations of the Messiah had constantly been most lively under the oppression of foreign rulers, and had expressed themselves among the Palestinian Jews in one of the old Hebrew prophecies. But they had given themselves expression also by Apocalyptic visions of exceeding definiteness and richness in imagery, viz. *the book of Daniel*¹ under Antiochus Epiphanes;

It was written by a Jew, but interpolated by a Christian hand. From the latter proceed cap. i. ii. xv. and xvi. entirely.

⁴ After the genuine Sybillines had been burnt along with the capitol 74 B.C., and persons began to collect new sybillines, they sprang up in so great numbers that the loss in the capitol was not only replaced very soon, but Augustus could even cause such writings to be deposited in heathen for their people and their fortunes. The more the Christians were inclined to see the beginning of the end in the oppressions of that time, the easier access to them did such writings obtain, and the more readily were they imitated (first Christian sybillines).⁵

When Jewish fanaticism pressed severely on the Christians of Jerusalem immediately before its destruction, and even James, the Lord's brother (69 A.D.), fell a sacrifice to it;⁶ the most of the temple of Apollo on the Palatine, (Sueton. Aug. c. 31). Although at that time the possession of all soothsaying books was forbidden, yet numerous sybilline predictions were constantly circulated among the people, (Tacit. Ann. vi. 12). The first certain trace of Jewish sybillines is to be found in Joseph. Ant. i. 4, 3, (cf. orac. Sybill. iii. 35). The sybillines now extant (Sybillinorum oraculorum libb. viii. ed. Jo. Opsopoeus. Maji scriptorum vett. nova collectio, T. iii. p. 3. Romae 1828, 4.) were usually before this time assigned to the second century, and to the Montanists; by many (Cassaubon, Scaliger, Blondel) to Montanus himself. Huet conjectured their authors to be the Gnostics; Cave, Alexandrian Christians; Semler, Tertullian. Grotius regarded them as Jewish productions, afterwards interpolated by Christians. G. J. Vossius, however, perceived that they proceeded from several authors at different times. Birger Thorlacius (libri Sybillistarum veteris ecclesiae crisi, quatenus monumenta christiana sunt, subjecti, Hann. 1815, 8, and conspectus doct. christ. qualis in Sibyllistarum libris continetur, 1816, also in F. Münter miscellanea Hafniensia 1, i. 113) assumed that they had been for the greater part composed between 100 and 170 A.D., in Phrygia,—some of them, too, by Alexandrians. According to Bleek, (über die Entstehung u. Zusammensetzung d. sib. Or. in Schleiermacher's, De Wette's u. Lücke's theol. Zeitschrift i. 120, and ii. 172) the oldest of them are Jewish oracles belonging to the second century before Christ; the youngest, Christian oracles of the fifth century after Christ. The greatest part of the third book, and several sections in the fifth, (l. c. i. 198, ii. 182, 194), proceed from Alexandrian Jews. Gfrörer (Philo ii. 121) agrees with him in this opinion, and points out Jewish-Alexandrian dogmas in these sections.

the members of the church fled to Pella.⁷ About this time also John repaired to Asia Minor, and there, full of the impressions which he had taken along with him from Palestine, and perceiving in these oppressions the beginning of the last events, wrote the Apocalypse (69 A.D.)⁸ This was the commencing point of a rich apocalyptic literature among the Christians.

of high priest." Le Clerc, however, art. crit. ii. 223. Lardner Suppl. vol. iii. cap. 16, sect. 5, and Credner (Einl. u. d. N. T. i. ii. 581) regard, on important grounds, the bracketed words as spurious. On the other hand, Hegesippus, in Euseb. ii. 23, according to the passage given in a preceding note (4, § 26), narrates the death of James in this manner: "By his preaching he had gained over many of the people to Christ, and stood generally in the highest repute as the righteous one. Hence the scribes and Pharisees demanded of him a solemn denial of Christ: ἐστῆσαν οὖν τὸν Ἰάκωβον ἐπὶ τὸ πτερύγιον τοῦ ναοῦ, καὶ ἔκραζαν αὐτῷ καὶ εἶπον· δίκαιε, ὃ πάντες πείθεσθαι ὀφείλομεν, ἐπεὶ ὁ λαὸς πλανᾶται ὀπίσω Ἰησοῦ τοῦ σταυρωθέντος, ἀπαγγεῖλον ἡμῖν, τίς ἡ θύρα Ἰησοῦ τοῦ σταυρωθέντος. (θύρα as in Rabbinic γῆ estimate, value. In opposition to Josephus, who places the death of James in the year 63, there agree with the designation of time by Hegesippus, agreeably to which the siege of Jerusalem took place immediately after James's death, Eusebius iii. 11, (Symeon was chosen successor to James, μετὰ τὴν Ἰακώβου μαρτυρίαν καὶ τὴν αὐτίκα γενομένην ἀλωσιν τῆς Ἱερουσαλὴμ), although in his Chronicle he places the death of James and the inauguration of Symeon after Josephus, in the seventh of Nero; the Clementines (so far the Ep. § 32.

FATE OF THE JEWISH CHRISTIANS IN PALESTINE.

Although a Jewish-Christian church soon formed itself among the ruins of Jerusalem,¹ and again selected a relative of Jesus, Symeon,² to be its head; yet, after the judgment which had befallen Judaism³—this church could no longer continue to

so. Had the book been forged in his name thirty years before his death, he would certainly have contradicted it, and this contradiction would have reached us through Irenaeus from the school of John's disciples. On the contrary, the later contradictions of the apostolic origin proceed from doctrinal prepossessions alone. The internal difference in language and mode of thought between the Apocalypse, which John, whose education was essentially Hebrew, and his Christianity Jewish-Christian of the Palestinian character, wrote, and the Gospel and Epistles which he had composed after an abode of from twenty to thirty years among the Greeks, is a necessary consequence of the different relations in which the writer was placed, so that the opposite would excite suspicion. There is much at the same time that is cognate, proving continuousness of cultivation in the same author. Comp. F. Lücke Versuch einer vollständigen Einleitung in die Offenbarung Johannis, und in die gesammte apokalyptische Literatur. Bonn. 1832, 8vo.

¹ Epiphanius de mensuris et ponderibus, c. 15. According to c. 14, the small Christian church on Mount Zion was among the few buildings that were spared.

² Euseb. iii. 11. See § 31, note 6. Hegesippus apud Euseb. iv. 22: Καὶ μετὰ τὸ μαρτυρῆσαι Ἰάκωβον τὸν δίκαιον—πάλιν δ' ἐκ θείου αὐτοῦ Συμεὼν δὲ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ καθίσταται ἐπίσκοπος· ὃν προέθετο πᾶντες, ὅτι ἀνεψιὸν τοῦ Κυρίου, δεύτερον. Clopas, the father of Symeon, was, according to Hegesippus in Euseb. iii. 11, a brother of Joseph. (Sophron. in app. ad Hieronymi catal. § 6, represents this Symeon as Judas, the brother of James, and moreover the apostle Simon Zelotes. In opposition to this, see Sam. Basnage annales politico-ecclesiastici ad. ann. 31, no. 72.) These Jewish Christians generally preferred to choose relatives of our Lord as presidents of their churches. So Hegesippus relates (in Euseb. iii. 20) that the grandchildren of Judas, a brother of Christ, after they had been set free by Domitian, ἡγήσασθαι τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν, ὡς ἂν δι' ἡμῶν ἀποδοῦναι καὶ ἀπὸ γένους ὅσους τοῦ Κυρίου.

³ The feeling of this is plainly expressed in the writings of this period. Barnabae Epist. c. 9: ἡ περιτομή, ἐφ' ᾗ πεποιθασί, καθήργηται, be a model mother-church, and the centre of Christendom. We have a proof that these Christians were continually hated by the Jews, in the composition of the work called תקנות חכמים,⁴ and in the crucifixion of Symeon at the age of 120 (107).⁵ After the death of this man, there also arose an internal division among them. An opposition in the church, which had existed since the apostolic council at Jerusalem, (Acts xv.), but had been hitherto restrained, now broke out openly (Thebuthis);⁶ and from even for the Jews. The law of Moses had only a typical meaning, particularly the laws regarding meats (c. 10); the Jews are not heirs of the promises, but the Christians (c. 13, 14); the Jewish Sabbaths are not agreeable to the Lord, but Sundays are (c. 15); in place of the destroyed Jewish temple appears a spiritual temple (c. 16).

⁴ Samuel, the little, is said to have composed it at the instigation of R. Gamaliel in Jafne, where the Sanhedrim met after the destruction of Jerusalem (Talmud. Hierosol. et Babylon. in tract. Berachoth.) Hence this Gamaliel cannot be the older Gamaliel, but his grandson. Cf. Vitringa de synagog. vet. p. 1047. Respecting the name חכמים, see Fulleri miscellan. theologic. lib. ii. c. 3. G. E. Edzardus in not. ad Avoda Sara, p. 253 ss. ⁵ Hegesippus in Eusebii, h. e. iii. 32: ἀπὸ τούτων τῶν αἰρετικῶν κατηγοροῦσιν οἱ τῆς Συμεῶνος τοῦ Κλωπᾶ, ὡς ὄντος ἀπὸ Λαβίδ καὶ Χριστιανοῦ. These heretics can only have been the adherents of the seven Jewish αἵρέσεις, of which Hegesippus in Euseb. ii. 23, and iv. 22, speaks. In the chronographia of Jo. Malala (about 600—ed. Oxon. 1691, 8vo. p. 356) is the following Relatio Tiberiani, or relation of Tiberianus, a president of Palestine, communicated to Trajan, which, if it be genuine, must belong to this time: 'Ἀπέκαμον τιμωρούμενος καὶ φωνεῶν τοὺς Γαλιλαίους, τοὺς τοῦ δόγματος τῶν λεγομένων Χριστιανῶν, κατὰ τὰ ὑμέτερα θεοπλάσματα· καὶ οὐ παύονται ἐαυτοὺς μνηύοντες εἰς τὸ ἀναρτίσθαι. ὅθεν ἐκόπλισα τούτους παραυῶν καὶ ἀπειλῶν, μὴ τολμᾶν αὐτοὺς μνηῖν μοι ὑπάρχοντας ἐκ τοῦ προειρημένου δόγματος· καὶ ἀποδιωκόμενοι οὐ παύονται. Θεοπίσαι μοι οὖν καταξίωσατε τὰ παρίστανενα τῷ ὑμετέρῳ κράτει τροπαιοδχοί. But Dodwell dissertt. Cypr. diss. xi. § 23, and Tillemont, note 2, sur la persécution de Trajan, (in the Mémoires ed. Bruxelles, 8. tom. ii. p. ii. p. 433 s.) have sufficiently proved the spuriousness of this relation.

⁶ Hegesippus, in Eusebius iii. 32, says that the church enjoyed a profound peace till the death of Symeon, till the time of Trajan, and continued to be παρθένος καθαρὰ καὶ ἀδιφθορος. When he designates Thebuthis as the person who corrupted it (Euseb. iv. 22), the connection does not render it necessary to understand the death of James as the

the Nazareans⁷ who remained steadfast in the apostolic faith, a party separated which held the Mosaic law to be binding in all cases, and Jesus to be the son of Joseph and Mary. To them the name Ebionites was afterwards for the most part applied; an appellation originally given by the Jews, in derision, to the Christians generally.⁸ A new party also arose among the Jewish point of time at which Thebuthis appeared; and we must therefore refer to the point of time which was before announced in obvious terms. Least of all can the opinion of Schliemann (Clementinen, S. 460) be justified, according to which, iv. 22 should be understood of the first beginnings of heretical views immediately after the death of James; iii. 32 of the open breaking out of these heresies in the second century. The influence of a Thebuthis, because he was not a bishop, can only have been an open opposition. The first beginnings of heretical views among the Jewish Christians are to be found long before the death of James in the opponents of Paul. It is still more remarkable that Schliemann, p. 448 f. did not farther consider this point of time given by Hegesippus as that in which the sects arose, but places the separation of the Ebionites from the Nazaraeans in the year 136. Comp. my treatise on the Nazaraeans and Ebionites in Stäudlin's and Tzschirner's Archiv. iv. ii. 320. Θεβουθίς, according to Credner (Einl. in d. N. ⁷ Comp. Epiphanius haer. 29. According to c. 7, they lived at the time of Epiphanius, towards the end of the fourth century, in Beroea, in Syria, in Coele-Syria, in Decapolis about Pella, and in Cocabe in Basanitis (now a village, Cocab, between Damascus and Nablus, nearer the latter. See Burckhardt's travels, German edition, edited by Gesenius, p. 591).

V. 61, οἱ διττοὶ Ἐβιωναῖοι, ἧτοι ἐκ παρθένου ὁμολογούντες ὁμοίως ἡμῶν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ἢ οὐχ οὕτω γεγενῆσθαι, ἀλλ' ὡς τοὺς λοιποὺς ἀνθρώπους. C. 65, Ἐβιωναῖοι ἀμφότεροι. These two classes cannot, as Schliemann supposes, be the Gnostic and the common Ebionites. He has himself shown, p. 207, that the former could not think of a birth of Christ by a virgin; Origen also calls them Elcesaites; see below, note 10. They are the Nazaraeans and Ebionites whom even Eusebius, h. e. iii. 27, groups together under the common appellation Ebionites, and at the same time obviously draws a distinction between them. The Ebionites, in a stricter sense, arose, according to Epiphanius haer. xxx. 2, at Cocabe, and lived in his day (l. c. c. 18), in Nabathea, Paneas, Moabitis, and Cocabe. Respecting their adherents in Asia Minor, Rome, and Cyprus, of which he also speaks, see below, note 10. Schliemann's die Clementinen nebst den Verwandten Schriften, und der Ebionitismus, Hamburg, 1844. According to Epiphanius the Ἐσσηνοί (haer. x.) lived in Samaria; on the other hand, the Ὀσσηνοί (haer. xix.) in Nabathea, Iturea, Moabitis, and Areilithis. Hence he takes the former as a Samaritan, the latter as a Jewish sect. Doubtless the names were different merely by provincial pronunciation. The Essenes had withdrawn into these districts during the Jewish wars, in order to avoid the importunity of the Jews insisting on their carrying arms along with them. To the Ossenea, i.e. the Essenes living to the east of the Dead Sea, Ἠλζαί, Ἠλζαίος attached himself in the reign of Trajan (Epiphan. haer. xix. 1); and remains of the party which he modified were still existing in the time of Epiphanius as a Christian sect, under the name of Ζαυβαίος, living in Nabathea and Moabitis (l. c. c. 2), also in Iturea. They were also called Ἐλκεσαίος (haer. liii. 1); and by Origen (in Euseb. h. e. vi. 38) Ἐλκεσαίται. That Elxai also attached himself to the Ebionites, and a part of them followed him (Epiphan. haer. xxx. 3). Epiphanius professes even to have read the prophetic book left by Elxai (haer. xix. 1, 3); and he had heard besides of another writing, belonging to a brother of Elxai (haer. liii. 3) called Ἰεζέρος (haer. xix. 1). The name Ἠλζαί signified, according to his followers, δύναμις κεκαλυμμένη, from הָלַל and מָכַף (haer. xix. 2). Modern writers have conjectured that this name first originated from the name of the party, and have declared the name Elcesaites equivalent to מְכַפֵּי הַכֹּחַ (from כָּחַשׁ, to deny), apostate. Baumgarten's Geschich. der Religionsparteien. p. 271; from שֵׁן אֶל Nitzsch de Testamentis

xii. patriarcharum, p. 5. According to Scaliger, Ἠλζαί מִן הַכֹּחַ Ἐσσηνός (Petavii comm. ad Epiphan. haer. xix.) According to Delitzsch (in Rudelbach's and Guericke's Zeitschrift, 1841, i. 43), the Elcesaites derived their name from the town Elcesi, in Galilee. I believe that הָלַל קָדְשׁ is an appellation of the Spirit of God which made the true prophet, and which is also called in the Clementine's hom. xvii. 16, δύναμις ἀσφαρκος. The Elcesaites praised this secret power as their teacher; hence arose the error of Epiphanius. If the title of the work which he possessed was $\varphi\alpha\lambda\eta$, and he heard of another $\varphi\alpha\lambda\eta$; the latter treating of the concealed deity as the former did of his concealed power, he may have made out of this two brothers. That this development proceeded from a confounding of the Essenes with Jewish Christians is shown by Credner l. c. p. 312. When Schliemann denies this, because the similarity of the Essene creed to the Elcesaites cannot be demonstrated, he forgets that the former is completely unknown to us, since it was guarded as a mysterious doctrine under the sanction of an oath, a thing which the Elcesaites had also to do (Credner's Beiträge zur Einl. in d. bibl. Schriften, i. 369). When Schliemann, on the other hand, designates this tendency as Gnostic Ebionitism, no objection can be made to the assertion, if Gnosis be taken as synonymous with theosophy generally. In this sense the Essenes, too, were Gnostics. But that theosophy which is in historical possession of the name Gnosis was opposed by the Elcesaites, as Schliemann, p. 539, himself shows. When, moreover, this same writer refers to the incorporation of the old oriental elements into Judaism, in order to explain Gnostic Ebionitism, and quotes Neander, he lays claim to the same source for it as that from which Neander derives Essenism (see above § 15. note 9). Regarding the name of the party, I do not believe with Credner (Beiträge, S. 367) that Ossenes, Sampsaeans, and Elcesaites were the names of the three highest classes of the Essenes. The Ossenes were the Essenes east of the Dead Sea, who by degrees became Christians. These Essene Christians were styled Elcesaites from the $\varphi\alpha\lambda\eta$, which they confessed; Sampsaeans (Epiph. haer. liii. 2. Σαμψαῖοι ἐρμηνεύοντι Ἑλιακοὶ from $\epsilon\lambda\eta\psi\epsilon$), probably because they turned while praying towards the rising sun, as did the Essenes. The name Ebionites which was given to them, if we may rely on the authority of Epiphanius, is with him the general appellation for all heretical Jewish Christians, and is therefore least of all adapted for a strict description.

¹⁰ See below § 58. From this time onward the party appears to have obtained adherents in Asia Minor, Rome, and Cyprus. Hence Origen, in Euseb. h. c. vi. 38, distinguishes the αἵρεσις τῶν Ἑλκεσαϊτῶν as νέωσι ἐπανοσταμένην. On the other hand, it is very doubtful whether the doctrine of this party be represented in its pure unadulterated form in the Clementines.

EXTERNAL FORTUNES OF THE CHRISTIANS IN THE OTHER PROVINCES OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE.

After the destruction of Jerusalem, the heathen Christians were everywhere so numerous that it was no longer possible to mistake the distinction between Christianity and Judaism. Still, however, the Christians were looked upon as a Jewish sect.¹ All the prejudices entertained against the Jews, and the hatred of the heathen which had been strengthened against them since their rebellion, were transferred in like manner to the Christians. At the same time Christianity appeared far more dangerous than Judaism, inasmuch as it was not confined, like it, to one people, but propagated itself everywhere with immense rapidity.² Yet the persecutions which the Christians had to suffer from individual emperors, were only partial. Vespasian (70—79) did not at all persecute the Christians as such; although they may have been harassed under his reign and that of Titus his successor, (79—81), by the demand of the tax imposed on every Jew. This was still more the case under Domitian, (81—96),³

Auctor nominis ejus Christus, Tiberio imperitante, per procuratorem Pontium Pilatum supplicio affectus erat. Repressaque in praesens exitiabilis superstitio rursus erumpebat non modo per Judaeam, originem ejus mali, sed per Urbem etiam, quo cuncta undique atrocia aut pudenda confluunt celebranturque. who caused some Christians to be put to death even in Rome,⁴ and search to be made in Palestine for the posterity of David.⁵ Under Nerva (96—98), all these provocations ceased.⁶ At the time of Trajan (98—117), appear the first traces of that popular rage against them to which, in succeeding times, so many must frequently have fallen sacrifices (Eusebius iii. 32). Pliny the younger, governor of Bithynia, where the number of Christians had unusually increased, applied against them the general laws which had been lately revived by Trajan against forbidden societies (hetaeriae), which were really dangerous, (cf. Plin. epist. x. 42, 43; 110 or 111 A.D.) He adopted that course because no special laws had been enacted with regard to them. His account of the Christians addressed to Trajan, which is of the highest importance towards understanding their condition at that period, led to the first legal enactment relative to the course which should be adopted,⁷ to which among

Quis enim potest melius vel cunctationem meam regere, vel ignorantiam instruere? Cognitionibus de Christianis interfui nunquam: ideo nescio, quid et quatenus aut puniri soleat, aut quaeri. Nec mediocriter haesitavi, sitne aliquod discrimen aetatum, an quamlibet teneri nihil a robustioribus differant: deturne poenitentiae venia, an ei, qui omnino Christianus fuit, desisse non prosit: nomen ipsum, si flagitiis careat, an flagitia cohaeren-

tia nomini puniantur. Interim in iis, qui ad me tanquam Christiani deferebantur, hunc sum secutus modum. Interrogavi ipsos, an essent Christiani: confitentes iterum ac tertio interrogavi, supplicium minatus: perseverantes duci jussi. Neque enim dubitabam, qualecunque esset quod faterentur, pertinaciam certe et inflexibilem obstinationem debere puniri. Fuerunt alii similis amentiae: quos, quia cives Romani erant, annotavi in urbem remittendos. Mox ipso tractatu, ut fieri solet, diffundente se crimine, plures species inciderunt. Propositus est libellus sine auctore, multorum nomina continens, qui negarent, esse se Christianos aut fuisse. Cum praeunte me Deos appellarent, et imagini Tuae, quam propter hoc jusseram cum simulacris numinum afferrī, thure ac vino supplicarent, praeterae maledicerent Christo, quorum nihil cogi posse dicuntur, qui sunt revera Christiani, dimittendos esse putavi. Alii ab indice nominati, esse se Christianos dixerunt, et mox negaverunt: fuisse quidem, sed desisse, quidam ante triennium, quidam ante plures annos, non nemo etiam ante viginti quoque. Omnes et imaginem Tuam, Deorumque simulacra venerati sunt: ii et Christo maledixerunt. Affirmabant autem, hanc fuisse summam vel culpae suae, vel erroris, quod essent soliti stato die ante lucem convenire, carmenque Christo, quasi Deo, dicere secum invicem: sequē sacramento, non in scelus aliquod obstringere, sed ne furta, ne latrocinia, ne adulteria committerent, ne fidem fallerent, ne depositum appellati abnegarent; quibus peractis morem sibi discendi fuisse, rursusque cōtundi ad capiendum cibum, promiscuum tamen et innoxium (not singularem maleficae superstitionis); quod ipsum facere desisse post edictum meum, quo secundum mandata Tua hetaerias esse vetueram. Quo magis necessarium credidi, ex duabus ancillis, quae ministrae dicebantur, quid esset veri, et per tormenta quaerere. Sed nihil aliud inveni, quam superstitionem pravam et immodicam: ideoque dilata cognitione ad consulendum Te decurri. Visa est enim mihi res digna consultatione, maxime propter periclitantium numerum. Multi enim omnis aetatis, omnis ordinis, utriusque sexus etiam, vocantur in periculum, et vocabantur. Neque enim civitates tantum, sed vicos etiam atque agros superstitionis istius contagio pervagata est. Quae videtur sisti et corrigi posse. Certe satis constat, prope jam desolata templa coepisse celebrari, et sacra solemnia diu intermissa repeti, pastumque venire victimarum, cujus adhuc rarissimus emtor inveniebatur. Ex quo facile est opinari, quae turba hominum emendari possit, si sit poenitentiae locus.

Hieronym. epist. 101 (al. 85) ad Evangelium (in the old editions falsely styled ad Evagrium, also in Gratianus dist. xciii. c. 24): apostolus perspicue docet eosdem esse presbyteros, quos episcopos.—Quæris auctoritatem? Is autem vetuit, ne deinceps patriarcham presbyteri crearent. Et decrevit, ut mortuo patriarcha convenirent episcopi, qui patriarcham ordinarent. In this account the part, at least, which contradicts the later discipline has certainly not been interpolated in later times, (but still Guilelmus Autissiodorensis about 1206 comm. ad sent. l. iv. qu. 1, de sacram. ord. sub finem, says: Quod si non essent in mundo nisi tres simplices sacerdotes, oporteret quod aliquis illorum consecraret alium in episcopum et alium in archiepiscopum), and so far it has a historical value. Attempts to remove from the passage what is offensive to preconceived opinions have been made by Morin, Pearson, Le Quien, Renaudot, Petavius, especially by Abrah. Echellensis, Eutychius patriarcha Alex. vindicatus et suis restitutus orientalibus, s. responsio ad Jo. Seldeni origines, &c. Romae 1661, 4. Mamachii origg. et antiquitt. Christian. Tom. iv. p. 503 ss. See on the contrary sides, J. F. Rehkopf vitae patriarcharum Alexandrinorum saec. i. et ii. Specim. iii. (Lips. 1759, 4), p. 28 s.—On the accounts of Jerome and Hilary rests the usual Protestant view of the origin of episcopacy, which is developed among the moderns, (for the older literature see § 30, note 1), with different modifications by Ziegler, Gesch. d. Kirchl. Verfassungsformen, p. 7. Gabler de episcopis primae eccl. Christ. eorumque origine diss. Jenae 1805, 4to. Neander K. G. i. i. 324. Episcopacy is said to have been established as a point of union between the ἐκκλησίαι κατ' ὄκω, which may have stood independently of each other in towns, (see § 30, note 6), by J. F. Gruner de origine episcoporum exerc. Halae 1764, 4to. Münscher Dogmengeschichte, ii. 376, and especially by N. Chr. Kist. über den Ursprung der bisch. Gewalt (in Illgen's Zeitschrift für d. hist. Theol. ii. ii. 47.) See, on the other side, Rothe, die Anfänge d. christl. Kirche und ihrer Verfassung, i. 194. According to Rothe (p. 392) episcopacy was introduced as an instrument of Christian unity by the still remaining apostles at the council of Jerusalem, at which they chose Symeon bishop of Jerusalem (Euseb. iii. 11). But when the memory of this synod is preserved, how can its most important transaction be forgotten? According to Baur, (über d. Ursprung des Episkopats, Tübingen 1838, 8.), the heresies which first appeared in full power under the Antonines, which brought the idea of the catholic church into a clear point of view, gave rise to the outward manifestation of this idea by establishing the episcopate, which was looked upon as a matter of pressing necessity. The Petrine and Pauline parties were united on this point; and in the endeavour to realise the mea-

cessors.³ This example was imitated especially in the neighbouring churches, at Antioch in particular.⁴ It is true, that in the more remote churches, the chief presbyters, as presidents of the college of presbyters, occupied a similar position; but they had not been as yet elevated above the other presbyters by independent privileges peculiar to themselves.⁵ Ignatius, through the instrumentality of his epistles, recommended episcopacy universally, as a condition of unity, and that too in the most urgent terms;⁶ and, thus the first presbyters soon generally moved up sure, the influence of the Clementines, which proceeded from the Petrine party, as well as the Acts of the apostles, the pastoral epistles, and the later Ignatian letters, which now proceeded from the Pauline party, were working in one direction.

to the higher step as ἐπίσκοποι,⁷ although they retained besides for a long time the title πρεσβύτεροι.⁸ When the attempt was made at a later period to carry up the series of bishops, as the successors of the apostles, to the apostles themselves, the most distinguished presbyters of the earlier times were selected to be the first bishops.⁹ In this way we explain the different accounts of the order of the first Romish bishops.¹⁰ The universal right to teach in the public assemblies having occasioned improprieties very early, (James iii. 1), it seems to have been already in this period limited by custom to those officers who publicly spoke in the congregation, although it was not formally abolished.¹¹

Trall. c. 12), Dumas as Bishop of Magnesia (ad Magnes. c. 2), and an unknown person as bishop of Philadelphia (ad Philadelph. c. 1).

¹⁰ Comp. § 27, note 6. First of all, Irenæus adv. haer. iii. 3, followed by Eusebius, iii. 2, 13, 14, 31, gives it thus: Linus (2 Tim. iv 21?) † 80, Anacletus, Anacletus or Cletus † 92, Clemens (Philipp. iv. 3?) † 102, Evarestus † 110. According to the Clementines, on the contrary, Clement, the constant attendant of Peter, was consecrated by that apostle bishop of Rome. This opinion is followed by Tertullian de praescr. c. 32. Accordingly, the apostol. constitut. vii. 46, give the following order: Linus nominated by Paul, Clement by Peter, &c. In like manner, Optatus Milev. de schism. Donatist. ii. 2. Augustini ep. 53, ad Genserum. On the other hand, Epiphanius, xxvii. 6, represents Clement as ordained bishop by Peter, but not as having entered on his office till after the death of Linus and Anacletus. Rufinus, praef. in recognit. says that Linus and Cletus were bishops in the lifetime of Peter; and that after the death of the latter, Peter appointed Clement shortly before his own death. According to Jerome, (catal. c. 15), most of the Latins looked upon Clement as the immediate successor of Peter. The modern Romish church assumes the following order; Peter, Linus, Clemens, Cletus, Anacletus, Evarestus. Comp. Jo. Pearsonii and Henr. Apostolic fathers is a title given to those who were the immediate and genuine disciples of the apostles, and in a stricter sense, to such of them as have left works behind. To the school of Paul belong Barnabas (comp. § 26)¹ Clement of Rome,

¹ The epistle of Barnabas, which was regarded even by Clement of Alexandria, Origen, and Jerome, as genuine, remained entirely unknown till after Usher's edition had been burnt in the printing-office at Oxford, 1643. It was first published by Hugo Menardus, Paris 1645, 4to. and with a corrected text by Iss. Vossius appended to the epistles of Ignatius, Amstel. 1646, 4to. For a long time the predominant opinion was against its authenticity, see especially Tentzel ad Hieron. catal. cap. 6, in Fabricii bibl. eccles. p. 38 ss. Yet Isaac Vossius, Cave, Grynaeus, Gallandius, declared it genuine. Since J. E. Chr. Schmidt, K. G. 437 Münscher Dogmengesch. i. 111, Rosenmüller hist. interpret. libb. sacr. i. 42, decided in its favour, this became almost the prevailing opinion, and has been defended with ingenuity, particularly by D. E. Henke de epistolae quae Barnabae tribuitur authenticia, Jenae 1827, 8vo; Bleek Brief a. d. Hebräer, i. 416; and J. Chr. Rördaam comm. de authenticia epist. Barnabae, Partic. I. Hafn. 1828, 8vo. Gu. H. Haverkorn van Rysewyk diss. de Barnaba, Arnhemiae 1835, 8vo, has also declared in favour of the genuineness. Recently, however, certain important voices have been raised again in opposition to the epistle, as Neander (K. G. i. ii. 1133), Twisten (Dogmatik, i. 104), Ullmann (theol. Studien u. Kritiken, i. ii. 382), and Hug (Zeitschrift für d. Geistlichkeit d. Erzbisth. Freiburg. ii. 132 ff.; iii. 208 ff.). Dan. Schenkel (über d. Brief d. Barn. in d. theol. Stud. u. Kritik. 1837, iii. 652) believes that § 1—6, 13, 14, 17, constitute the genuine original letter, and that § 7—12, 15, 16, were afterwards inserted by a therapeutic Jewish Christian. On the other hand, C. J. Hefele, in the Tübing. theol. Quartalschr. 1839, i. 50, affirms the integrity of the epistle, but denies the authenticity of it in the work entitled, "das Sendschreiben des Apostels Barnabas aufs neue untersucht, übersetzt und erklärt, Tübingen 1840, 8."—The chief ground urged against the genuineness, that the absurd mystical mode of interpretation could not have proceeded from a companion of the apostle Paul, seems to me untenable. That Barnabas was not a man of spiritual consequence, is clear even from the Acts of the apostles. There he is at first the more prominent by virtue of his apostolic commission, in company with Paul (Acts xi. 22; xii. 2. Barnabas and Saul), but he soon falls entirely into the background behind Paul, after a freer sphere of activity has commenced (xiii. 13, 43, Paul and Barnabas). The epistle was written soon after the destruction of Jerusalem, according to chapters iv. and xvi.; and the ancient testimony of Clement, that Barnabas was the author, cannot be derived from a partiality of the Alexandrian in favour of a production of kindred spirit, because the millennarianism of the letter (c. 15) could not have pleased the Alexandrian, and besides, all the interpretations do not agree with Clement, who, in his Paedag. ii. p. 221, refutes one of them, and in his Stromata, ii. p. 464, prefers another view of Psalm i. 1 to that given in the epistle before us.

² His epistle to the Corinthians, which was usually read in the religious assemblies at Corinth, as early as the second century (Dionys. Corinth. in Euseb. h. e. iv. 23, 6. Iren. iii. 3), is called in question without reason by Semler (histor. Einleit. zu Baumgarten's Unters. theol. Streitigkeiten, Bd. 2, S. 16) and Ammon (Leben Jesu, i. 33), but it has been looked upon as interpolated, by H. Bignon, Ed. Bernard, H. Burton, Jo. Clericus (see Patrum apost. Cotelarii, ed. Clerici, ii. p. 133, 478, 482, and in the notes to the letter), Ittig, Mosheim, and Neander. It seems to belong to the end of the first century. In opposition to Schenkel (theol. Studien und Krit. 1841, i. 65), who places it between 64 and 70, see Schliemann's Clementinen, p. 409. The so-called second epistle, a mere fragment, is spurious (Enseb. iii. 38). These two letters, preserved only in the Cod. Alexand. were first published by Patricius Junius, Oxon. 1633, 4to. and his incorrect text has been repeated in most editions. After a careful comparison of the MS. a more correct text was given first of all by Henr. Wotton, Cantabr. 1718.

³ Namely, 1. Two letters in the Syriac language, see below § 73, Note 5; 2. Constitutions and Canones apostolorum, see § 67. Note 3; 3. Recognitiones Clementis et Clementina, see § 58.

⁴ Partly an imitation of the fourth book of Ezra (see § 31, note 3, comp. Jachmann, p. 63), it professes to be a writing of the Hermas mentioned in Romans xvi. 14 (lib. i. vis. ii. c. 4), and is quoted as Scripture even by Irenaeus, iv. 3. When the opposition to Montanism began in the west towards the end of the second century (see below § 59), it lost its reputation there with those who were inclined to montanist views, because it allowed a repentance once after baptism, and with the opponents of montanism it fell into disrepute, on account of its apocalyptic form (Tertull. de Pudic. c. 10: Cederem tibi, si scriptura pastoris, quae sola moechos amat, divino instrumento meruisset incidi; si non ab omni concilio ecclesiarum, etiam vestrarum, inter apocrypha et falsa judicaretur, c. 2: ille inculcates moral precepts in visions and parables, in order to promote the completeness of the church. The disciples of John are Ignatius, bishop of Antioch, (see § 33, note 8),^f Polycarp, apocryphus pastor moechorum), and now it is declared by the Fragmentum de canone in Muratorii antiquitt. Ital. iii. 853: Pastorem vero nuperrime temporibus nostris in urbe Roma Hermas conscripsit, sedente cathedra urbis Romae ecclesiae Pio episcopo, fratre ejus. This assumption, which Irenaeus cannot have known, became afterwards the usual one in the west. On the contrary, the work remained in repute among the Alexandrians, and is cited by Clement of Alex. and Origen frequently, by Athanasius several times as an authority (see Jachmann, p. 37). Origenes in Ep. ad Rom. comm. lib. x. c. 31: Puto tamen, quod Hermas, iste (Rom. xvi. 14) sit scriptor libelli istius, qui Pastor appellatur, quae scriptura valde mihi utilis videtur, et, ut puto, divinitus inspirata. But when in later times the Arians appealed to it (Athanasii epist. ad Afros in Opp. i. ii. 895) its reputation sank in the Greek church also. Hieronymus in catal. c. 10: Herman, cujus apostolus Paulus ad Romanos scribens meminit,—asserunt auctorem esse libri, qui appellatur Pastor, et apud quasdam Graeciae ecclesias etiam publice legitur. Revera utilis liber, multique de eo scriptorum veterum usurpavere testimonia, sed apud Latinos paene ignotus est. Lücke, Einl. in die Offenbarung Joh. p. 141, places it in the middle of the second century, Jachmann der Hirte des Hermas, Königsb. 1835, in the beginning of it, and regards the Hermas of Paul as the author.

^f Seven epistles ad Smyrnaeos, ad Polycarpum, ad Ephesios, ad Magnesios, ad Philadelphenses, ad Trallianos, ad Romanos (Polycarp ep. c. 13, mentions the epistles of Ignatius in general, Iren. v. 28 cites that to the Romans, Origenes prol. in cant. cant. and Hom. vi. in Lucan those to the Romans and Ephesians; Eusebius iii. 36 mentions all the seven) are extant in a longer and in a shorter recension. (The latter was first published by Is. Vossius at Amstel. 1649, 4to.) The controversy concerning their genuineness was interwoven with that respecting the origin of Episcopacy. In the older literature, which is rich in notices of the epistles, the chief work in favour of the authenticity is: Jo. Pearson. vindiciae epistol. S. Ignatii, Cantabr. 1672, 4. The leading work against the authenticity is: Jo. Dallaeus de scriptis, quae sub Dionysii Arepp. et Ignatii Antioch. nominibus circumferuntur. Genev. 1666, 4. Recently Rothe (Anfänge, p. 715) defended the authenticity. But in opposition to him Baur (über die Ursprung des Episkopats, S. 148 ff.) asserted that these letters were composed at Rome in the second half of the second century, on the side of the pure Pauline Christianity against the Petrine Judaising tendency which had found expression in the Clementines. Dr J. E. Huther again defended the authenticity with reference to these doubts (Illgen's Zeitschrift für d. histor. Theol. 1841, iv. 1). As regards the two recensions, W. Whiston (Primitive Christianity Revived, Lond. 1711) is the only person who has declared the longer to be the original one; while Dr F. K. Maier (theol. Stud. u. Krit. 1836, ii. 340) is of opinion that it comes much nearer the original text. Against the latter see Rothe, l. c. p. 739, and Arndt (theol. Stud. u. Krit. 1839, i. 136), J. E.

bishop of Smyrna, († 167)⁶ and Papias, bishop of Hierapolis,⁷ of whose writings nothing but fragments are extant. The compositions attributed to Dionysius the Areopagite (Acts xvii. 34) are spurious.⁸

Chr. Schmidt (in Henke's Magazin, iii. 91) thought that both recensions arose from a thorough revision of the genuine text, but yet he admitted (in his Biblioth. für Kritik. u. Exegese d. N. T. ii. 29) that the shorter comes nearest to the genuine text. Netz (theol. Stud. u. Kritik. 1835, iv. 881) has repeated the same opinion. Against him see Arndt (theol. Stud. u. Krit. 1839, i. 742). The latest investigations have all turned out in favour of the shorter recension (see Rothe, Arndt, Huther, J. cc. F. A. Chr. Düsterdieck, quæ de Ignatianarum epistolarum authenticæ, duorumque textuum ratione et dignitate hucusque prolatae sunt sententiæ enarrantur et dijudicantur. Gottingæ 1843, 4. Worthy of attention are the remarks of Arndt, S. 139, respecting the necessity of revising the text of the shorter recension after the best MSS. and other existing critical helps. Eight other pretended letters of Ignatius are certainly spurious. [See particularly "The ancient Syriac version of the epistles of St Ignatius to St Polycarp, the Ephesians, and the Romans; together with extracts from his epistles collected from the writings of Severus of Antioch, Timotheus of Alexandria, and others. Edited with an English translation and notes. Also the Greek text of these three epistles, corrected according to the authority of the Syriac version. By William Cureton, M. A., London, 1845, 8vo.]

⁷ Ἰωάννου μὲν ἀκουστής, Πολυκάρπου δὲ ἐταῖρος γεγονώς, Iren. v. 33, is said to have suffered martyrdom in 163, in Pergamus (Chronicon. pasch. ed. Bonn. i. 481), wrote λογίων κυριακῶν ἐξήγησις, fragments in Grabe, ii. p. 26. Routh, i. p. 1. In Euseb. h. e. iii. 36 he is called: ἀνὴρ τὰ πάντα διὰ μάλα λογίωτατος, καὶ τῆς γραφῆς εἰδήμων (respecting the omission of these words in some MSS. after Rufin's example, see Kimmel de Rufino, p. 236). But because he expressed very gross millennarianism in his writings (although that doctrine was older), Eusebius passes a very severe judgment upon him, h. e. iii. 39: χιλιάδα τιὰ φησὶ ἐτῶν ἐσεσθαι μετὰ τῆν ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀνάστασιν, σωματικῶς τῆς τοῦ Χριστοῦ βασιλείας ἐπὶ ταυτοῖς τῆς γῆς ὑποστησόμενης, — σφόδρα γὰρ τοι σμικρὸς ὢν τὸν νοῦν. — πλὴν καὶ τοῖς μετ' αὐτὸν πλείστοις ὅσοις τῶν ἐκκλησιαστικῶν τῆς ὁμοίας αὐτοῦ δόξης παρακίους γέγονε — ὥστε οὐκ εἰρηναῖος κ. τ. λ. With what right Eusebius, who in his Chronicon (Olymp. 220) allows Papias without hesitation to have been a disciple of the apostle John, declares in this work that he was only the pupil of a certain presbyter John, is examined by Olshausen, die Echtheit der vier kanon. Evangelien. Königsb. 1823, S. 224 ff.

DEVELOPMENT OF DOCTRINE IN THIS PERIOD.

While the stricter party of Jewish Christians maintained the Jewish prejudices, and therefore constantly endeavoured to impose on the Gentile Christians the observance of the Mosaic law,¹ that speculation which strove to comprehend Christianity in its peculiar nature was always becoming more powerful in other quarters. Inasmuch as a speculative basis was not yet firmly established, great freedom was allowed for it; but as soon as it trenchanted upon the moral and religious interests of Christianity, it was resisted, and not till then.² It is principally with the wonderful person of Christ, which it endeavoured to understand, that speculation fatigued itself. Even here the most different tendencies were indulged in, as long as they left unimpaired the divine and human in Christ, by the union of which the atoning and typical character of the life of Jesus was necessarily constituted. Hence, the shepherd of Hermas with its peculiar christology gave no offence.³ On the contrary, the doctrine of the Docetae was rejected, which represented Christ's humanity as a mere appearance, in the way that the Jews conceived of the manifestations of angels (ἄγγελοι).⁴ In the mean time, however, speculation relative to the higher nature of Christ and the essence of Christianity, attached itself to the more general questions respecting the creation of the world and the origin of evil. Here the Alexandrine Jewish philosophy presented itself as a pattern. The idea of the λόγος, in particular, was borrowed from it for the purpose of explaining the higher nature of Christ.⁵ John followed this speculation in his gospel, in order to divert it from the religion of a fruitless hyper-philosophy into a consideration of the moral efficacy of the Logos.⁶ It went astray, how-and concludes: volo eum filio meo facere cohaerem. The explanation, c. 5: the master is God, Filius autem Spiritus sanctus est: servus vero, ille Filius Dei est. Vineam autem populus est, quem servat ipse. Pali vero Nuncii (angeli) sunt, qui a Domino praepositi sunt ad continendum populum ejus. c. 6: Quare autem Dominus in consilio adhibuerit Filium de haereditate et bonos Angelos? Quia Nuncius (Christus) audit illum Spiritum sanctum, qui infusus est omnium primus, in corpore, in quo habitaret Deus. Cum igitur corpus illud parvisset omni tempore Spiritui sancto; placuit Deo—ut et huic corpori—locus aliquis consistendi daretur, ne videretur mercedem servitutis suae perdidisse. A useful application, c. 7: Corpus hoc tuum custodi mundum atque purum; ut Spiritus ille qui inhabitabat in eo, testimonium referat illi, et tecum fuisse judicetur. The eternal Son of God is here the Holy Spirit, and there is no account of a personal union of him with the man Jesus. Distinctly and often in Ignatius ad Ephes. vii. 18, ad Trallianos, ix. 10, ad Smyrn. 1—8; Ἰησοῦ τὸ δοκεῖν (δοκῆσαι, φαντασίᾳ) πεπονθέναι, and in the Evang. Petri (Serapion apud Euseb. vi. 12). Cf. Hieronymus adv. Luciferianos (ed. Martian. tom. iv. p. ii. p. 304): Apostolis adhuc in saeculo superstitibus, adhuc apud Judaeam Christi sanguine recenti, phantasma Domini corpus asserebatur. So thought the Jews about the appearances of angels, Tob. xii. 19. Philo de Abrah. p. 366: τερόσκιον δὲ καὶ τὸ μὴ πεινώντας πεινώντων, καὶ μὴ ἐσθίωντας ἐσθίωντων παρέχειν φαντασίαν. (Comp. Neander's gnostische Systeme, S. 23.) Josephus antt. i. 11, 2; v. 6, 2, φαντάσματος δ' αὐτῷ (Gideoni) παρουστήντος νεανίσκου μορφῆς. The church fathers had the very same idea of the appearances of angels, comp. Keilii opusc. ed. ever, at the present time, falling into that false Gnosis which denies the fundamental principles of Christianity, and which the apostle Paul had already predicted as respects its essence. The first Christian-Gnostic system was that of Cerinthus, in which, however, the Gnosis did not yet attain a consistent development, but was obliged to accommodate itself to many Jewish opinions.⁷

STATE OF PAGANISM.

P. E. Müller de hierarchia et studio vitæ asceticæ in sacris et mysteriis Græcorum Romanorumque latentibus. Hafn. 1803, 8. in the second section, translated in the neuen Biblioth. der schönen Wissenschaften, Bd. 69. S. 207 ff.) Tzschirner's der Fall des Heidenthums, Bd. 1. S. 124—164.

Although the emperors of this time preserved to the Roman empire external security, maintained internal order and justice, and favoured the sciences,¹ yet the old Roman morality and religious sobriety could not be restored among the degenerate people. The propensity to theosophic mysteries, consecrations, and purifications (§ 14), produced new institutions which ministered to superstition. They were no longer satisfied with the wandering priests of Isis, the Gauls, Chaldeans, and Magicians. In the second century, many secret rites or mysteries were spread abroad over the Roman empire in addition to the former, (those of the Dea Syra, of Isis, of Mithras.) Besides these, the 'old Eleusinian and Dionysian mysteries also, came again into greater repute, though it would appear that they were variously accommodated to the spirit of the time. Abstinence from sensual pleasures was a universal condition of initiation, by which it was supposed that the people obtained a nearer communion with the deities as they passed through the different gradations of the mysteries. This period was distinguished by its godless condition. Mistaking the religious moral way, it sought to obtain purity by magic, with the aid of all kinds of external observances. We have a proof in the horrible Taurololium and Kriobolium which now appeared, of the extreme sensuality of superstition. The prevailing philosophy continued to be that Platonic eclecticism which adopted and defended all superstitions,² although by it a certain monotheism was elevated above polytheism, even in the view of the people generally.³ Among the Platonics of this time, the most distinguished are Plutarch of Chaeronea, [† 120], Apuleius of Madaura, [about 170], and Maximus of Tyre, [about 190]. In opposition to this doctrinal philosophy, scepticism too was always rising to a higher degree of strength. Sextus Empiricus.

The hatred of the Jews against the Romans was still more increased by the destruction of Jerusalem, and by great oppression that followed, and soon began to manifest itself in new acts of rebellion. An insurrection first broke out in Cyrenaica (115),

Davisii, Lond. 1740, 4. p. 193, with reference to the different opinions of men respecting divine things: *Ἐν τοσοῦτῳ δὴ πολέμῳ, καὶ στάσει, καὶ διαφωνίᾳ, ἕνα ἴδους ἂν ἐν πάσῃ γῇ ὁμόφωνον νόμον καὶ λόγον, ὅτι Θεὸς εἰς πάντων βασιλεὺς, καὶ πατήρ, καὶ θεοὶ πολλοί, Θεοῦ παῖδες, συνάρχοντες Θεῷ. which spread over Egypt also, and raged longest in Cyprus. Another was kindled simultaneously in Mesopotamia. Even Hadrian found relapses of these rebellions, which required to be combated; and appears to have been led by them to entertain the idea of doing away the dangerous nationality of this people, by prohibiting circumcision.¹ And since he resolved, at the same time, to restore Jerusalem by means of a Roman colony, a pretended Messiah soon made his appearance, who, under the title of Bar Cochba (Numb. xxiv. 17),² obtained many adherents, especially by the recognition of R. Akiba, elevated the fortress Bether to be the seat of his kingdom, and endeavoured from it to drive the Romans out of the land (132). His conquests had already extended beyond Syria, when Julius Severus appeared, and, after a bloody war, put an end to the insurrection by taking possession of Bether (135). Palestine became a complete wilderness. The colony of Aelia Capitolina rose on the ruins of Jerusalem, but access to it was prohibited to the Jews on pain of death. Hadrian's prohibition of circumcision was first abolished by Antoninus Pius.³

EXTERNAL HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY.

ITS DIFFUSION.

Although the Christian writers of this time manifestly speak in exaggerated terms of the spread of Christianity,¹ yet the extraordinary progress it made cannot be mistaken. In the west, it extended from Rome to western Africa, where Carthage was its chief seat.² In Gaul, we find churches at Lyons and Vienna, immediately after the middle of the second century (Euseb. v. c. 1). From this country Christianity may have spread into Germany (cisrhenana)³ and Britain, but only by the efforts of individuals. In the east, we find it firmly established in Edessa, so early as the middle of the second century;⁴ and from this city it had also extended itself, as it seems, into the countries lying eastward.⁵ In northern Arabia,⁶ there must likewise have been Christians so early as this period. About 180, Pantaenus went from Alexandria to India,⁷ to preach the gospel in that region (Euseb. h. e. v. 10.)

OPPOSITION TO CHRISTIANITY BY WRITERS.

The principal opponent of Christianity at this period was the century, may be inferred from Tertullian apologet. c. 37 : Hesterni sumus et vestra omnia implevimus, urbes, insulas, castella, municipia, etc. and adv. Scapul. c. 5, when it is said that, in case of a persecution of the Christians, Carthage would have to be decimated. About 200 A.D. a synod was held under Agrippinus, bishop of Carthage (Cyprian. epist. 71 and 73), which, according to Augustin. de baptism ii. c. 13, consisted of seventy African and Numidian bishops.

¹ Celsus and his work are known only by the refutation of Origen (contra Celsum libb. viii. ed. G. Spencer. Cantabrig. 1677, 4to. translated by Mosheim, Hamburg 1745, 4to. cf. C. R. Jachmann de Celso philosopho disseruit, et fragmenta libri, quem contra Christianos edidit, collegit, a Koenigsberg Easter-programm 1836, 4). Origen calls him an Epicurean (i. p. 3, εὐρίσκεται ἐξ ἄλλων συγγραμμάτων Ἐπικούρειος ὢν), who merely kept back his Epicureanism in his work (iv. p. 163, μὴ πάντῃ ἐμφαίνων διὰ τοῦ συγγράμματος τὸν Ἐπικούρειον, ἀλλὰ προσποιούμενος πρόβουλον εἶδέναι), and assumed the mien of a Platonic philosopher (iv. p. 219, ἐν πολλοῖς πλατωνίζων θελεῖ); doubtless because he was able to influence the religious heathen only in this way. In opposition to the opinion that Celsus was really a Platonist, which has become common on Mosheim's authority (preface to his version of Origen, P. 22 ff.), his Epicureanism is asserted by J. F. Fenger de Celso, Christianarum adversario, Epicureo comm. Havn. 1828, 8. Tzschirner's Fall des Heidenthums, i. 325. According to F. A. Philippi de Celsi, adversarii Christianorum, philosophandi genere, Berol. 1836, 8. he was an eclectic with a special leaning to Epicurus. According to C. W. I. Bindemann (über Celsus u. seine Schrift gegen die Christen, in Illgen's Zeitschr. für d. hist. Theol. 1842, ii. 58), he was a Platonic philosopher of a more liberal tendency, who agreed with Epicurus in many points. According to Origen, i. p. 28, Celsus lived κατὰ Ἀδριανὸν καὶ κατωτέρω: It is certain that he wrote in the second half of the second century, for he recognises the whole of the Gnostic sects, and even the Marcionites (v. p. 272), as parties completely formed. Probably he is the same Celsus to whom Lucian dedicates his Alexander, as is assumed by the ancient scholiast (see Luciani Alexander, ed. C. G. Jacob, Colon. 1828, p. 8. Fenger, p. 40 ss. Bindemann l. c. 99). Origen does not know (i. p. 53, iv. p. 186) whether he is the same Celsus who wrote several books against magic, and two other books against the Christians.

In proportion as the peculiar nature of Christianity, as a different system from Judaism, became better known, so much the more must it have appeared, when viewed from the position of a heathen citizen, as a hostile, threatening power, whose rapid diffusion was highly suspicious. The Christians saw only evil demons in the gods of the heathen; and since the worship of the gods had pervaded all forms of life, they were compelled entirely to withdraw themselves from the public and domestic life of the heathen, from their amusements, and their displays of art.¹ Hence Christianity appeared to the heathen in the light of a misanthropic superstition.² But the Christians refused even to

Gesneri de aetate et auctore dialogi Luciani, qui Philopatriæ inscribitur, ed. 3. Gotting. 1741 (also in Luciani opp. ed. Reitz, iii. 708 ss.), is usually placed in the time of Julian. According to Niebuhr it was first composed under the emperor Nicephorus Phocas, in the year 968 or 969, see Corporis scriptt. hist. Byzant. Bonnensis P. xi. (Leo Diaconus, &c.) praef. p. ix. the emperors the usual marks of divine honour paid them.³ They cherished among them the expectation that a near destruction was impending over all the kingdoms of the earth;⁴ and many would not undertake civil and military offices to which they were called.⁵ It was natural, therefore, that they should be looked upon as bad citizens; and however solemn was their asseveration that Christianity demanded still greater obedience to the powers under which they lived,⁶ it appeared, notwithstanding, in the eyes of the heathen, accustomed as they were to a religion subordinate to political objects, a circumstance so much the more suspicious, that the Christians were constantly obliged to annex a condition, viz. that the commands of the magistrate should not contradict the Divine law.⁷ The moral impression which the doctrine and Tertull. de idololatr. c. 13—15, is zealous even against the illumination and decoration of the doors in honour of the emperors, cf. c. 15: Igitur quod attineat ad honores regum vel imperatorum, satis praescriptum habemus, in omni obsequio esse nos oportere, secundum Apostoli praeceptum, subditos magistratibus et principibus et potestatibus: sed intra limites disciplinae, quousque ab idololatria separamur.—Accendant igitur quotidie lucernas, quibus lux nulla est, adfigant postibus lauros postmodum arsuras, quibus ignes imminet: illis competunt et testimonia tenebrarum, et auspicia poenarum. Tu lumen es mundi, et arbor virens semper. Si templis renuntiasti, ne feceris templum januam tuam.

²⁴ How the Jews and Christians had become a proverb on this account, see Galenus de pulsum differentia, lib. ii. (ed. Kühn, viii. 579):

were inimical to them as opponents of their interest;²⁵ the people hated them as despisers of their gods (ἀθεοί, ἀσεβείς), and in the public misfortunes saw nothing but admonitions from heaven to exterminate them.²⁶

PERSECUTIONS OF CHRISTIANITY.

The laws against religiones peregrinae and collegia illicita still remained in force even in reference to the Christians;¹ but they were by no means universally and uniformly enforced. The persecutions of this period were rather the effects of the people's hatred, to which the magistrates gave way, and also of personal malevolence in those possessing official power. Hence all the persecutions of the period were confined merely to single cities or provinces. Under Hadrian (117—138) the people first began to clamour for the execution of some Christians at the public festivals. But at the representation of Serenius Gracianus, proconsul of Asia Minor, Hadrian issued a rescript to the successor of the proconsul, interdicting such tumultuous proceedings.² The

² Originally preserved in Latin by Justin Martyr, apol. i. c. 69; then tradition regarding this emperor, that he caused temples to be dedicated to Christ, is the more improbable, because he entertained very erroneous and unfavourable notions of the Christians.³ Under Antoninus Pius, the Christians were disturbed afresh once and again (138—161).⁴ But the reign of Marcus translated into Greek by Eusebius (h. e. iv. 9). Rufinus (hist. eccl. iv. 9) has probably preserved the Latin original (cf. Alexii Symmachi Mazochii disquisitio in Gallandii biblioth. vett. Patr. T. i. p. 728): Exemplum epistolae imperatoris Adriani ad Minucium Fundanum Proconsulem Asiae: Accepi literas ad me scriptas a decessore tuo Serenico Graniano clarissimo viro: et non placet mihi relationem silentio praeterire, ne et innoxii perturbentur, et calumniatoribus latrocinandi tribuatur occasio. Itaque si evidenter provinciales huic petitioni suae adesse valent adversum Christianos, ut pro tribunali eos in aliquo arguant, hoc eis exsequi non prohibeo: precibus autem in hoc solis et acclamationibus uti, eis non permitto. Etenim multo aequius est, si quis volet accusare, te cognoscere de objectis. Si quis igitur accusat, et probat adversum leges quidquam agere memoratos homines, pro merito peccatorum etiam supplicia statues. ⁴ Dionysius Corinth. ap. Euseb. iv. p. 23, concerning a persecution in Athens, in which Bishop Publius, the predecessor of Quadratus, suffered. Melito in apolog. ad Marc. Aurel. ap. Euseb. iv. c. 26, § 5: ὁ πατήρ σου—ταῖς πόλεσι περὶ τοῦ μηδὲν νεωτερίζω περὶ ἡμῶν ἔγραψεν· ἐν οἷς καὶ πρὸς Λαρισσαίους, καὶ πρὸς Θεσσαλονικεῖς καὶ Ἀθηναίους, καὶ πρὸς πάντας Ἕλληνας. This writing may have given rise to the opinion that the Edictum ad commune Asiae proceeded from Antoninus, although it is manifestly spurious. This edict has been appended by a later hand to Justinian apol. i. c. 70, and has been communicated in a different text by Eusebius, iv. c. 13, with a reference to Melito (probably to the above passage, which he misunderstood). All that can be said with plausibility in defence of that edict may be seen in T. G.

Aurelius (161—180) was still more unfavourable to them, for in it the frequent misfortunes that befell the empire caused many outbursts of the popular fury against them; while the emperor himself endeavoured right earnestly to maintain the ancient reputation of the state religion.⁵ Hence the Christians in Asia Minor⁶ suffered persecutions, to which even Polycarp (167)⁷ fell a sacrifice, while Justin (166) became a martyr at Rome.⁸ But Hegelmaier comm. in edictum Imp. Ant. P. pro Christianis. Tubing. 1767. 4. The spuriousness of it, before asserted by J. J. Scaliger, Moyle, Triribby, has been convincingly proved by Is. Haffner de edicto Antonini Pii pro Christianis ad commune Asiae. Argentor 1781, 4. Cf. Eichstädt exercitatio Antoniniana v. in the Annales acad. Jen. i. 286. The edict contains an explanation of the edict issued by Hadrian, which had arisen among the Christians. They believed that the expression adversus leges quidquam agere should not be referred to the exercises of Christian worship, and accordingly this edict was explained as an ἐν τῇ ἡγεμονίᾳ Ῥωμαίων ἐγχερεῖν. From this, therefore, it followed that who ever accused a Christian as such, without being able to prove against him such a crime, was liable to punishment as a false accuser.

Neander, KG. i. i. 184, is of opinion that this διάταγμα was certainly issued by the emperor, and is preserved in the Actis Symphoniani apud Ruinart, p. 69. But the very inscription, Aurelius Imp. omnibus administratoribus suis atque rectoribus, throws suspicion on the law there given. The emperor could not open his proclamation with the name Aurelius. See Semisch in the Theol. Studien u. Kritiken, 1835, iv. 934; administratores is not an official designation of the governors, and the emperor could not call them administratores suos. The emperor could have issued no edict against Christians before 177. See Semisch, l. c. S. 935 ff.

The supposed miracle of the legio Melitina (κεραυοβόλος fulminatrix) (174) could have had the less influence on the emperor in favour of the Christians, since so many parties ascribed the merit of it to themselves.¹⁰ Under the barbarous Commodus (180—192), the Christians lived in peace.¹¹

¹⁰ The heathen writers ascribe the phenomenon partly to the conjurations of the Aegyptian Arnuphis (Dio Cassius in excerpt. Xiphilini lxxi. 8. Suidas s. v. Ἰουλιανός), partly to the prayer of Marcus (Capitolinus in vita Marc. Aurel. c. 24. Themistius, in orat. xv. p. 191, ed. Harduini). The emperor himself expresses his opinion on a coin on which Jupiter is represented hurling his lightning against the barbarians lying on the ground (Eckhel numism. iii. 61). Cf. Claudianus de sexto consulatu Honorii, v. 342. Similar occurrences are related of Alexander, Curt. iv. 7, 13; of Marius, Orosii hist. v. 15; and Hosidius, Dio Cass. lx. § 9. The Christians, in like manner, ascribed the merit to their deity, c. Claudius Apollinaris, ap. Euseb. v. 5. Tertulliani ad Scapul. c. 4, and especially Apologet. c. 5. Aurelius, was afterwards annexed to Justin Martyr's apolog. i. In it all accusation of the Christians is forbidden under punishment of death by fire. The same thing is found in Edictum ad commune Asiae, note 3.

by slaves was passed under Nerva (Dio Cassius, lxxviii. p. 769. Cf. Capitolinus in vita Pertinac. c. 9. Digest. lib. xlix. tit. 14, l. 2, § 6): on the contrary, it was also a law (Julius Paulus sentent. recept. tit. 16, § 4): servo, qui ultro aliquid de domino confitetur, fides non accommodatur (cf. Digest. lib. xlviii. tit. 18, l. 1. § 5 u. § 16, l. 9, § 1): and though the case of high treason (causa Majestatis) was excepted, yet then the punishment of the slaves also was remitted, if they had made a well grounded accusation (Cod. Justinian. lib. ix. tit. 2, l. 20). Comp. on all these laws, Gothofredus in comm. ad Cod. Theodos. lib. x. tit. 10, c. 17. J. A. Bachii D. Trajanus, sive de legibus Trajani Imp. Lips. 1747, 8, p. 73 ss. According to these principles of law, therefore, either Apollonius only, or his slave only, could have been put to death, but in no case both. Jerome does not say either that Severus was the slave of Apollonius, or that he was executed; and since Eusebius grounds this execution expressly on a superstitious law, it may have belonged only to the oriental tradition, which may have adduced this instance in support of the alleged law.

tians³ continued down to the fourth century, and even later. In what way the Nazarenes and the Gentile Christians still looked upon one another as orthodox, is evident from the explanations of Hegesippus on his journey to Rome, whither he arrived under bishop Anicetus (157—161).⁴ But since the Gentile Christians looked upon the Nazarenes as weak Christians, on account of their adherence to the Mosaic law,⁵ the connection between them became always less intimate, the knowledge of their creed more indistinct; but, at the same time, since they did not keep pace with the progressive development of doctrine in the catholic church, the actual difference between the two parties was greater, until at length Epiphanius (about 400) went so far as to include the Nazarenes in his list of heretics (haer. xxix.)

The tendency of theological speculation, which was before apparent in Cerinthus (§ 36), appeared at the commencement of this period completely developed in the different Syrian and Egyptian systems.¹ The philosophical basis of this speculation

According to Möhler (Vers. über d. Ursprung d. Gnosticismus, in his *Schriften u. Its first elements were formed among the Alex-was the old question, πόθεν τὸ κακόν.³ In proportion as the idea of the highest divinity had developed itself, the less did philosophy believe itself right in venturing⁴ to consider him as a world-creator (δημιουργός);⁴ and the more strongly was it disposed to derive the imperfect good in the world from a lower being, but the evil from an evil principle.⁵ Among the speculating Christians, andrian Jews. Persian dualism, platonism, and Alexandrian philosophy of religion, have had their influence in originating the Christian gnosis. It is an attempt to conceive the entire course of the world, as the series of moments in which the absolute spirit presents himself objectively, and unites himself with those moments, and has therefore nothing more similar than the Hegelian philosophy of religion. (Comp. this author's Krit. Studien über d. Begriff d. Gnosis, in the theol. Stud. u. Krit. 1837, iii. 511.) [An enquiry into the Heresies of the Apostolic Age. By E. Burton, D.D. ⁴ Even according to Plato (Timaeus, p. 41), only the divine in man was created by the highest God, who then leaves it to the τοῖς νέοις θεοῖς ἀθανάτοιν θνητὸν προσυφαίναν. So also Philo (de mundi opif. p. 16, de ling. conf. p. 346, de profug. p. 460), in speaking of the creation of man, makes the τὸ δλογον, τὸ θνητὸν ἡμῶν τῆς Ψυχῆς μέρος be created by angels. ⁴ Δημιουργός is the former of the world even in Xenoph. memorab. i. 4, 7, and in Plato Timaeus, p. 41, more frequently in the younger Platonists.

⁵ Plutarchus de Iside et Osiride, c. 45: Ὅτε γὰρ ἐν ἀψύχοις σώμασι τὰς τοῦ πατρὸς ἀρχὰς θετέω, ὡς Δημόκριτος καὶ Ἐπικούρου· ὅτε ἀπὸ τοῦ δημιουργοῦ ὕλης ἑκα λόγον καὶ μίαν πρόσωπον, ὡς αἱ Στωϊκοί, περιγενομένην ἀπάντων καὶ κρατοῦσαν· ἀδύνατον γὰρ ἢ φλαβρὸν ὄντιον, ἢ πᾶντων, ἢ χρηστὸν, ἢ πᾶν μηδενὸς ὁ θεὸς αἴτιος, ἐγγενέσθαι. Hence the ancient opinion of the wise men is this: ἀπὸ δικῆν ἐκαστῶν ἀρχῶν, καὶ δικῆν ἀντιπάλων διωόμενων—δ, τε βίος μικρὸς, δ, τε κόσμος—ἀνώμαλος καὶ ποικίλος γέγονε καὶ μεταβολὰς πάσας δεχόμενος. c. 46: καὶ δοκεῖ τοῦτο τοῖς πλείστοις καὶ σοφωτάτοις. Νομίζουσι γὰρ οἱ μὲν θεοὺς εἶναι δύο, καθάπερ ἀσπετόχους, τὸν μὲν γὰρ ἀγαθὸν, τὸν δὲ φαῖλον δημιουργόν· οἱ δὲ τὸν μὲν ἀμείνονα θεόν, τὸν δὲ ἑτερον Δαίμονα καλοῦσιν. Zoroaster calls the former Ormuzd, the latter Ahriman, μέσον δὲ ἀμφόων τὸν Μίθρην εἶναι· διὰ καὶ Μίθρην Πέρσαι τὸν μέστην ὀνομάζουσιν· ἐδίδαξε μὲν τῷ ευκαταία θάω καὶ χαριστήρια, τῷ δὲ ἀποτρόπαια καὶ σκυθρωπά. c. 48: Χαλδαῖοι δὲ νῦν πλατηγῶν τοὺς θεοὺς γενέσθαι, οὓς καλοῦσι, δύο μὲν ἀγαθοὺς, δύο δὲ κακοποιούς, μέσους δὲ τοὺς τρεῖς ἀποφαίρουσι καὶ κουνούς. This dualism is found also among the philosophers, these ideas maintained a firm existence in the Christian view taken of Christianity, Judaism, and heathenism, as the complete, the incomplete, and the evil. These three religions appeared as revelations of three corresponding principles, which were first perceived in their true light from the position of Christianity. Matter (μα) was the evil principle, which, considered either with original or first developed consciousness, had revealed itself in heathenism.⁶ The creation of the world belonged, according to Gen. i., to the God of the Jews, who, commonly regarded as the first of the seven planet-princes,⁷ proceeded from the highest God only at an infinite distance, and was as incapable of willing the perfect, as of restraining the opposition of matter.⁸ On the other hand, the highest divinity was revealed even in Plato, who speaks in the clearest manner concerning it, ἐν τοῖς νόμοις (Leg. x. p. 669, and Tim. p. 528) οὐ μὲ ψυχῇ κινεῖσθαι τὸν κόσμον, ἀλλὰ πλείους ἰσως, δυὸν δὲ πάντως οὐκ ἐλάττωσιν· ὅθεν τὴν μὲν ἀγαθοῦργον εἶναι, τὴν δὲ ἐναντίαν ταύτῃ, καὶ τῶν ἐναντίων δημιουργόν· ἀπολείπει δὲ καὶ τρίτην τῶν μεταξύ φύσιν, οὐκ ἀψυχον, οὐδὲ ἀλογον, οὐδὲ ἀκίνητον ἐξ αὐτῆς,—ἀλλ' ἀνακειμένην ἀμφοῖν ἐκείναις, ἐφιεμένην δὲ τῆς ἀμείνορος αἰ, καὶ ποθοῦσαν, καὶ διώκουσαν. Similar to it is the Egyptian doctrine, in which Osiris is the good, Typhon the evil principle, and Isis that third nature. Numenius περὶ τὰ γὰρ (in Euseb. præp. evang. xi. 18) shows that the Demiurgus must be distinguished from the highest God, who, as he thinks, resembles the Logos of Philo: τὸν μὲν πρῶτον θεὸν ἀργὸν εἶναι, ἔργων ἑμπάντων καὶ βασιλέα, τὸν δημιουργικὸν δὲ θεὸν ἡγεμονεῖν, δι' οὐρανοῦ λόγῳ. διὰ δὲ τούτου καὶ ὁ στόλος ἡμῖν ἐστὶ, κάτω τοῦ νοῦ πεμπομένου ἐν διεξόδῳ πᾶσι τοῖς κοινωνῆσαι συντεταγμένοις. And in a preceding passage: Καὶ γὰρ οὐτε δημιουργεῖν ἐστὶ χρεὼν τὸν πρῶτον, καὶ τοῦ δημιουργοῦντος δὲ θεοῦ χρὴ εἶναι καὶ νομίζεσθαι πατέρα τὸν πρῶτον θεόν.

⁸ Origen de princ. l. iv. (Philocalia, ed. Spencer, p. 6): αἱ τε ἀπὸ τῶν αἰρέσεων ἀπαγνώσκοντες τό· πῦρ ἐκέκτανται ἐκ τοῦ θυμοῦ μου (Jer. xv. 14, then: Exod. xx. 5, 1 Reg. xv. 11, Es. xlv. 8, Am. iii. 6, Mich. i. 12, 1 Reg. xvi. 15), καὶ μυρία ὅσα τοῖς παραπλήσια ἀπιστῆσαι μὲν ὡς θεοῦ ταῖς γραφαῖς οὐ τετολήμασι, πιστεύοντες δὲ αὐτὰς εἶναι τοῦ δημιουργοῦ, ὡς Ἰουδαῖοι λατρεύουσιν, ψήθησαν ὡς ἀτελοὺς καὶ οὐκ ἀγαθὸν τυγχάνοντος τοῦ δημιουργοῦ, τὸν σωτήρα ἐπιδεδμηκέναι τελειότερον καταγγέλλοντα θεόν, ὃν φασὶ μὴ τὸν δημιουργὸν τυγχάνειν, διαφόρως περὶ τούτου κινούμενοι, καὶ ἀπαξ ἀποστάντες τοῦ δημιουργοῦ, ὅς ἐστιν ἀγέννητος μόνος θεός, ἀπαλασμοῖς ἑαυτοῦς ἐπιδεδώκασι, μυθοποιούντες ἑαυτοῖς ὑποθέσεις, καθ' ἃς ὁλοῦνται γεγονέναι τὰ βλεπόμενα, καὶ ἑτέρα τινα μὴ βλεπόμενα, ἅπερ ἡ ψυχὴ αὐτῶν ἀνείδωλοποίησεν. New Testament passages also may have been cited by the Gnostics in favour of the distinction, ex. gr. Joh. xii. 31, xiv. 30; 2 Cor. iv. 4; Gal. iii. 19; 1 Cor. ii. 6, 7; Eph. iii. 9 ff.

by Christ, who, elevated above all being, had produced out of himself only the world of light, a world of blessed spirits. Human spirits, πνεύματα, are rays of light proceeding from this blessed spirit, whose object is consequently to free themselves from the fetters of the Demiurgus and matter, in order that they may return into the world of light. To effect this was the object of Christ, who was thought by most gnostics to be one of the highest spirits of light. As the means of doing so, he left behind to his genuine disciples, the γνῶσις. These general ideas were carried out specifically in the separate schools, on which account they received different forms and modifications. Among the Alexandrian Gnostics, traces of the Platonic philosophy are most obvious;⁹ among the Syrian, the influence of Parsism was superadded. Among the former, the emanation doctrine was pre-eminent; among the latter, dualism.¹⁰ In all the schools, however, there remained a wide field for the play of fancy in making vivid to the perception the internal relations of the world of light, the origin of the Demiurgus from it, and the creation of the world. For this purpose the Alexandrian gnostics employed, but only as an unsecure guide, a representation which was borrowed from the Platonic doctrine of ideas, that the visible world, with its germs of life, is only an image and impression of the world of light.¹¹ With this view the allegorical interpretation of holy scripture already current could be readily united and employed in an arbitrary manner. Moreover, all the gnostics appealed particularly to a secret doctrine handed down to them from the apostles. The principle of the gnostic morality, freedom from the fetters of the Demiurgus, and of matter, led to rigid abstinence, and a contemplative life. But when the pride of dogmatism among the latter gnostics had stifled the moral sense, they partly fell upon the expedient of giving out the moral law to be only a work of the Demiurgus, for the sake of indulgence in several excesses.¹²

¹⁰ Neander divides the Gnostics into such as adhered to Judaism, and anti-Jewish: see the Hall. A. L. Z. April 1823, S. 831, and Baur's Gnosis, S. 97 ff. The latter assumes three classes; 1. Those who brought Christianity into closer connection with Judaism and heathenism; 2. Those who made a strict separation between Christianity and Judaism, and heathenism; 3. Those who identified Christianity and Judaism, and opposed both to heathenism in the form of Gnosis, (the pseudo-Clement. system.)

(CONTINUATION.) 1. ALEXANDRIAN Gnostics.

I. Basilides of Alexandria (about 125) represented seven δυνάμεις in particular, as emanating from the great original (θεὸς ἀρχῆτος) viz. νοῦς, λόγος, φρόνησις, σοφία, δόναμις, δικαιοσύνη, εἰρήνη. These composed the first kingdom of spirits (οὐρανός). From this emanated a second, and so on until there were 365 kingdoms of spirits, each of which was successively an imperfect impression of the preceding. The abstract idea of these spiritual kingdoms, i. e. God so far as he has revealed himself, in contradistinction from God in himself, he called Ἀβραάμ.¹ The seven angels of the lowest heaven, and especially the first among them, ὁ ἀρχων, the God of the Jews, are the creators of the world. To effect the return of human spirits to the world of light (ἀποκατάστασις), the νοῦς united itself with the man Jesus at his baptism. Hence the followers of Basilides celebrated the festival of the baptism as the epiphany (τῇ ἐπιφάνειᾳ, on the 11th Tybi, the 6th of January).² The man alone endured the sufferings, which, like all human sufferings, were expiations of guilt imputed, though in a former period of existence. The ἀρχὴν of Basilides is not evil, but only circumscribed; and therefore he subjects himself to the higher arrangement of the world, as soon as it is made known to him.³ The later followers of Basilides, on the contrary, conceived him to be an open adversary of the world of light, and rejected Judaism entirely, in which, however, Basilides could perceive types and preparations for something higher. In like manner, they received into their system the views of the Doctæ, and contrived by sophisms to make their moral doctrine more loose. They rendered themselves particularly odious, by supposing that they could deny the crucified One, and so escape persecution. The party was still in existence about 400.⁴

II. Still more ingenious is the system of Valentinus, who came from Alexandria to Rome about 140, and died in Cyprus about 160.⁵ From the great original, (according to him βυβλος, ² According to Jablonski de origine festi nativitatæ Christi diss. ii. § 8 ss., (Opuscul. ed. te Water, iii. 358), they borrowed this day from the Egyptians, who celebrated on it the inventio Osiridis. This application of the Egyptian festival, however, rests on an unfortunate alteration of the text in Plut. de Isis et Osir. c. 39. The festival of the inventio Osiridis occurred in November. See Wyttenbach animadverss. in Plut. moralia, ii. i. 225. Wieseler's chronolog. Synopse der Evang. S. 136. In like manner Jablonski incorrectly infers from Clem. Alex. Strom. iii. p. 340, that the followers of Basilides celebrated not only the baptism, but also the birth of Jesus, on the Epiphany.

προπάτωρ, προαρχή), with whom is the consciousness of himself, (ἐνοια, σιγή) emanate in succession male and female aeons,⁶ (Νοῦς or Μωγουρή and ἀλήθεια, λόγος and ζωή, ἀσθρῶπος and ἐκκλησία, &c.) so that 30 aeons together (distinguished into the Ὀγδοάς, Δεκάς and Δωδεκάς) form the πλήρωμα.⁷ From the passionate striving of the last aeon, the σοφία, to unite with Bythos itself, arises an untimely being (ἡ κάτω σοφία, ἐσθόμεναι, Ἀχαμώθ, i. e. πῶρρη), which, wandering about outside the pleroma, communicates the germ of life to matter, and forms the Δημιουργός of psychical material, who immediately creates the world. In this three kinds of material are mixed, τὸ πνευματικόν, τὸ ψυχικόν, τὸ ὕλικόν. The result of the course of the world is, that the two first should be separated from the last, and that τὸ πνευμ. should return to the pleroma, τὸ ψυχικόν into the τόπος μεσότητος, where the Achamoth now dwells. In the mean time, two new aeons, Christ and the Holy Spirit, had arisen, in order to restore the disturbed harmony in the pleroma; then there emanated from all the aeons, Jesus (σωτήρ) who, as future associate (σύνυγος) of the Achamoth, shall lead back into the pleroma this and the pneumatic natures. The σωτήρ united itself at the baptism with the psychical Messiah promised by the Demiurgus. Just so is the letter of the doctrines of Jesus for psychical men. On the other hand, the spirit introduced by the Soter or Saviour, is for the spiritual. These theosophic dreams were naturally capable of being moulded in many different ways; and accordingly, among Valentine's disciples are found many departures from their teacher. The most important of his followers were Heracleon,⁸ Ptolemy,⁹ and Marcus.

Euseb. praep. evang. xi. 10: τὸ δὲ οὐ ποτὲ ἦν, οὐτε ποτὲ γένηται· ἀλλ' ἐστὶν αἰεὶ ἐν χρόνῳ μὴ ὠρισμένῳ, τῷ ἐνεστώτῳ μόνῳ. τοῦτον μὲν οὖν τὸν ἐνεστώτα εἰ τις ἐθέλει καλεῖν αἰῶνα, καὶ γὰρ συμβόλομαι. (I have believed it necessary to place the μὴ, which stands in the usual text before γένηται, before ὠρισμένῳ). Thus among the Gnostics αἰῶνες are developments of the Divine Being, who, as such, are elevated above the limitations of time.

III. To the system of Valentinus was nearly allied that of the Ophites,¹⁰ who, perhaps, existed as a party in Egypt even before the Valentinians.¹¹ Their pleroma is simpler than that of Valentinus. From the Bythus emanate the first man, the second man or the son of man, the holy spirit. The last gives birth, by means of the first two, to the perfect masculine light-nature, the Christ, and the defective female σοφία, Ἀχαμέθ, προδευσις. The creator of the world (Ἰαλδαβαὶθ, probably דיהא אלהי, son of chaos), the first of the seven planet princes, is ambitious and malevolent, and is therefore involved in continual strife with his mother Sophia, who endeavours to deprive him of the pneumatic natures. The Ὀφιδόμορφοι, the rulers of Hyle, and the cause of all evil, is an image of him. The christology of the Ophites is altogether like that of Valentinus, with this difference, that Jesus is the psychical Christ the pneumatic Messiah.¹² The Ophites were divided into various sects, (ex. gr. Sethians, Cainites). One of them looked for the Sophia in the serpent of Genesis, and hence the name of the whole party. This continued the longest of all the Gnostic sects. (So late as 530 A.D. Justinian enacted laws against them, Cod. lib. i. tit. v. 1, 18, 19, 21).

IV. Carpocrates struck out an entirely different way.¹³ In his view, Jesus was a mere man, like Pythagoras, Plato, and Aristotle, who had set an example of the mode in which the

in the letter two parts proceeding from different authors, both which, however, could not have been written by Ptolemy.

Gnostic must free himself from the Demiurgi (ἄγγελοι κοσμοποιοί), and unite with the highest divinity (μοῦσις). As the Carpocratians had portraits of those Grecian philosophers and of Jesus in their sanctuaries, so they built in Cephalenia a temple to Epiphanes,¹⁴ a youth seventeen years old, the son of their founder, after his death. (CONTINUATION.) 2. SYRIAN Gnostics.

The Syrian Gnostics developed the doctrine of dualism more decidedly than the Egyptian, to which the neighbourhood of Persia may have largely contributed. With this was connected their fanatical asceticism, in which they exceeded the Egyptians, and their Docetic views.¹ Saturninus in Antioch, a contemporary of Basilides, taught that by the original cause (πατήρ θεῶν) the world of spirits was created by successive steps, and placed in the lowest gradation the spirits of the seven planets (ἄγγελοι κοσμοκράτορες). In opposition to them stood the evil principle (ὁ Σατανᾶς), who set in antagonism to the race of men of light animated by the highest divinity, a race of evil men, so that both kinds of men are continued beside one another. In order to avoid all contact with the evil principle, the followers of Saturninus abstained from marriage and the eating of flesh. The wide diffusion of the Gnostic opinions in Syria and the countries lying eastward of it may be seen in the case of Bardesanes in Edessa (about 172),² who, although he believed in two eternal principles, derived evil from the Hyle, and held many other Gnostic tenets, was still looked upon as orthodox in that place. Contemporary with him was the Assyrian Tatian,³ who had been a disciple of Justin Martyr, but after his death had returned to his native land, and founded there a Gnostic sect, which was chiefly distinguished by abstinence (Ἐγκρατεῖαι, Ὑποπαράστροφαι, Aquarii),⁴ and continued till after the fourth century.

¹⁴ Fragments of his work περὶ δικαιοσύνης preserved by Clemens Alex. Strom. iii. p. 512 s. His moral principles: οἱ νόμοι, ἀνθρώπων ἀμαθίαν κολάζειν μὴ δυσχεμεῖν, παρανομεῖν ἐδίδαξαν· ἡ γὰρ ἰδιότης τῶν νομῶν τὴν κοινῶν τούτου θεῶν νόμου κατέτεμεν καὶ παρατρώγει.—Κοινῇ δὲ θεὸς ἅπαντα ἀνθρώπων ποιήσας, καὶ τὸ θῆλυ τῷ ἀρρενὶ κοινῇ συναγαγὼν, καὶ πάνθ' ὁμοίως τὰ ζῶα κολλήσας, τὴν δικαιοσύνην ἀπέφηνεν κοινῶν μετ' ἰσότητος. ¹⁶ The inscriptions which, as pretended, were found in Cyrene, and were regarded at first as Carpocratian (cf. G. Gesenius, l. c.), were afterwards shown to be recent fabrications, like many other spurious productions, particularly Eumali Cyrenaici hist. Libycae, lib. vi. tus, which were made known collectively by the Marquis Fortia d'Urban in Avignon. They were meant to confirm the hypotheses which this person had formerly put forth respecting an island, Atlantis, in the Mediterranean Sea, which was sunk at the flood, in which island a St Simonian community of goods and wives is said to have prevailed. See Boeckh preface to the Berlin Lectionskataloge, Easter, 1832. Gesenius in the Hallische A. L. Z. 1835. August, S. 462. When M. J. R. Pacho, relation d'un voyage dans la Marmarique, la Cyrénaïque, &c. Paris 1827, 4. p. 128, believed that he had found in a pit at Lameloudèh, in Cyrenaica, traces referring to a place where the Carpocratians assembled, he was led astray by the opinions at first pronounced on those inscriptions. A cross with a serpent is a common Christian symbol, according to John iii. 14; and Catholic Christians may as well have used that pit as a place of meeting, like those at Massakhit, p. 114.

² Bar Daizon (Bayer hist. Osrh. et Edess. p. 13) lived under the prince Abgar bar Maanu, and gave up his book, περὶ εἰσαγωγῆς, to Antoninus Verus, of which Euseb. praep. Evang. vi. 10, has preserved a fragment (republished in Alexandri Aphrodisiensis, Ammonii, Plotini, Bardesanis et Gemisti Plethonis de fato quae supersunt graece, rec. et notas adjecit J. C. Orellius, Turici 1824, 8, p. 202 ss). He gained over many adherents by his hymns. The fifty-six hymns of Ephraem Syrus against heretics are important for the knowledge of his system. Cf. Bardesanes Gnosticus Syrorum primus hymnologus, comm. historico-theol. quam scripsit Aug. Hahn, Lips. 1819, 8. C. Kuehner astronomiae et astrologiae in doctrina Gnosticorum vestigia, p. i. ⁴ These names, as well as the appellation Docetae, certainly designate a heresy, which was common to many parties; but they appear to have been specially given to the followers of Tatian because a particular sect-name for them does not appear.

(CONTINUATION.) 3. MARCION AND HIS SCHOOL.¹

The Gnosis of Marcion, the son of a bishop of Sinope, who attached himself to the Syrian Cerdo at Rome, (between 140 and 150), and developed there a system of his own, has a character quite peculiar. He assumed three moral principles (ἀρχαί), viz. the θεὸς ἀγαθός, the δημιουργὸς δίκαιος, and the ὕλη (ὁ ποτηρὸς, ὁ διδβόλος). To free men,—who had only to expect from the Demiurgus, according to the principles of strict justice, either condemnation or at most a limited happiness,—to free them, I say, from such a yoke, Christ suddenly descended into Capernaum with the appearance of a body, and proclaimed to men the good deity hitherto unknown. Those who believe in Christ, and lead a new, holy life, from love to the good deity, will be blessed with happiness in his heavenly kingdom, while others are left to the strict justice of the Demiurgus. Marcion required of the perfect Christians a strictly ascetic life, abstinence from marriage, avoidance of all earthly pleasures, and restriction to a few simple articles of diet. But all the disciples of this school were not faithful (fideles). Many continued catechumens for a long time. Marcion's gospel (εὐαγγέλιον) was that of Luke, mutilated according to his system; in addition to which, he used ten of the Pauline epistles (ὁ ἀπόστολος), not, however, without corruption.²

² The adulteration was first doubted by J. S. Semler in his paraphra-

In a work entitled "Antitheses," he endeavoured to prove the different characters of Judaism and Christianity, by means of positions from both set over against one another.

Respecting metaphysical relations, as far as they do not affect the moral interests of men, no declarations are found in Marcion. His disciples, therefore, borrowed such principles partly from the Syrian Gnostics, partly, like Apelles, from the Valentinians, so that the school of Marcion was afterwards divided into many branches.³

As a peculiar impress is stamped on Christianity in all countries by the national character, so also in Phrygia it could not but experience the influence of the popular tendency to a sensuous, enthusiastic worship of deity. The doctrines of supernatural gifts of the spirit,¹ the renunciation of the earthly, and the millennial reign, were susceptible of such development.² These subjects appear to have been peculiar favourites in Phrygia very early,³ where the oppression of persecution and opposition to the speculations of the Gnostics, may have accelerated their one-sided development. Accordingly, Montanus,⁴ at Pepuza (about 150),⁵ in an ecstatic state,⁶ began to announce, that the Paraclete

² As far as Montanism proceeded out of these doctrines, Schwegler designates it as a development of Ebionitism, which had been prevalent up to that time in the church; but he arbitrarily understands by Ebionitism the entire Jewish basis of Christianity.

³ Ex. gr. Philip and his daughters in Hierapolis (to whom the Montanist Proculus against Caius refers, Euseb. iii. 31), Papias (§ 35, note 7).

⁴ According to Didymus de Trin. lib. iii. cap. penult., he had formerly been τεπερὶ αἰδωλῶν. Jerome, ep. 27 ad Marcellam, calls him abscissum et semivirum. He appears accordingly to have been a priest of Cybele, a circumstance which must have been then of importance in his conception of Christianity. Schwegler, S. 243, may declare Montanus to be a mythic personage, but younger contemporaries, the anonymous writer in Euseb. v. 17, and Apollonius, l. c. v. 18, mention him.

⁶ Following the example of Philo, Justin and Athenagoras also consider the state of prophetic inspiration as an ecstasis. The former (coh. ad Graecos, p. 9) compares the prophets during it to a lyre which is touched by the Holy Spirit as the plectrum; the latter compares them in the same sense to a flute (Schwegler, S. 100). In like manner the Holy Spirit, through Montanus, describes the ecstasy of the Montanist prophets, apud Epiphanius. haer. xlviii. 4: Ἰδοὺ ἀνθρώπος ὡσεὶ λύρα, καὶ γὰρ ἱεραμεὶ ὡσεὶ πλῆκτρον· ὁ ἀνθρώπος κοιμᾶται, καὶ γὰρ γρηγορῶ· Ἰδοὺ κέραις ὁρῶν ὁ ἐξιστάμενος καρδίᾳ ἀνθρώπων, καὶ διδοὺς καρδίᾳ ἀνθρώπων. Tertulian calls the ecstasis which he explains by amentia (lib. de anima, c. 11) Sancti Spiritus vis, operatrix prophetiae. That which he describes bears a striking resemblance to magnetic clairvoyance (l. c., c. 9); Est hodie

had imparted itself to him for the purpose of giving the church its manly perfection. Two fanatical women, Maximilla and Priscilla attached themselves to him as prophetesses; and thus a party was formed, the adherents of which, vainly presuming that they alone possessed the last revelations of the spirit,⁷ as πνευματικοί, full of spiritual arrogance, looked down upon other Christians as ψυχικοί. These new prophets did not wish to alter the received creed, but to confirm it anew.⁸ On the other hand, they prescribed new and rigorous fasts,⁹ forbade second marriage, attributed extraordinary value to celibacy and martyrdom, manifested profound contempt for everything earthly, and taught that incontinence, murder, and idolatry, though they did not exclude from the grace of God (Tertullian de pudic. c. 3), shut a person out for ever from the church.¹⁰ At the same time, they were not afraid to proclaim aloud the end of the world, and the

A similarity also to the speaking with tongues among the Corinthians (1 Cor. xiv.) cannot but be noticed. Schwegler, S. 83.

⁷ The Montanists had not an uninterrupted series of prophets. The Anon. ap. Euseb. v. 17, wrote in the 14th year after the death of Maximilla, and says, that since then none had boasted of the gift of prophecy. But in the time of Tertullian there was again a Montanist prophetess in Africa, see note 6.

⁸ So Tertullian adv. Praxeas, c. 2, § 13, appeals to the prophecies of the Paraclete in favour of his doctrine of the Trinity. Schwegler, S. 8.

⁹ At first there were two yearly, each one containing a week, with the exception of Saturday and Sunday (Tertullian de jejun. c. 15) afterwards three (Hieron. ep. 27 ad Marcellam), in case the third be not the usual ecclesiastical quadragesimal fast, as Valesius ad Euseb. v. 18 and Schwegler suppose, and which, therefore, Tertullian has not reckoned.

From John xvi. he draws the conclusion that the administratio Paracleti is, quod disciplina dirigitur, quod scripturae revelantur, quod intellectus reformatur, quod ad meliora proficitur. Just as in nature everything ripens gradually, sic et justitia—primo fuit in rudimentis, natura deum metuens. Dehinc per legem et prophetas promovit in infantiam. Dehinc per Evangelium efferbuit in juventutem. Nunc per Paracletum componitur in maturitatem. Compare the other writings of Tertullian in

Priscilla or Quintilla apud Epiphan. haer. xlix. 1: ἐν ἰδίᾳ γυναικὸς ἐσχηματισμένος ἐν στολῇ λαμπρῇ ἦλθε πρὸς με Χριστὸς, καὶ ἐπέβαλεν ἐν ἐμοὶ τὴν σοφίαν, καὶ ἀπεκάλυψε μοι, τοῦτον τὸν τόπον (τὴν Πεκούζην) εἶναι ἁγιον, καὶ ὧδε τὴν Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ κατεῖναι. A collection of Montanist predictions in Wernsdorf de Montanistis, § 4, others besides in Didymus Alex. de trinit. lib. iii. cap. penult. Cf. Tertullian de resurrect. carnis, c. 63: At enim Deus omnipotens—effundens in novissimis diebus de suo spiritu in omnem carnem, in servos suos et ancillas, et fidem laborantem resurrectionis carnalis animavit, et pristina instrumenta manifestis verborum et sensuum luminibus ab omni ambiguitatis obscuritate purgavit.—(Spiritus sanctus) jam omnes retro ambiguitates et quas voluit parabolas, aperta atque perspicua totius sacramenti praedicatione discussit, per novam prophetiam de paraclete inundantem. The same, in a fragment in the Praedestinatus haer. 26: Hoc solum discrepamus (a Psychicis), quod secundas nuptias non recipimus, et prophetiam Montani de futuro judicio non recusamus. How fanatical they were in their expectations may be seen in Tertullian de spectaculis, c. 30: Quale autem spectaculum in proximo est, adventus Domini jam indubitati, jam superbi, jam triumphantis!—Quid admirer, quid videam, ubi gaudeam, ubi exultem, tot spectans reges, qui in coelum recepti nuntiabantur, cum ipso Jove et ipsis suis testibus in imis tenebris congemiscentes! item praesides, persecutores dominici nominis, saevioribus quam ipsi contra Christianos saevierunt flammis insultantibus liquescentes! praeterea sapientes illos philosophos coram discipulis suis una conflagentibus erubescences, &c. Tertullian's last work, de spe fidelium, mentioned by him, adv. Marcion, iii. c. 24, was exclusively devoted to this object.

¹² Eusebius, iv. 27, and v. 16—19, mentions the polemic writings of Claudius Apollinaris, Miltiades, an anonymous person, (who, according to Jerome, cat. c. 37 and 39, was Rhodon; by several modern authors incorrectly supposed to be Asterius Urbanus, cf. Wernsdorf de Montanistes, p. 4), Apollonius, and Serapion, and gives extracts from the last three.—The ἐκτασις of the Montanist prophets gave special offence. It was asserted in opposition that all ἐκτασις is an inspiration proceeding from demons, cf. Anonymus apud Euseb. v. 16, 3, and Miltiadis σύγγραμμα περὶ τοῦ μὴ δεῖν προφήτην ἐκτασσεῖν λαλεῖν (Euseb. v. 17, 1). Tertull. adv. Marcion, iv. c. 22: defendimus, in causa novae prophetiae, gratiae ecstasin, id est amentiam, convenire. excluded from communion by the churches of Asia Minor.¹³ Some, however, led on by opposition to farther inquiry, began to reject even the support which Montanism had in the doctrines of the church at that time.¹⁴ In this respect, those afterwards called Alogi went farthest, who not only denied the continuance of charismata in the church, and millenarianism, but rejected the Apocalypse, and even the Gospel of John.¹⁵

This very mode of opposition, against which, even in Asia Minor, Melito, bishop of Sardis, presented himself as an antagonist,¹⁶

¹⁵ Compare especially the above cited work of Mekel, whom also Olshausen (Ächtheit der vier canon. Evang. S. 254 ff.) follows. Irenaeus iii. c. 11: Alii vero, ut donum Spiritus frustrentur, quod in novissimis temporibus secundum placitum patris effusum est in humanum genus, illam speciem non admittunt, quae est secundum Joannis evangelium, in qua Paracletum se missurum Dominus promisit; sed simul et evangelium et propheticum repellunt Spiritum. Infelices vere, qui pseudoprophetae [leg. pseudoprophetas] quidem esse volunt, prophetiae vero gratiam ab ecclesia repellunt; similia patientes his, qui propter eos, qui in hypocrisi veniunt, etiam a fratrum communicatione se abstinere. Datur autem intelligi, quod hujusmodi neque apostolum Paulum recipiant. In ea enim epistola, quae est ad Corinthios, de prophetis charismatibus diligenter locutus est, et scit viros et mulieres prophetantes. Per haec igitur omnia peccantes in Spiritum Dei, in irremissibile incidunt peccatum. The name ἄλογοι appears first in Epiphanius, haer. li. adv. Alogos, comp. especially the passage cap. 33, according to the following correction of the text (so Merkel, S. 35 ff.): ἐνοικησάντων γὰρ τούτων ἐκείσε (eis Θουάπειρα) καὶ τῶν κατὰ Φρύγας, [οἱ μὲν] θύκην λύκων ἀπαξάντων τὰς διαβολὰς τῶν ἀκραίων πλοίων, μετήνεγκαν τὴν πᾶσαν πόλιν εἰς τὴν αὐτῶν αἰρεσιν· οἱ δὲ ἀρνούμενοι τὴν Ἀποκάλυψιν, τοῦ λόγου τούτου εἰς ἀνατροπὴν, κατ' ἐκείνου καιροῦ ἐστρατεύοντο.

They were naturally very welcome to the Montanists, and hence Melito was praised by Tertullian even in the Montanist period of the latter's life (Hieronymus in catal. c. 24: Hujus elegans et declamatoriam ingenium laudans Tertullianus in septem libris, quos scripsit adversus ecclesiam pro Montano, dicit, contributed largely, perhaps to procure Montanism many friends in the west.¹⁷ The western churches never declared themselves exclusively in favour of any of the conflicting parties in Asia;¹⁸ and thus the principles of the Montanists, which were, after all, only the carrying out of orthodox doctrines, could be diffused there,¹⁹ without the necessity of a Montanist party separating itself from the rest of the church.

The Montanists in Asia, who had their peculiar ecclesiastical constitution,²⁰ continued down to the sixth century.²¹ Besides their usual names, Montanistae, Cataphryges (οἱ κατὰ Φρύγας), other appellations were applied to them, some of which may have referred to particular sections, while others were mere names of derision.²²

¹⁷ Cf. Irenaeus above, note 14 and 15. The account of Praedestinatus haer. 26: Scripsit contra eos (Montanistas) librum s. Soter Papa urbis is highly improbable, and is perhaps nothing more than a conclusion from Tertullian adv. prax. c. 1, praecessorum ejus auctoritates defendendo.

¹⁸ The Christians of Lyons and Vienne had added to their account of the persecution they endured, a judgment on the controversy with the Montanists, which Eusebius unfortunately omitted, (Euseb. v. 3, 2): ἐκθέμενοι καὶ τῶν παρ' αὐταῖς τελειωθέντων μαρτύρων διαφόρους ἐπιστολάς, ὡς ἐν δασμοῖς ἐνὶ ὑπάρχαρχοις τοῖς ἐν Ἀσίᾳ καὶ Φρυγίᾳ ἀδελφοῖς διεχάραξαν· οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ Ἐλευθέριον, τῷ τότε Ῥωμαίων ἐπισκόπον, τῆς τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν εἰρήνης ἕνεκα πρεσβεύοντες. Gothofredus ad novellam iii. Theodosii jun. From such corrupted names, however, new heresies have been etymologically deduced.

THIRD CHAPTER.

INTERNAL HISTORY OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

The internal development of the orthodox church depended in a great degree on its external relations, the persecution of the heathen, and the attacks of heretics. Christian literature had been confined till now solely to didactic and admonitory letters, seven of which in this period also, proceeded from the pious bishop of Corinth, Dionysius;¹ but now it developed itself in other directions, particularly in defending Christianity against the heathen, and in combating heretics. It was corrupted, however, by a mass of spurious writings. Those external relations could not be without an influence on the formation of doctrines, since they led of necessity to the exhibition and support of particular dogmas. In like manner, ecclesiastical usages received from them a more definite character. At the same time, it was a circumstance of great importance, that several Platonic philosophers had now come over to Christianity, by means of whom Platonism continued to gain more friends among the Christians. Besides, the Greek language was almost the only ecclesiastical tongue.² Although several Latin translations of the Bible were made,³ yet the writers even of the western church wrote in

² At this period originated the custom of the Roman Church which continued down to the middle ages, of requiring those who were to be baptised to recite the creed first in Greek then in Latin. Cf. Edm. Martene de antiquis eccl. ritibus, ed. 2, T. i. p. 88; A. Gavanti thesaurus sacr. rituum ed. G. M. Meratus, t. i. p. 42, and the other works quoted in Walchii biblioth. symbol. vetus, p. 57.

Greek. But Christian ideas had a freshness of life only in the people who spoke the language of the New Testament. In the west, they merely received what the east produced.

APOLOGIES FOR CHRISTIANITY AGAINST HEATHEN AND JEWS.

J. A. Fabricii delectus argumentorum et syllabus scriptorum, qui veritatem religio-christ. asseruerunt, Hamb. 1725, 4. H. G. Tzschirner's Geschichte der Apologetik, Leipz. Th. 1, 1805, 8. The same author's Fall des Heidenthums, i. 202 ff. A list of the apologetic works may be found in Danz de Eusebio Caes. p. 93 ss.—The best edition of all the apologists is given by Prudentine Maranus. Paris 1742, fol.

The pressure of circumstances gave rise at this time to various apologies for Christianity, which are supposed in part to have been presented to emperors;¹ the first to Hadrian (126), in Athens, by Quadratus and Aristedes (Euseb. iv. 3; Hieron catal. 19, 20).² The first apology of Justin Martyr († 166)³ is addressed to Antoninus Pius (138 or 139), the second and smaller belongs, according to the usual opinion, to Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Verus (161—166).⁴ The other apologetic writings designed for the ¹ First doubted by Bayle, s. v. Athenagore. Semler, introduction to Baumgarten's Polemik, ii. 43. Henke, i. 129. In opposition to these doubts, see Tzschirner, Fall des Heidenthums, i. 233. Semisch, Justin d. M. i. 63.

² The apology of Quadratus was still extant in the beginning of the seventh century (Photius, cod. 163). That Ado (about 860) had the apology of Aristedes does not follow from his Martyrolog. ad d. 5, N. (cf. J. Dallaei de scriptis, quae sub Dionysii Areop. et Ignatii Antioch. nominibus circumferuntur, p. 90 s.): and the account of de la Guilletière Athènes anciennes et nouvelles, Paris 1676, p. 146, of its being still preserved at that time in the monastery of Medelli at Athens, is as little worthy of credit as all the rest of the narrative of this pretended journey (see on it Spon voyage d'Italie et Dalm. Chateaubriand's Travels from Paris to Jerusalem, part i. p. 33.)

⁴ So according to Pagi, Tillemont, Mosheim, and Semisch. On the other hand, according to Valesius, Longuerue, and Neander (KG. i. ii. 1144), it was also written under Antoninus Pius. F. Chr. Boll, in Illgen's Zeitschrift, 1842, iii. 3, assumes that both apologies made up originally one whole, which may have been written about 150. Apologiam primam, ed. J. E. Grabe, Oxon. 1700, alteram H. Hutchin, ib. 1703.

heathen, which are attributed to him, are of more doubtful origin.⁸ To Marcus Aurelius, Athenagoras addressed his προσβόλη πρὸς Ἰουλιανῶν,⁹ and Melito, bishop of Sardis,⁷ and Claudius Apollinarius, bishop of Hierapolis,⁸ their apologies since lost (Euseb. iv. 26; Hieron. cat. 24, 26). At the same time appeared the apology of Miltiades (Euseb. v. 17; Hieron. cat. 39); of Theophilus, bishop of Antioch, in three books to Autolycus,⁹ and of Tatian, the λόγος πρὸς Ἕλληνας.¹⁰ On the other hand, the epistle to Diognetus is older.¹¹ Perhaps also M. Minucius Felix, a lawyer in Rome, ⁸ The λόγος παρασκευὴς πρὸς Ἕλληνας was first denied to be Justin Martyr's by Oudin, lately by Herbig (comm. de scriptis, quae sub nomine Justini phil. et mart. circumferuntur. Vratia. 1833), Arendt (krit. Untersuchungen über die Schriften Just. d. M. in the Tübinger theol. Quartalschr., 1834, ii. 256), and Moehler (Patrologie, i. 224), but it is defended by Semisch, i. 105. The λόγος πρὸς Ἕλληνας is pronounced unauthentic by most writers, even by Semisch, i. 163. On the fragment πρὸς ἀναστάσεως opinions are divided. Herbig, l. c. p. 74, endeavours at great length to prove the spuriousness; Semisch, i. 146, the genuineness of it. There is also great difference of sentiment respecting the work πρὸς μοναρχίαν. Herbig, p. 69, and Semisch, i. 167, regard it as spurious. In the meantime, however, all these works belong to this period.

The earlier more prevailing opinion that Minucius belongs to the interval between Tertullian and Cyprian, 220—230, rested particularly on the testimony of Jerome, who Catal. cap. 53 says: Tertullianus presbyter nunc demum primus post Victorem et Apollonium Latinorum ponitur; and first mentions Minucius in cap. 58. On the other hand, Blondell (de l'Eucharistie, p. 119). Dallaeus (against whom see Baylé's dictionn. s. v. Fronton), J. D. ab Hoven (in Lindner's second edition, p. 261), Oelrichs (de scriptt. eccl. lat. p. 24) place him, from internal grounds, and because, cap. 9, Fronto (see § 40, note 2) is mentioned as still living, in the age of Marcus Aurelius. This view has been lately adopted by Kestner (Agape, S. 356), H. Meirer (comm. de Minucio Felice, Turici 1824, 8), Russwurm, and v. Muralto, l. c. and even Tschirner (Fall des Heidenthums, i. 219), who had formerly defended the old opinion in the Geschichte der Apologetik, i. 279.

¹⁵ Here an important preparation had been already made for them by the heathen philosophers, especially by the view that had originated they refer to the fact that Christianity agrees with the wisest philosophers, they represent the latter again as having drawn their wisdom from the Old Testament. In proving the divine origin of Christianity, they attach special value to the predictions of the Old Testament, the miracles of Jesus and the apostles, the miraculous powers continuing among Christians,¹⁶ the rapid spread of Christianity, and the steadfastness of its followers in times of persecution. They demand, in fine, the same protection for Christians, which other philosophical sects enjoyed.

In defence of Christianity against Judaism, there appeared at this period two dialogues; under Hadrian the ἀπολογία Παρίσκου καὶ Ἰδωροῦ, which was afterwards, but certainly without reason, ascribed to Aristo of Pella;¹⁷ and ἡ ἀπολογία πρὸς Τρόφωνα Ἰουδαίου of Justin Martyr.¹⁸

¹⁷ This ἀπολογία or ἡ ἀπολογία, cited so early as by Celsus (Orig. c. Cels. iv. p. 199), is lost, and even of the Latin translation of one Celsus the Praef. ad Vigilium (in opp. Cypriani) is alone extant. Maximus († 662) comm. ad Dionys. Areop. de myst. theol. c. 1, is the first who names Aristo as the author, but adds that Clement of Alex. hypotyposeon, lib. vi. ascribes this dialogue to Luke. On the other hand, Hieron. in quae. in Genes. says: In principio fecit Deus coelum et terram. Plurique existimant, sicut in altercatione quoque Iasonis et Papisci scriptum est—in Hebraeo haberi: in filio fecit Deus coelum et terram. Quod falsum esse ipsius rei veritas comprobatur. A Hebrew Jewish-Christian like Aristo could never have written that. The Chron. paschale ad Olymp. 228, ann. 2, says that Ἀρελλῆς and Ἀριστῶν (probably ὁ Πηλαῖος Ἀριστῶν) handed over an apology to Hadrian. Since this is not found, it seems that some conjectured they discovered it in the dialogue in question.

COMBATING OF HERETICS—CATHOLIC CHURCH—CANON OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

The writings of the earlier opponents of heretics, the work of Justin Martyr against all heresics;¹ the books of Agrippa Cas-tor (about 135), who wrote against Basilides; of Justin Martyr, Theophilus of Antioch, Rhodon, Philip bishop of Gortyna, and of Modestus, who all wrote against Marcion; of Miltiades, Claudius Apollinaris, Serapion, bishop of Antioch, and Apollonius, who all wrote against the Montanists, have been lost, except a few fragments. On the other hand, we still possess the work of Irenaeus (bishop of Lyons, 177—202), ἐλεγχος καὶ ἀνατροπὴ τῆς ψευδοκρίτου γνώσεως in 5 books, but for the most part merely in an old Latin translation.²

The discordant opinions of the philosophical schools (αἵρεσις), which were to have been removed by the one, certain, Christian truth, had again appeared within the province of Christianity at this period, in the different parties. The ecclesiastical idea of αἵρεσις attached itself to them chiefly from the characteristic of separation from the unity implied in the true church, and of insecure subjective presumption;³ but since Christian truth appeared not likely to be mistaken without blame attaching to the individuals, it was generally believed that the sources of the heresies must be looked for in nothing else than self-will, pride, ambition, desire of rule, and unamiableness.⁴ To the opposition presented to unbelievers, with which alone the church had been contented till the present time,⁵ there was now added the other opposition directed against heretics. By this means the idea of the church being farther developed, there arose the expression ἐκκλησία καθολική,⁶ i.e. the only church,⁷ out of which there is no salvation,⁸ which is destined to become universal, and has already given practical proof of this destination.⁹

The writers against heresies certainly went into the peculiar doctrines of the heretics, for the purpose of refuting them; but they particularly combated their pretensions in alleging that their doctrine was the genuine doctrine of Christ and the apostles, by proving, from the agreement of the apostolic churches, that the doctrines of the apostles had been preserved without alteration in the catholic church.¹⁰ The common interest which

Si haec ita sunt, constat proinde omnem doctrinam, quae cum illis ecclesiis apostolicis, matricibus et originalibus fidei conspiret, veritati deputandam. C. 36: Percurre ecclesias apostolicas, apud quas ipsae adhuc cathedrae Apostolorum suis locis praesident, apud quas authenticæ literæ eorum recitantur, sonantes vocem et representantes faciem uniuscujusque. Proxima est tibi Achaja? habes Corinthum. Si non longe es a Macedonia, habes Philippos, habes Thessalonicenses. Si potes in Asiam tendere, habes Ephesum. Si autem Italiae adjaces, habes Roman, unde nobis quoque auctoritas praesto est. Ista quam Felix ecclesia, cui totam doctrinam Apostoli cum sanguine suo profuderunt, ubi Petrus passioni dominicae adaequatur, ubi Paulus Johannis exitu coronatur, ubi Apostolus Johannes, posteaquam in oleum igneum demersus nihil passus est, in insulam relegatur. Videamus quid dixerit, quid cum Africanis quoque ecclesiis contesserarit, &c. (Comp. Neander's Antignosticus, S. 313 ff.) But in the west the Roman was the only apostolic church. Hence they naturally appealed to it there chiefly, Iren. iii. 3. Traditionem itaque Apostolorum in toto mundo manifestatam, in omni ecclesia adest perspicere omnibus, qui vera velint videre, et habemus annumerare eos, qui ab Apostolis instituti sunt Episcopi in ecclesiis et successores eorum usque ad nos, qui nihil tale docuerunt.—Sed quoniam valde longum est, in hoc tali volumine omnium ecclesiarum enumerare successiones; maximæ et antiquissimæ et omnibus cognitæ a gloriosissimis duobus Apostolis, Petro et Paulo, Romæ fundatæ et constitutæ ecclesiae eam, quam habet ab Apostolis, traditionem et annunciatam hominibus fidem, per successiones Episcoporum pervenientiam usque ad nos, indicantes confundimus omnes eos, qui quoquo modo—praeterquam oportet colligant. Ad hanc enim ecclesiam propter potentiorē (so all MSS., Massuet was the first that altered it into potiorē) principalitatem necesse est omnem convenire Ecclesiam, hoc est, eos qui sunt undique fideles, in qua semper ab his, qui sunt undique, conservata est ea, quae est ab Apostolis, traditio. Irenaeus wishes to prove that the doctrine of the Catholic Church is apostolic, preserved by the successors of the bishops ordained by the apostles. Since it is too tedious to point out this connection of the apostles with all churches, he wishes to limit his proof to the Church of Rome alone, and finally to represent the doctrine of the Roman Church as necessarily agreeing with that of the whole remaining church. Necesse est (ἀνάγκη) must was felt against heretics, and the feeling of oneness, strengthened by the idea of a catholic church, led to a closer union, of which the apostolic churches were regarded as the centre, though without the existence of an external subordination among them.

As the heretics appealed to apostolic traditions, and even used pretended apostolic writings in justification of their sentiments, the attention of catholic Christians was by this means directed to the genuine writings of the apostles scattered among not be confounded with oportet (δεῖ); the former expresses a natural necessity, the latter an obligation, duty. Potentior is ικανώτερος (cf. iii. 3, 3: potentissimas literas, ικανωτέρων γραφῶν), principalitas probably πρωτεία (iv. 38, 3: πρωτεύει μὲν ἐν πᾶσι ὁ θεός, principalitatem quidem habebit in omnibus Deus). Accordingly the Greek text may have been:

πρὸς ταύτην γὰρ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν διὰ τὴν ἱκανωτέραν πρωτείαν ἀνάγκη πᾶσαν συμβαλεῖν τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, τοῦτόστι τοὺς πανταχόθεν πιστοὺς, ἐν ᾧ δὲ τοῖς πανταχόθεν συνετήρηται ἡ ἀπὸ τῶν Ἀποστόλων παράδοσις. "For with this church must the whole church, i. e. the believers of every place, agree, of course, on account of its more important pre-eminence." A pre-eminence belonged to all apostolic churches; to the Roman Church a more important pre-eminence, on account of its greatness, and its having been founded by two most distinguished apostles. In the rest of the sentence, I conjecture that the Latin translator was mistaken. Supposing the Greek text to have stood as above the translator took the words τοῖς πανταχόθεν for ἐν τῇ τῶν παντ. which was certainly grammatically correct; "in which the apostolic tradition was always preserved by believers from all places," referring to the many foreigners who constantly belonged to the Roman community, and who afforded a warrant for the uninterrupted agreement of the Roman tradition with that of the rest of the church. But Irenaeus meant to say: "in which the apostolic tradition has been always preserved in correspondence with the believers of all places." Hence he adduces, in what follows,

Clement's epistle to the Corinthians, and Polycarp's abode at Rome, as proofs of this uninterrupted correspondence. Many other explanations unaquaeque alia ecclesia idem testabitur de traditione Apostolorum, dummodo in ea a fidelibus, cujusvis sint loci, pure conservata sit tradita ab Apostolis veritas. On the contrary, Neander KG. i. i. 349, says that the expression, qui undique sunt fideles, is not synonymous with omnis ecclesia, if the latter mean "every single church," but only if it mean

"every church," i. e. all churches: and in the single churches the tradition was not preserved ab iis qui sunt undique.

them. The apostolic epistles had always been read in the places to which they were addressed, and in the neighbouring congregations; but there was no universally received collection of the evangelical narratives, and the existing ones (comprehending, besides our canonical gospels, also the gospel of the Hebrews, that of the Egyptians, &c.) served in their spheres only for private use. After the churches had now come into closer connection, they communicated to one another, in their common interest against heretics, the genuine apostolic writings; and thus the canon began to be formed, in the first half of the second century, in two parts (τὸ εὐαγγέλιον or τὸ εὐαγγελικόν, and ὁ Ἀπόστολος or τὸ Ἀποστολικόν), although in the different congregations there continued to be other writings, which were valued almost, if not altogether, as much as those which were universally received (ὁμολογούμενα, ἐνδιόθηκα).¹¹

Instigated by the bold speculation of the Gnostics, which sought to lay an entirely foreign basis under Christianity, the catholic Christians began to establish as the unalterable regula fidei,¹² that complex notion of doctrine which could be shown, as well in the consciousness of all Christian communities, as also in the apostolic writings, to be an essential basis of Christianity, and which must remain untouched by, and be necessarily laid at the foundation of, every speculation. Accordingly, even the originally simple conditions of the baptismal confession (πίστις, σύμβολον)¹³ were secured by additions

DEVELOPMENT OF DOCTRINES—SPURIOUS WRITINGS.

A speculative treatment of Christian doctrine was generally indispensable, if Christianity should be accessible to the philosophical culture of the times, and was rendered unavoidable by the measures of the Gnostics. It could only proceed from Platonism, which of all philosophical systems stood the nearest to Christianity.¹ While many Platonic philosophers were brought over to Christianity by this internal relation, they received the latter as the most perfect philosophy,² and retained, with their philosophical mantle,³ their philosophical turn of mind also. They set out with this principle, both that the Logos has constantly communicated to men the seeds of truth,⁴ and that the truth taught by Plato was derived from Moses and the prophets.⁵ The arbitrary mode of interpretation then current furnished them with the means of proving their views even from numerous passages of the Old Testament, which they could use, indeed, only in the Septuagint version.⁶ Thus, then, they overvalued even the actual agreement of Plato with Christianity,⁷ and believed that they found many a platonic idea in the latter, which in reality they themselves had first introduced into it.⁸ The Christian philosophers of this time with which we are acquainted are Aristides, Justin Martyr, Athenagoras, Tatian, Pantaenus

⁵ So the Jews had already asserted, Josephus contra Apion, ii. 8; and Aristobulus apud Clemens Alex. Strom. i. p. 410, according to whom Plato is said to have employed even the Old Testament in an ancient version. The heathen philosopher Numenius (l. c.) goes so far as to say: τί ἐστι Πλάτων, ἢ Μωσῆς ἀντικείμενος. With regard to the former point, there were several who did not assume a personal distinction of the Logos from the Father.¹² But the view was more ¹¹ So particularly Proverbs viii. 22 ss. but also Psal. xxxiii. 6; xlv. 1; civ. 24. The doctrine that God created the world by the Logos was also naturally sought for in the Mosaic account of creation, where it was found. Gen. i. 1 ἐν ἀρχῇ is equivalent to διὰ τῆς ἀρχῆς, and ἀρχή is, according to Proverbs viii. 22, ἡ σοφία or ὁ λόγος. Theophil. ad Antol. ii. 10, 13. Tatian. apol. c. 7. Tertull. adv. Hermog. c. 20. This explanation was repeated in later times by Origen, hom. 1, in Gen., Basilus, hom. 1, in Hexaëmeron, Augustinus, de Genesi, lib. i. Others believed that they should venture to presuppose the existence of that doctrine as still more obviously contained in the Hebrew original, which they did not know. According to the Altercatio Iasonis et Papisci, the original expressed this idea, in filius fecit Deus coelum et terram (see above § 50, note 17); or as others believed (Tertull. adv. Praxeam, c. 5), in principio Deus fecit sibi filium.

Accordingly, the doctrine of the Holy Spirit still remained entirely undeveloped.¹⁴ These specu-

¹³ Semisch Justin d. M. ii. 277. Tertull. adv. Praxeam, c. 8, calls this emanation προβολὴν veritatis in opposition to the false προβολαὶς of the Gnostics. The Montanists believed this latter theory confirmed by the revelation of the Paraclete, l. c. c. ii. 8, 13. The Alogi, on the contrary, rejected the doctrine of the Logos. Epiphanius, haer. li. L. ¹⁴ Accordingly, the fathers of this period represent the prophets to be inspired sometimes by the Logos, sometimes by the Holy Spirit, and call both the Logos and the Holy Spirit σοφία, &c. Semisch Justin d. M. ii. 305, 311. Note.—Theophilus ad. Autol. ii. 23, gives the members of the Divine triad thus: θεός, ὁ λόγος αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἡ σοφία αὐτοῦ, and says, ii. 14: Ἔχων οὖν ὁ θεὸς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ λόγον ἐνθάθετον ἐν τοῖς ἰδίοις σπλάγχνοις, ἐγέννησεν αὐτὸν μετὰ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ σοφίας ἐξερευζόμενος πρὸ τῶν ὅλων. Τοῦτον τὸν λόγον ἐσχεν ὑπουργὸν τῶν ἐπ' αὐτὰν γεγενημένων καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ τὰ πάντα πεποίηκεν.—Οὗτος οὖν ὡν πνεῦμα θεοῦ, καὶ ἀρχή, καὶ σοφία, καὶ δύναμις ὑψίστου καθήρχετο εἰς τοὺς προφήτας, καὶ δι' αὐτῶν ἐλάλει τὰ περὶ τῆς σωτηρίας τοῦ κόσμου, καὶ τῶν λοιπῶν ἀπάντων. οὗ γὰρ ᾤσαν οἱ προφῆται, ὅτε ὁ κόσμος ἐγένετο, ἀλλὰ ἡ σοφία ἢ ἐν αὐτῷ οἶσα ἢ τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ ὁ λόγος ὁ ἅγιος αὐτοῦ ὁ δὲ συμπαρὼν αὐτῷ. Here the Holy Spirit is the immanent wisdom of God, but the Logos the revealed God, who emanated from the Father.

lations, whose object it was to fathom the depths of the Godhead, might certainly at first wound the feelings of many, and Irenaeus openly expresses his disapprobation of the inconsiderate curiosity they manifest;¹⁵ but, on the other hand, ecclesiastical orthodoxy could still endure diversities in doctrine and customs, which did not injure the religious basis of Christianity.¹⁶

Notwithstanding this philosophical tendency, and although in other respects the Pauline mode of surveying Christianity predominated, yet the millennarianism of the Jewish Christians,¹⁷ presenting a sensuous counterpoise to the external pressure of persecution, which had been announced in so many apocalyptic writings,¹⁸ and for which the reputation of John (Apoc. xx. 4—6; xxi.) and his peculiar followers, afforded a warrant—this millennarianism became the general belief of the time, and met with almost no other opposition than that given by the gnostics,¹⁹

¹⁵ Irenaeus adv. haer. ii. 28, 6 : Si quis itaque nobis dixerit : quomodo ergo Filius prolatus a Patre est ? dicimus ei, quia prolationem istam, sive generationem, sive nuncupationem, sive adapertionem, aut quolibet quis nomine vocaverit generationem ejus inenarrabilem existentem, nemo novit, non Valentinus—neque Angeli—nisi solus qui generavit Pater, et qui natus est filius. Inenarrabilis itaque generatio ejus cum sit, quicunque nituntur generationes et prolationes enarrare, non sunt compotes sui, ea quae inenarrabilia sunt, enarrare promittentes. Quoniam enim ex cogitatione et sensu verbum emittitur, hoc utique omnes sciunt homines : non ergo magnum quid invenerunt, qui emissiones excogitaverunt, neque absconditum mysterium, si id quod ab omnibus intelligitur, transtulerunt in unigenitum Dei Verbum : et quem inenarrabilem et innominabilem vocant, hunc, quasi ipsi obstetricaverint, primae generationis ejus prolationem et generationem enunciant, adsimilantes eum hominum verbo emissionis (λόγῳ προφορικῷ). ¹⁶ This doctrinal latitudinarianism is shown in the fact of the Nazarene Hegesippus, being recognised as orthodox in the churches of Corinth and Rome, these churches agreeing with his orthodoxy. See above § 43, note 4. The same latitudinarianism may be seen in Justin's declaration respecting those who denied the personality of the Logos (above note 12), in the estimation in which the Shepherd of Hermas was held. and subsequently by the antagonists of the Montanists.²⁰ The thousand years' reign was represented as the great Sabbath which should begin very soon; or, as many supposed, after the lapse of the six thousand years of the world's age,²¹ with the first resurrection, and should afford great joys to the righteous.²² Till then the souls of the departed were to be kept in the underworld,²³ and the opinion that they should be taken up to heaven immediately after death, was considered a gnostic heresy.²⁴ In reference to the advancement of the various Christian interests, and in like manner also to the confirmation of those developments of doctrine already mentioned, the spurious literature which had arisen and continually increased among Jews and Christians, was of great importance. The Christians made use of such expressions and writings as had already been falsely attri-

ECCLESIASTICAL LIFE.

As the prevailing desire was now to compare the Mosaic institute with the Christian, of which it was regarded as the type, and to trace out an analogy even in their individual features, the idea soon occurred to the mind, of comparing the Christian officers in the church with the Mosaic priesthood,¹ and of giving

The idea is first found in a distinct form in Tertullian.

In a narrower sense κληρος τῶν μαρτύρων in Epist. Eccl. Vienn. et Lugd. ap. Euseb. v. 1 § 4. In like manner, they appropriated to themselves, in the fourth century, the names christiani and christianitas as their peculiar right (cf. Cod. Many such circumstances united in procuring for Rome, particularly in the west, an especial influence, even so early as the period of which we are speaking.⁹

Public worship was extremely simple. Without temples, altars, or images, the Christians assembled in houses appointed for the purpose, and in times of persecution, in solitary places,¹⁰

Hieronymus comm. in Matth. lib. iv. ad Matth. xxv. 6: Traditio Judaeorum est, Christum media nocte venturum in similitudinem Aegyptii temporis, quando pascha celebratum est, et exterminator venit, et Dominus super tabernacula transiit, et sanguine agni postes nostrarum frontium consecrati sunt. Unde reor et traditionem apostolicam permansisse, ut in die vigiliarum Paschae ante noctis dimidium populos dimittere non liceat, exspectantes adventum Christi. Et postquam illud tempus transierit, securitate praesumta, festum cuncti agunt diem.

longed to the clergy and the poor, for whom also they provided by monthly contributions.¹³ After the clergy had become a priestly caste, it was the more necessary to look for a sacrifice in Christianity, because the ancient world generally could not conceive of divine worship without sacrifice. For this purpose the solemnity of the supper presented several points of comparison. First of all, the prayer, which indeed had always been considered spiritual sacrifice.¹⁴ But next, the gifts of the church members, as also the bread and wine set apart by the bishop by prayer as holy food, came to be considered as offerings dedicated to God. Of both the same expressions were used, προσφέρειν, προσφορά, offerre, oblatio: both were compared with the Old Testament sacrifices and first fruits.¹⁵ Accordingly, as the Mosaic law of first fruits, and, in consequence, the law of tithes also, appeared to be still valid,¹⁶ the Christians obtained in them a rule for their oblations, without, however any kind of external compulsion being used for enjoining the observance of them. The eucharist being considered the symbol of the intimate communion of the Church with itself, and with Christ, it was also sent to the absent as a token of this communion,¹⁷ and taken by those who are present to their homes.

Baptism was preceded by instruction,¹⁹ fasting, and prayer. The baptism of children was not universal, and was even occa-

This idea of oblations is expressed not only in the sacrificial prayers of the old liturgies, (see Constitt. Apostl. viii. c. 12, comp. Pfaffii syntagma, p. 378 ss.), but also even now in the commencing words of the canon missae of the Romish church: Te igitur, Clementissime pater,—supplices rogamus ac petimus, uti accepta habeas ac benedicas haec dona, haec munera, haec sancta sacrificia illibata, (i.e. the still unconsecrated bread and wine).

sionally disapproved.²⁰ While Christians were supposed to be engaged in constant warfare with the world and the devil under the banner of Christ,²¹ they generally used the sign of the cross,²² and often exorcism,²³ as a powerful defence against the machinations of evil spirits. Probably they already began to apply the latter in the case of those persons who, renouncing the prince of this world, prepared themselves for baptism.²⁴ Many new usages were connected with baptism itself towards the end of the second century.²⁵

²⁰ Tertull. de baptismo, c. 18: Itaque pro cuiusque personae conditione ac dispositione, etiam aetate, cunctatio baptismi utilior est: praecipue tamen circa parvulos. Quid enim necesse est, sponsores etiam periculo ingeri? quia et ipsi per mortalitatem destituere promissiones suas possunt, et proventu malae indolis falli. Ait quidem Dominus: Nolite illos prohibere ad me venire (Matth. xix. 14). Veniant ergo, dum adolescent, veniant dum discunt, dum, quo veniant, docentur: fiant Christiani, quum Christum nosse potuerint. Quid festinat innocens aetas ad remissionem peccatorum? Cautius agatur in saecularibus, ut cui substantia terrena non creditur, divina credatur. Norint petere salutem ut petenti dedisse videaris. Non minore de causa innupti quoque procrastinandi, in quibus tentatio praeparata est tam virginibus per maturitatem, quam viduis per vagationem, donec aut nubant, aut continentiae corroborentur. served as festivals; the latter, however, without Jewish superstition. In the celebration of the passover, there was a difference between the churches of Asia Minor and those of the west.³⁴ The former adhered to the Jewish passover feast, giving it a reference to Christ;³⁵ the latter, on the other hand, kept up the

On the last words see the Excursus in Heinichen, Euseb. t. iii. p. 377 ss. I am inclined to read τῇ ἡμέρᾳ αὐτῶν. "Others measures off forty hours along with their day" (μετροῦσι σὺν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ), i. e. they fast the day which they celebrate as the passover, or the day of Christ's death (for in this there was a difference), and begin with the hour of the death (three o'clock afternoon), a new forty-hours' fast till the resurrection.—cf. Jo. Dallaeus de jejuniis et quadragesima, Daventr. 1654, 8.

recollection of the death and resurrection of Christ, as in every week, so with greater solemnity every year, at the passover festival, on the corresponding days of the week, so that the passover Friday was always regarded by them as dies paschae. When Polycarp visited Rome, about 160, he had a conference on this point with the Romish bishop Anicetus (epist. Iren. ap. Euseb. v. 24). Both remained of the same opinion as before, but separated in perfect friendship. Among the Christians of Asia Minor themselves, there was a controversy in Laodicea respecting the passover, about 170; but the proper point debated is not certainly known.³⁶

Since the Christians of Asia Minor appealed in favour of their passover solemnity on the 14th Nisan to John, (Polycrates, l. c.), and yet, according to his gospel, Christ partook of the last supper with his disciples so early as the 13th Nisan; an argument has been lately deduced from this fact against the authenticity of John's gospel, (Bretschneider probabilia, p. 109, after him Strauss and Schwegler). To judge correctly of this matter, we must set out with that which is remarked very truly respecting it by Socrates, hist. eccl. v. 22: οὐδαμοὶ τοῖνυν ὁ Ἀπίστολος, οὐδὲ τὰ εὐαγγέλια ζυγὸν δουλείας τοῖς τῷ κηρύγματι προσεληθούσιν ἐπέθηκαν· ἀλλὰ τὴν ἑορτὴν τοῦ πάσχα καὶ τὰς ἄλλας ἑορτάς τιμᾶν, τῇ εὐγνωμοσύνῃ τῶν εὐεργετηθέντων κατέλιπον.—σκοπὸς μὲν οὗν γέγονε τοῖς Ἀποστόλοις, οὐ περὶ ἡμερῶν ἑορταστικῶν νομοθετεῖν, ἀλλὰ βίῳ ἱερῶν καὶ τὴν θεοσέβειαν εἰσπληρῶσαι· ἐμοὶ δὲ φαίνεται, ὅτι ὡς περ ἄλλα πολλὰ κατὰ χώρας συνήθειαν ἔλαβεν, οὕτω καὶ ἡ τοῦ πάσχα ἑορτὴ παρ' ἐκάστοις ἐκ συνήθειας τινὸς ἰδιόχουσαν ἔσχε τὴν παρατήρησιν, διὰ τὸ μηδένα τῶν Ἀποστόλων, ὡς ἔφην, μηδεὶ νομοθετηκέναι περὶ αὐτῆς. In the Christian assemblies the Jewish passover was at first kept up, but observed with reference to Christ, the true passover, (1 Cor. v. 7, 8). Thus John, too, found it in Ephesus, and allowed it to remain unaltered. He corrected it in his gospel only so far as it proceeded on the supposition that Christ had eaten with the Jews the passover on the day before his death, by making it apparent that Christ was crucified on the 14th Nisan. But that solemnity needed not to have been changed on this account; on the contrary, if the 14th Nisan was the true Christian passover day, the fulfilment of the typical passover took place on the same day with it.

³⁶ Melito περὶ τοῦ Πάσχα ap. Euseb. iv. 26, 2: ἐπὶ Σερούλιου Παύλου, ἀνθυπάτου τῆς Ἀσίας, ᾧ Σάγαρις καιρῷ ἑμαρτύρησεν, ἐγένετο ζήτησις πολλὴ ἐν Λαοδικείᾳ περὶ τοῦ Πάσχα, ἐμπροσθέντος κατὰ καιρὸν ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις· καὶ ἐγράφη ταῦτα. Eusebius adds, that Clement of Alexandria was induced to write his book on the passover by this work of Melito. Since Melito is quoted by Polycrates (Euseb. v. 24, 2) as an authority for the custom observed in Asia Minor, but since the paschal chronicle, p. 6 s., quotes the writings of the contemporaneous Apollinaris, bishop of Hierapolis, and Clement of Alexandria, on the passover, beside each other in favour of the view that Christ had not eaten the Jewish passover on the day before his death, it has been inferred that Apollinaris had attacked

Public sinners were excluded from the church, and the way for restoration could only be prepared by public repentance.³⁷ A public repentance was generally allowed only after baptism.³⁸ In the African church they proceeded so far as frequently to exclude for ever those who had been guilty of incontinence, murder, and idolatry. This was done in pursuance of Montanist principles.³⁹

the Asiatic practice, and that Melito defended it. But no trace of this is found in Eusebius; on the contrary, both writers are named by him beside one another as working together harmoniously, (iv. 26). In the fragments of Apollinaris's work which remain, those persons are combated who said: ὅτι τῇ ἰδ' τὸ πρόβατον μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν ἔφαγεν ὁ Κύριος, τῇ δὲ μεγάλῃ ἡμέρᾳ τῶν ἀθύρων αὐτὸς ἔφαθεν, and appealed to Matthew in their favour. This view, says Apollinaris, contradicts the law (so far as the passover, and consequently also Christ as the passover, must be offered on the 14th) and the gospels, and he asserts in opposition to it: ἡ ἰδ' τὸ ἀληθινὸν τοῦ Κυρίου Πάσχα, ἡ θυσία ἡ μεγάλη, ὁ ἀντὶ τοῦ ἁμοῦ παῖς θεοῦ κ. τ. λ. Hence he does not combat the keeping of the 14th as the paschal day, but merely intends to vindicate the right significance of it against erroneous conceptions. This day was to be celebrated as the Christian passover, not because Christ had eaten on it the typical passover with the Jews, but because he himself, as the true passover, had offered himself to God.

Those persons were highly honoured, who endured persecutions for the sake of the Christian faith. The death of a martyr (μάρτυρ, Acts xxii. 20; Heb. xii. 1; Apoc. xvii. 6) was supposed, like baptism, to have the efficacy of destroying sin (lavacrum sanguinis, τὸ βάπτισμα διὰ πυρὸς, Luke xii. 50; Mark x. 39), supplied the place even of baptism (according to Matthew x. 39), and introduced the person immediately to the presence of the Lord in paradise (Matt. v. 10—12; Apoc. vi. 9: hence ἡμέρα γενέθλιος, γενέθλια τῶν μαρτύρων, natales, natalitia martyrum).⁴⁰ But the surviving confessors also (ὁμολογηταί, confessores, Matt. x. 32; 1 Tim. vi. 12, 13) were held to be chosen members of Christ. People were zealous in visiting them in the prisons, and taking care of them;⁴¹ and this was enjoined on the deacons as a pecu-

Manente concordiae vinculo et perseverante Catholicae Ecclesiae individuo sacramento, actum suum disponit et dirigit unusquisque Episcopus, rationem propositi sui Domino redditurus. Though this severity was afterwards relaxed in reference to Moechi (see below § 59, note 4), yet they still remained, as at first, united with the Montanists in asserting this principle, Tertull. de pudic. c. 12, quod neque idololatriae neque sanguini pax ab Ecclesijs redditur.

CONDITION OF HEATHENISM.

While the Roman empire appeared hastening to its fall, the throne being occupied by soldiers, the provinces devastated by barbarians, and the government changed into the most arbitrary despotism, the kingdom of superstition, in which alone the men of that time sought for peace and security from the dangers that surrounded them, had established itself firmly. Not only were the emperors themselves addicted to this superstition, but they also openly confessed it, and partly introduced themselves foreign rites into Rome.¹ The Platonic philosophy, which had confined itself till now to a defence of the popular religions, and to securing for the wise a more elevated worship of deity, endeavoured, since the beginning of the third century, to give to the people's religion a higher and more spiritual form, under the appearance of bringing it back to its original purer state. This philosophy had been unquestionably overpowered by the spiritual predominance of Christianity. With this view, Philostratus

The Jewish religion also was continually incorporated into this religious mixture (comp. above § 17, note 9), see Commodiani (about 270) instructiones adv. gentium deos pro christiani disciplina (in Gallandii biblioth. vett. Patr. T. iii.):

Inter utrumque putans dubie vivendo cavere, the elder composed the life of Apollonius of Tyana (220), in which the latter was represented as the reformer of heathenism.² But all the preceding tendencies of philosophy, and this also, were perfected in the so-called new platonist school.³ The founder of it, Ammonius Saccas, Σακκάς (i. e. σακκοφόρος) of Alexandria († about 243), an apostate from Christianity to heathenism,⁴ appears to have borrowed the pattern of his heathenism-defending philosophy principally from the Christian gnostics. He communicated his system only as a secret; but by his disciple, the Egyptian Plotinus († 270), it was farther developed, and spread abroad with incredible rapidity. With no less renown, Plotinus was followed by his disciple Porphyry of Tyre (Malchus † 304, and he by Jamblichus of Chalcis († 333), who survived the overthrow of paganism.⁵

The leading principles of the theology of these philosophers, who wished to find the absolute, not by a process of thought, but by immediate intuition, like the Christian gnostics, are the following: From the highest existence (τὸ ἐν) arises intelligence (ὁ νοῦς), and from this the soul (ψυχή). The highest world of intelligence or understanding (κόσμος νοητός), is the essence of all intelligences, of the gods as well as of human spirits. By the soul of the world (consequently the δημιουργός), the visible world was formed. The gods are divided into those dwelling above the world αἰῶνες, νοητοί, ἀφανείς), and those inhabiting the world (περικύβητοι, αἰσθητοί, ἐμφανείς). To the latter the different parts of the world are entrusted for oversight (hence θεοὶ μερικοί, μέριστοι, ἐθνάρχαι, πολιούχοι); and from them the various nations have derived their peculiar character. Lower than the gods stand the demons, some good, and others bad. While the people worship the highest god only in their national deities, and that with propriety, the wise man must, on the contrary, endeavour to attain to immediate union with the highest deity. While neo-platonism endeavoured in this way both to prop up heathenism, and to give it a higher and more spiritual character, it adapted itself, on the one hand, to the grossest popular superstitions, and, on the other, adopted the purest ideas respecting the supreme deity. Accordingly, it communicated, at the same time, the most excellent precepts regarding the moral worship of God, and recommended asceticism and theurgy,⁶ in order to elevate its votaries to communion with the deity, and to obtain dominion over the demons. It cannot well be doubted, that Christianity influenced the development of the purer aspect of the neo-platonic doctrines, when we look at the striking agreement of many of these doctrines with those of Christianity.⁷ This source, however, was not acknowledged by the new Platonists, who wished that the root of their doctrine should be considered as existing only in the national philosophy, and, along with it, in the oldest Chaldean and Egyptian wisdom. In consequence of this view, neo-platonic productions appeared sometimes in the form of Chaldean oracles,⁸ and in the name of Hermes Trismegistus.⁹

On the other hand, Eusebius: τῷ Ἀμμωνίῳ τὰ τῆς ἐνθέου φιλοσοφίας ἀκέραια καὶ ἀδιάπτωτα καὶ μέχρις ἐσχάτης τοῦ βίου διεμενε τελευτῆς. Here Eusebius evidently refers to another Ammonius, probably to the author of the Gospel Harmony.

The philosophic portion of them belongs to the new Platonism: Asclepius and Poemander are the most important (Opp. gr. lat. ed. Adr. Turnebus, Paris 1554, 4. Colon. 1630, fol. Hermes Trismegista Poemander von D. Tiedemann, Berlin 1781). FIRST CHAPTER.

EXTERNAL FORTUNES OF CHRISTIANITY.

DISPOSITION OF THE HEATHEN TOWARD IT.

Though the reports of secret abominations said to be practised by the Christians in their assemblies vanished by degrees among the heathen people,¹ yet other prejudices against them remained unchanged. Every public calamity was continually regarded as a token of the wrath of the gods against the Christians, and excited a fresh hatred and persecution.² The cultivated heathen held fast by the old view, that whatever truth they could not avoid perceiving in the Christian religion, was disfigured by a barbarous form, and the admixture of rude enthusiasm, and was found in a purer form in their national traditions. From this point of view began, since the commencement of the third century, the efforts which were made to reform the popular religion, that it might be elevated to the same height as Christianity. In this way both religions had either to be blended together, or greater power given to heathenism to withstand Christianity. Philostratus, in his life of Apollonius of Tyana, might have had in view this syncretistic object,³ but Neo-platonism on the contrary appeared in an attitude decidedly hostile to Christianity.⁴ The new Platonists for the most part regarded Christ as the most distinguished being and theurgist. On the other hand, however, they asserted that the doctrine of Christ perfectly agreed with theirs at first, but that it had been in many ways corrupted by his disciples, especially by the doctrine of Christ's deity, and forbidding the worship of the gods.⁵ In this manner the Christians appeared to be a crowd of misguided enthusiasts who had strayed from their leader, in opposition to whom, the heathen in their philosophy, and in their purified popular worship, possessed the purer truth, and occupied a higher position. The contest of these philosophers with Christianity, which continued till the sixth century, had thus a more earnest character than the earlier attacks. In the works of Plotinus many passages are aimed at the Christians, without their name being introduced.⁶ Direct attacks against them were the κατὰ Χριστιανῶν λόγοι, fifteen books of Porphyry;⁷ and the λόγοι φιλαλήθειας πρὸς Χριστιανούς in two books of Hierocles, governor of Bithynia under Diocletian.⁸ The lives also of Pythagoras by Jamblichus and Porphyry, had a hostile reference to Christianity.⁹

CONDUCT OF THE EMPERORS TOWARDS THE CHRISTIANS.

After Christianity had been favourably regarded by several emperors in the first half of this period, and had been introduced into a general religious syncretism, there arose in the second half, not only new persecutions, but such as partook of a far more hazardous character than any of the earlier, since they were generally commanded by the emperors, and aimed at nothing less than the complete annihilation of Christianity. Septimius Severus (193 till 211), was indeed not unfriendly to the Christians at first, (Tertull. ad Scapulam, c. 4); but they had much to suffer in the provinces from the popular rage,¹ and the avarice of the governors.² These persecutions increased considerably after the emperor (203), changed perhaps by the excesses of the Montanists, had forbidden the adoption of Christianity.³ Under Caracalla, however, (211—217), they gradually ceased.⁴

A later pretext of the libellatici, see Cypriani Epist. 52: Ego prius legeram et Episcopo tractante cognoveram, non sacrificandum idolis:—et iccirco ne hoc facerem, quod non licebat, cum occasio libelli fuisset oblata, quem nec ipsum acciperem, nisi ostensa fuisset occasio, ad magistratum vel veni, vel alio eunte mandavi, Christianum me esse, sacrificare mihi non licere, ad aras diaboli me venire non posse; dare me ob hoc praemium, ne quod non licet faciam. interruption, continued this persecution.¹³ Valerian 253—260) gave the Christians rest for some time, but was induced by his favourite Marcianus (257), to renew the persecution.¹³ Gallienus (260—268), first put a stop to it;¹⁴ and in the stormy times that now succeeded, the emperors had too much to do with antagonist emperors, rebellions, and barbarians, to think of persecuting the Christians. Only Aurelian (270—275), issued an edict against them, the execution of which was prevented by his murder that immediately followed. When the empire had received from Diocletian (284—305), four rulers, (285 Maximian, Augustus of the west—292 the Cæsars, Galerius and Constantius Chlorus) the church was at first undisturbed, notwithstanding the enmity of Galerius. ¹⁵ The first laws of toleration. Two rescripts addressed on this subject to Christian bishops are quoted by Eusebius, vii. 13. The first is that by which Gallienus, after he had conquered Egypt (261), makes known to the bishops in that country the toleration which had been already announced to the rest of the empire: τὴν εὐεργεσίαν τῆς ἐμῆς διαρῆς διὰ παντὸς τοῦ κόσμου ἐκβιβασθῆναι προσέταξα. ὅπως ἀπὸ τῶν τόπων τῶν θρησκευομένων ἀποχωρήσωσι. καὶ διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ὑμεῖς τῆς ἀντιγραφῆς τῆς ἐμῆς τῶ τόπῳ χρῆσθαι δύνασθε, ὥστε μηδὲνα ὑμῶν ἐνοχλεῖν. The other he issued τὰ τῶν καλουμένων κοιμητηρίων ἀπολαμβάνειν ἐπιτρέπων χωρία.

persecution of Maximian in Gaul and Rome is very improbable.¹⁵ But in February 303, Diocletian, moved by superstition¹⁶ and the persuasions of Galerius and Hierocles, caused the splendid church in Nicomedia to be destroyed, and then issued in succession three edicts against the Christians,¹⁷ which were finally ¹⁵ Legio Thebaea, leg. felix Agaunensis, Thebaei with their leader (primicerius) Mauricius (286?) massacred in Acaunensibus angustii (Agaunum, St Maurice in Wallis). Eusebius, Lactantius, Prudentius, Sulpicius Severus, are silent on the subject. The first mention of it is about 520 in vita S. Romani (Acta SS. Februar. t. iii. p. 740). Then by Avitus, Archbishop of Vienne, († 523), dicta in Basilica SS. Agaunensium in innovatione monasterii ipsius vel passione martyrum. By Eucherius, bishop of Lyons (about 530). Passio SS. Mauricii ac sociorum ejus (apud Ruinart).—These Latin acta appear to have been transferred with arbitrary alterations, by Simeon Metaphrasta (Acta SS. Februar. t. iii. p. 237) to a Greek martyr, Mauricius (Theodoret. Graec. affect. curat. disput. viii. in fine) who, as tribunus milit. is said to have been executed along with seventy soldiers in Apamea, in Syria, by the command of Maximianus. Against this narrative: Jean Dubordieu diss. hist. et crit. sur le martyre de la Légion Thébéenne. Amst. 1705, 12. Daffir Jos. de L'Isle défense de la vérité de la Légion Thébéenne, Nancy 1737, 12. Est apud Agrippinensem urbem basilica, in qua dicuntur L. viri ex illa legione sacra Thebaeorum pro Christi nomine martyrium consummasse. Ado (about 860) has, on the other hand, even: Gereon et alii cccxviii. Pavia has had the whole scene transferred to its neighbourhood in later times (Act. SS. September t. vi. p. 377, 908 ss). Perhaps the misunderstood expression, milites christi, gave rise to most of these legends.

¹⁷ Concerning all these persecutions comp. the contemporaries, Lactantius de mortibus persecutorum, c. 7 ss. and Eusebius hist. eccl. libb. viii.—x. First edict, Euseb. viii. 2, τὰς μὲν ἐκκλησίας εἰς ἑδαφὸς φέρειν, τὰς δὲ γραφὰς ἀφαιρεῖν καὶ γενέσθαι καὶ τοὺς μὲν τιμῇ ἐπειλημμένους, ἀπίστους τοὺς δὲ ἐν αἰσχροῖς, εἰ ἐπιμένουσιν ἐν τῇ τοῦ Χριστιανισμοῦ προόδῳ, θανάτου στερήσθαι. succeeded by a fourth in 304, by virtue of which all Christians without exception were compelled to worship the gods.¹⁸ Thus there arose in the entire Roman empire, with the exception of Gaul, where Constantius Chlorus was even now well-disposed towards the Christians,¹⁹ the most violent persecution against them, abundant both in martyrs and in apostates (a new class called traditores). After the two Augusti had laid down their dignity (305), the persecution continued to rage in the east under the new Augustus, Galerius and his Caesar, Maximin.²⁰ In Gaul and Spain, however, it ceased entirely under the Augustus Constantius Chlorus; and in Italy and Africa under the Caesar Severus, it at least abated. After the death of Constantius Chlorus (306), his son Constantine, not only granted full liberty of worship to the Christians in Gaul and Spain; but the two Augusti also, Maxentius and Maximian, caused persecution to cease in Italy and Africa.²¹ In the east, the persecution had

With regard to the history of Constantine's religious development,²⁵ till the time when he fully embraced Christianity, we have only isolated intimations and hints. His first religious sentiments like those of his father, were essentially the new platonic. He acknowledged one supreme God who had revealed himself in many ways among men,²⁶ and honoured Apollo in particular, as the revealer of this Being.²⁷ As this idea of Apollo

²⁶ According to Euseb. de vita Const. i. c. 27, when he first began the expedition against Maxentius: Εὖ δὲ ἐννοήσας, ὡς κρείττονος ἢ κατὰ στρατιωτικὴν δέοι αὐτῷ βοηθείας, διὰ τὰς κακοτέχνους καὶ γοητικὰς μαγὰς τὰς παρὰ τῷ τυράννῳ σπουδαιομένης, θεὸν ἐνείηκει βοηθόν.—Ἐννοεῖ δὴτα ὅποιον δέοι θεὸν ἐπιγράψασθαι βοηθόν. ζητοῦντι δ' αὐτῷ ἔννοιά τις ὑπεισέληθεν ὡς πλείωνον πρότερον τῆς ἀρχῆς ἐφαπαμένον, οἱ μὲν πλείοσι θεοῖς τὰς σφῶν αὐτῶν ἀναρτήσαντες εἰπίδας—τέλος οὐκ αἰσιον, εὐρανοῦ—μόνον δὲ τὸν ἑαυτοῦ πατέρα, τὸν ἐπέκεινα τῶν ὅλων θεὸν διὰ πάσης τιμῆσαντα ζωῆς, σωτῆρα καὶ φύλακα τῆς βασιλείας, ἀγαθὸν τε πάντος χορηγὸν εὐρέσθαι. Ταῦτα παρ' ἑαυτῷ διακρίνας—τὸ μὲν περὶ τοῦ μὴδὲν ὄντας θεοῦ ματαιάζειν—μυρίας ἔργον ὑπελάμβανε. τὸν δὲ πατρός τιμῇ μόνον ψετο δεῖν θεῖν. The Panegyricus incerti, c. 26 (ed. Jaeger, i. 548) addressed to the emperor in 313, corresponds with tolerable accuracy to his religious views at the time: Te, summe rerum sator, cujus tot nomina sunt, quot gentium linguas esse voluisti, quem enim te ipse dici velis, scire non possumus: sive in te quaedam vis mensque divina est, qua toto infusus mundo omnibus misceris elementis, et sine ullo extrinsecus accedente vigoris impulsu per te ipse movearis: sive aliqua supra omne caelum potestas es, quae hoc opus tuum ex altiore naturae arce despicias; te, inquam, oramus caet.

²⁷ Umenius in the Panegyric received by Constantine 310 at Treves, c. 21: Vidisti enim, credo, Constantine, Apollinem tuum, comitante Victoria, coronas tibi laureas offerentem:—vidisti, teque in illius specie recognovisti, cui totius mundi regna deberi vatum carmina divina cecinerunt. Quod ego nunc demum arbitror contigisse, quum tu sis, ut ille, juvenis, et laetns, et salutifer, et pulcherrimus imperator. Merito igitur augustissima illa delubra tantis donariis honestasti, ut jam vetere non

and the Christian idea of Christ were obviously similar,²⁸ so Constantine may have thought that he found in it very soon a point of union between Christianity and heathenism. That the phenomenon which appeared to him in the war against Maxentius, respecting which the accounts of his contemporaries are so different,²⁹ did not exclusively bring him over to Chris-quaerant. Jam omnia te vocare ad se templa videantur, praecipueque Apollo noster caet. On several coins of Constantine is found the inscription, Soli invicto, Soli invicto comiti. See Ez. Spanheim's remarks on the Césars de l'empereur Julien, p. 285, and Remarques, p. 973.

²⁹ Lactant. de mort. persec. c. 44 : commonitus est in quiete Constantinus, ut coeleste signum Dei notaret in scutis, atque ita proelium committeret. Fecit, ut iussus est, et transversa x. littera, summo capite circumflexo, Christum in scutis notat. On the contrary, the heathen Nazarius in Penegyri. ad Constantinum, c. 14 : In ore denique est omnium Galliarum, exercitus visos, qui se divinitus missos prae se ferebant.—Haec ipsorum sermocinatio, hoc inter audientes ferebant, Constantinum petimus, Constantino imus auxilio. Constantine, immediately after his entry into Rome, caused a cross to be put into the hand of the statue erected to him, with the inscription, τοῦτω τῷ σωτηριῷδεϊ σημείῳ, τῷ ἀληθινῷ ἐλέγχῳ τῆς ἀσθερίας, τὴν τόλμην ὑμῶν ἀπὸ θυγοῦ τοῦ τυράννου διασωθεῖσαν ἡλευθέρωσα (Euseb. h. e. ix. 9.). It was not till he was an old man that he related to Eusebius the story of a cross which appeared to him at clear mid-day, with the inscription, hac vince, τοῦτω νικά. Euseb. de vit. Const. i. 28—32. Sozomen, however, i. 3, and Rufin. ix. 9 suppose it to have been a mere dream. The heathen, of course, derided all these stories. See Gelasius Cyzic. hist. conc. Nicaeni, i. 4. cf. Mosheim de rebus Christ. ante Const. M. p. 978 ss. Concerning the cipher of Christ's name, see Münster's Sinnbilder der alten Christen, heft i. S. 33 ff. The imperial standard, bearing the cipher, was afterwards called Labarum. See Du Cange, diss. de numis infer. aevi, § 20. It is certain that Constantine, even before the battle, supposed that he was directed to the cross as to a propitious sign, and that this could not have happened in a way to attract general notice. If the later narrative of the emperor be not an invention, a light cross of clouds may have appeared to him while in a musing and hesitating mood, and have led him to decide; a phenomenon which was of importance, for this very reason, only to himself, and which remained unobserved by all others. Thus a purple cross, Christmas 1517, was looked upon as a divine sign at Weimar, under the important circumstances of the time (Oratio de Joanne Duce tianity, is proved by the edict of Milan, which breathes entirely the former syncretistic spirit. But he acted only in the spirit of Christianity when he bestowed favours on the Church, such as the old religion had always enjoyed. Thus he released their clergy from the burdensome municipal offices. In like manner a white cross, which appeared at the entrance of John Frederick, the elector, into Weimar, when he returned from captivity (Hortleder vom teutschen Kriege, Th. 2, S. 966). Several like traditions owed their origin at this time to the feeling that the decisive struggle between heathenism and Christianity, between Christ and demons, was come. Thus it is related that a victory-bringing prayer was taught by an angel to Licinius before the battle with Maximin (Lactant. de mort. persecut. c. 46). Thus, according to Gregory of Nazianzum, an army of demons accompanied Julian on his Persian expedition; but according to Libanius, it was an army of gods. See Ullmann's Gregor. v. Nazianz. S. 100.

³⁰ The first law ad Annulium Procons. Africae, apud Euseb. h. e. x. c. 7, confirmed by a second, Cod. Theod. xvi. tit. ii. l. 1, A.D. 313, and repeated in the third, l. c. l. 2, A.D. 319. The last: Qui divino cultui ministeria impendunt, i. e. hi qui Clerici appellantur, ab omnibus omnino muneribus excusentur, ne sacrilego livore quorundam a divinis obsequiis avocentur. Here Constantine merely transferred to the Christian clergy a privilege enjoyed by heathen priests. cf. Symmachus, lib. x. Ep. 54: Insigne ducitur Sacerdotii vacare muneribus. Cod. Theod. xii. tit. 1, l. 75, and Gothofred. ad h. l. The presidents of the Jews also enjoyed this immunity. cf. Cod. Theod. xvi. tit. viii. l. 3, A.D. 321. Verum, ut aliquid ipsis ad solatium pristinae observationis relinquatur, binos vel ternos privilegio perpeti (i. e. perpetuo) patimur nullis nominationibus occupari. Lex. 4, A.D. 331: Hieroea, Archisynagogos, et Patres Synagogarum, et caeteros, qui Synagogis deserviunt, ab omni corporali munere liberos esse praecipimus.

In the second, the days were frequently named after the planets (Dio Cassius, xxxvii. c. 18. S. Mursinna de hebdomade gentilium et dierum a planetis denominatione in Jo. Oelrichs Germania literatae opuscula historico-philologico-theologica, Bremae 1772, i. 113). As Christ was often compared with Sol, or Apollo (see above note 28), so Constantine believed, perhaps, that in the festival of the dies solis, as a festival of Christ and the sun at the same time, he found a point of friendly union between both religions, directly opposed though they were to allowed exactly the same freedom to heathenism, and not only so, but even in his capacity of emperor, observed the heathen practices at the same time that he gave so many privileges to Christianity,³⁷ he should notwithstanding turn away the minds of the heathen people by those very measures, in proportion as he gained over the affections of the Christians towards himself. In the mean time the successful issue of his undertakings must have strengthened him in the direction he took, if we may judge by his peculiar mode of thinking; and it could not escape his political sagacity, that it would be most advantageous for him to have on his side even the smaller party, since it was the more closely united, and more animated by a living soul. In this manner the Christians formed the nucleus of Constantine's party when the relation between him and Licinius became looser. Hence, for this very reason, Licinius sought to obtain a more decided party by renewed attention to the religion of the pagans, and by persecution of the Christians.³⁸ Accordingly, the struggle that arose between Licinius and Constantine, A.D. 323, was at the same time a struggle between Christianity and heathenism. Licinius was defeated, and Constantine openly professed the Christian faith,³⁹ though he still put off baptism.⁴⁰

each other. He transferred the Nundines to Sunday: comp. the stone inscription, apud Erycius Puteanus de Nundinis Romanis, c. 26: Constantinus—provisione etiam pietatis suae Nundinas die solis perpeti anno constituit. Still, the Nundines and weeks were both in use, and both are found in a calendar composed about 354 (in Graevii thes. t. viii. p. 97) beside each other, until Theodosius the First made the law respecting the observance of Sunday strict, Cod. Theod. viii. tit. 8, l. 3. Eusebius de vit. Constant. iv. 18, and Sozomen, i. 8, relate that Friday was also observed, as Sunday, by order of Constantine.

SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY.

In this division of time also, the progress of Christianity was considerable,¹ especially in Gaul.² In the end of it we find the light. The supposititious character of both authorities was perceived so early as 999 by Otto III., and in 1152 by the Romans (vol. ii.) The spirited attack of Laurentius Valla (about 1440, vol. ii., Div. 5, § 154) did not produce much effect till after the Reformation. Since then the investiture has been defended merely by some of the older Catholic scholars, especially the Jesuits J. Gretser and Nic. Schaten; but the deed of investiture has been universally given up as spurious.

The number of persecutions has been fixed at ten since the fourth century, agreeably to Exod. vii.—x., and Apoc. xvii. 1—14. Different calculations: Sulpicius Severus, hist. sacr. ii. 33. Marci Aurelii, V. (VI.) Sept. Severi, VI. Maximini, VII. (VII.) Decii, VIII. (VIII.) Valeriani, IX. Aureliani, X. (IX.) Diocletiani. Augustinus, l. c. adds: Sed ego illa re gesta in Aegypto istas persecutiones propheticè significatas esse non arbitror, quamvis ab eis, qui hoc putant, exquisite et ingeniose illa singula his singulis comparata videantur: non prophetico spiritu, sed conjectura mentis humanæ, quæ aliquando ad verum pervenit, aliquando fallitur.

SECOND CHAPTER.

HERETICS.

ELCESAITISM OF THE CLEMENTINES.

Clementina, primum edita in Cotelarii patribus apostolicis, i. 597. D. v. Cölln in Ersch u. Grubers Encyclopädie, xviii. 36. (Art. Clementinen.) Die Clementinen nebst den verwandten Schriften u. der Ebionitismus, von Adolph Schliemann. Hamburg 1844, 8.

As Christianity had come to the west from the east, so the occidental church continued in the second century to be entirely dependent on the oriental. Without a peculiar development of doctrine and literature of its own, it merely received the product of the east; while at the same time it drew within itself the different parties of the east. Rome, in particular, the capital of the empire and seat of a great church, presented an alluring field to all parties to call forth their activity. The different Gnostic sects,¹ like the Montanists, laboured with emulation to gain over this important church to themselves; and all found in it more or less sympathy and adherence. Accordingly, Romish Christendom in the second century was internally divided in many ways; a condition which was calculated not only to lead many Christians astray, and to induce them to waver, but to lay open a dangerous unprotected side to the attacks of heathenism. There, a philosophically educated Christian of Rome,² towards the end of the second century, took up the idea that Christianity in its original state must be preserved among the Jewish Christians as the descendants of the oldest church. Probably while he was searching after it himself in its secrecy, and found it dispersed among several parties, he discovered among the

² For evidence to show that the author of the Clementines was a Roman, see Baur's Christuspartei in der korinth. Gemeinde, in the Tübinger Zeitschr. f. Theol. 1831, iv. 199. Schliemann, p. 549.

*Elcesaites*³ a speculative doctrinal creed already formed, which seemed to him perfectly adapted both to vanquish heathenism and to remove the multiplicity of Christian sects. He received it therefore as the original Christian doctrine which had obtained its central point in James,⁴ and in Peter its most important defender, and appropriated all the more readily the Elcesaitic rejection of Paul, who, inasmuch as he was not an immediate disciple of Christ, could not have been a genuine apostle,⁵ because the Pauline development of Christianity had run out into so great a state of disunion, and appeared to have attained its height in the Marcionite errors. Hence he composed the Clementines (τὰ Κλημεντία), consisting of three prologues and twenty (but now only 19) homilies, that he might be able to proclaim to Christendom at large the apostolic truth which had long been concealed by apostolic lips also. The historical form in which he clothed the whole work, he took in part from the events of his own life. But he reckoned upon it also for the purpose of procuring apostolic authority to his doctrine, and obtaining an introduction for it into Rome in particular. As he himself had sought to travel into the east, so he makes the apostolic Clement (who was highly esteemed in the recollection of the Roman church, and who appears here in the character of a distinguished Roman, whose mind had received a philosophical culture),⁶ to journey into the same regions for the purpose of meeting with Peter, and obtaining full satisfaction from him. Under the impulses of a strong desire for the truth which had long been sought in vain,⁷ Peter, the only one of the immediate

⁶ He is manifestly confounded with Flavius Clemens, the relation of Domitian (§ 33). See Baur in the Tübingen Zeitschr. f. Theol. 1831, iv. 199. Schliemann, p. 109.

⁷ The narrative in Hom. i., in its essential features, may have been modelled after the experience of the author.

disciples of Christ, who had come to Rome, appears here in opposition to Paul, who was the proper apostle of the Gentiles,⁹ as the founder of the Romish church and the first bishop of Rome.⁹ He triumphantly refutes all kinds of error which had been committed by different persons, not only the popular faith and philosophy of the heathen,¹⁰ but also the Christian aberrations of the second century. The Gnostics in particular are combated in the person of Simon Magus;¹¹ and in addition to them the Montanist prophesying,¹² the hypostatic doctrine of the Trinity,¹³ and millennarianism.¹⁴ On the other hand, Peter proclaims¹⁵ and supports, by mighty miraculous deeds, the following doctrine:

⁹ In the letter prefixed to the Clementines, of Clement to James, Peter is designated ὁ τῆς δόσεως τὸ σκοτεινότερον τοῦ κόσμου μέρος, ὡς πάντων κακώτερος, φωτίσαις κελυσθεῖς, καὶ καταρθῶσαι δυνηθεῖς,—μέχρις ἐσταθῆαι τῇ Γῶμῃ γενόμενος, θεοβουλῆτῃ διδασκαλίᾳ σώζων ἀνθρώπους. It is related how he transferred his καθέδρα to Clement, shortly before his own martyrdom.

God, a pure, simple being of light, has allowed the world to be formed in contrasts, and so also the history of the world and of men runs off in contrasts (συζυγίαι) corresponding by way of pairs, in which the lower constantly precedes the higher. From the beginning onward God has revealed himself to men, while his Holy Spirit, (σοφία, υἱὸς θεοῦ, θεῖον πνεῦμα, πνεῦμα ἁγίον) from time to time in the form of individual men, (Adam, Enoch, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Jesus), as the true prophet (ὁ προφήτης τῆς ἀληθείας) constantly announced the very same truth, and in Jesus, caused it also to be communicated to the heathen.¹⁶ According to the law of syzygies, false prophets also are always produced in addition to the true (γεννητοὶ γυναικῶν Matth. xi. 11),¹⁷ who corrupt the truth. Thus the original doctrines of Mosaism are perfectly identical with Christianity;¹⁸ though they have not been preserved in their purity in the Pentateuch,¹⁹ which was not composed till long after Moses; and in the present form of Judaism, have been utterly perverted. In general, the truth has been constantly maintained in its purity only by a few by means of secret tradition.²⁰

If one abides by this view, he will not have to assume with Schliemann, S. 142, that a variation prevails in the Clementines respecting the doctrine of the Spirit of God, because he is represented sometimes as an unpersonal energy, sometimes as a hypostasis.

Man is free, and must expect after death a spiritual continuation of life with rewards and punishments. The conditions of happiness are love to God and man, and struggling against the demons, which draw away to evil through sensuality. For this purpose these sectaries prescribed abstinence from animal food, frequent fastings and washings, recommended early marriage²¹ and voluntary poverty, but rejected all sacrifice.

While the author of the Clementines, from the position of the Elcesaitic doctrine, combats parties with which the Elcesaites had never come into contact, he must necessarily go into many new developments of doctrine. How free his movements were in these may be seen from the fact that he frequently used for his purpose our four gospels unknown to the Elcesaites, with great critical and exegetical arbitrariness.²² On this very account we might indeed doubt whether he left the Elcesaitic doctrine itself entirely untouched.

Although the doctrine here presented could not calculate on any general dissemination, and found several adherents only in Rome and Cyprus,²³ yet many felt themselves attracted by the historical contents of the production and its refutation of the heathens and the Gnostics; and since the author knew how to account for the late appearance of his work, which pretended to proceed forth from the apostolic age,²⁴ they rather thought of it παραδιδόμενα κηρύσσω, μέχρις αὐτῶν ἰθὺν τὸν θεὸν ἐκτείνω καὶ ψυχὰς πάντων θλιόν.

²³ Epiphanius, haer. xxx. 18, says, that Ebionites were in Cyprus, (by this general appellation for all heretical Jewish Christians he here means this party). Origen (ap. Euseb. vi. 38,) calls the heresy of the Elcesaites νεωστὶ ἐπαισταμένη. Since no trace of it is found in the second century beyond Palestine, we may assume that it was first established in those places by the Clementines.

²⁴ Peter entreats James, in his letter prefixed to the Clementines, to communicate his sermons (τὰς βεβλήτους μου τῶν κηρυγμάτων) only to faith-

as the corruption of a genuine writing by heretics than of forgery. Hence, another person was soon found, probably an Alexandrian, who conceived the idea of purifying it from heretical depravations, while he altered it entirely according to the standard of orthodoxy in his day. In this way arose the production which appears under different names among the ancients,²⁵ and which still exists, but only in the Latin translation of Rufinus, under the title Recognitiones Clementis, libb. x.²⁶ The requirements of a much later orthodoxy gave rise to the *διετοιμή.*²⁷

OPPOSITION AT ROME TO MONTANISM, AND THE ASIATIC TIME OF CELEBRATING EASTER.

About the time when the Clementines appeared, there was generally apparent at Rome a lively striving after unity by removing all elements whose tendency was to disturb it.

Montanism had not only obtained many friends in the western church, without giving rise to an external division,¹ but had even gained besides an important influence over the prevailing ecclesiastical principles.² The bishop of Rome was already on the point of entering into ecclesiastical communion with the ful persons under the seal of secrecy; and James guarantees the secrecy by a διαμαρτυρία added, according to which those books should be made known only to tried brethren, after they had agreed by an oath to keep the secret. Comp. Hom. ii. 17, above note 8.

The same author's Clementinen, S. 265 ff. According to him the composition of them took place in the period between 212 and 230. But the reasons adduced in favour of Rome, as the place of writing, cannot be regarded as decisive. The Christology of the Recognitiones (Schliemann, S. 331) obviously points to Alexandria.

Asiatic Montanists who had been excluded from the church of their native country, when Praxeas, a confessor, came from Asia to Rome (about 192), and so altered the disposition towards them, that all communion with them was renounced.³ Thus, then, there began in the west also a controversy concerning the distinguishing doctrines of Montanism, which was conducted with violence, especially in Africa.⁴ At the head of

⁴ An important particular of it is given by Tertullian, de Pudicit. c. 1: Audio etiam edictum esse propositum, et quidem peremptorium: Pontifex scilicet Maximus, Episcopus Episcoporum, edicit: ego et moechiæ et fornicationis delicta poenitentia functis dimitto. cap. 5: Quid agis mollissima et humanissima disciplina? Idololatram quidem et homicidam semel damnas, moechum vero de medio excipis? comp. above § 53, note 39. According to Petavius (not. ad Epiph. haer. 59, p. 228,) it is usually assumed that that Pontifex Maximus is the Romish bishop Zephyrinus (197—217). But the appellation in question does not refer to a real, but to an usurped dignity. It points ironically to the circumstance that the bishop who had made the regulation arrogated to himself, by so doing, the prerogatives of the only high-priest, Christ. Most probably the allusion is to the bishop of Carthage. Particularly important for the history of the controversy is Tertullian. lib. de velandis virginibus. In support of his demand, virgines nostras velari oportere, ex quo transitum ætatis suæ fecerint, in order to set aside the argument brought against him from custom, cap. 2, Tertullian appeals to the consuetudo of the apostolic churches in Greece, and some barbarous countries: non possumus respuere consuetudinem, quam damnare non possumus, utpote non extraneam, quia non extraneorum: cum quibus scilicet communicamus jus pacis et nomen fraternitatis. Una nobis et illis fides, the Montanist party stood Quintus Septimius Florens Tertullianus, presbyter in Carthage, and the earliest Latin ecclesiastical writer of note, a man whose modes of thought were strict and severe, of a violent character, and of a rich though somewhat too sensuous imagination. In his writings it may be seen that he developed his Montanist tendency in a way increasingly rugged, being heated more and more by controversy, (Spiritualium contra Psychicos).⁵ Hence others followed him in the same spirit, till at length in the west also, separate Montanist churches were formed.⁶ In the mean time Montanism had unus Deus idem Christus, eadem spes, eadem lavacri sacramenta. Semel dixerim, una ecclesia sumus. Hence this book was written before the division in the church, when both contending parties still belonged to the same church. Cap. 3 describes how the controversy sprung up from a peaceful living together, and how the parties gradually became more and more embittered. Tamen tolerabilius apud nos ad usque proxime: utrique consuetudini communicabatur. Arbitrio permissa res erat, ut quaeque voluisset aut tegi aut prostituti, sicut et nubere: quod et ipsum neque cogitur, neque prohibetur. Contenta erat veritas pacisci cum consuetudine, ut tacite sub consuetudinis nomine frueretur se vel ex parte. Sed quoniam coeperat agnitio proficere, ut per licentiam utriusque moris indicium melioris partis emergeret: statim ille adversarius bonorum multoque institutorum opus suum fecit. Ambiant virgines hominum, adversus virgines Dei, nuda plane fronte, in temerariam audaciam excitatae, et virgines videntur.—Scandalizamus, inquit, quia aliae aliter incedunt: et malunt scandalizari quam provocari, etc. Soon after, a complete separation took place, adv. Praxeam, c. 1: Et nos quidem postea agnitio paracleti, atque defensio disjuncta a Psychicis.

been too deeply rooted in the western church; and now also the circumstance operated in its favour (comp. above) that its most zealous opponents, as *Praxeas*⁷ and the Roman presbyter Caius,⁸ fell into other serious errors. Thus, from this time onward, Montanism was rejected in name even in the western church. But all Montanist elements were by no means expelled from that church.⁹ Not only do we find remaining that strictness

Tertullianists in Carthage had returned to the Catholic church. Hence they were called Montanists in Carthage also, after their leader. But they neither gave themselves this appellation, nor can it be inferred from the difference of names, as the Praedestinatus, haer. 86 does, that the followers of Tertullian had formed a peculiar sect separated from the other Montanists.

and tendency to lay stress on external rules of piety,¹⁰ but, what is still more striking, even the writings of the Montanist Tertullian († about 220) were always valued very highly, and became the model of succeeding Latin ecclesiastical writers.¹¹

With the rejection of Montanism in Rome was probably connected Victor's opposition to the Asiatic mode of celebrating easter (see above).¹² He called upon the bishops of Asia Minor

¹² Some details relating to this matter are given, perhaps, in the Appendix ad Tertull. de præscript. hæret. c. 53: Est præterea his omnibus etiam Blastus accedens, qui latenter Judaismum vult introducere. Pascha enim dicit non aliter custodiendum esse, nisi secundum legem Moysi quartadecima mensis. But this Blastus appeared in Rome (Euseb. v. 15), and Irenæus wrote to him an ἐπιστολὴ πρὸς ὀχλομαγος (Euseb. v. 20). From Eusebius it is clear that he did not entirely coincide in sentiment with the Gnosticising Florinus; he appears to have been an ultra-Montanist. Comp. Irenaeus expresses his opinion of such disputes very plainly in the Fragm. iii. ed. Pfaff. The doctrine which regarded the divine in Christ as a personality not distinct from the Father had subsisted without opposition in the second century in addition to the emanation-doctrine,¹ since it was capable of being united with it in the confession which alone was important in relation to the faith, viz. that God is in Christ. It found a welcome reception particularly among the Anti-montanists, who were averse to all sensuous ideas of Godhead;² and on this very account was first combated by the zealous Montanist Tertullian, in his treatise against Praxeas. In the controversies which extend from this time onward through the third century, and terminate in the ecclesiastical rejection of this doctrine, it developed itself more definitely, in different forms which may be reduced to two great classes. The one looked upon the divine in Christ as continually teaching and acting through him; the other looked upon it as acting only on the human person, so that according to the former, the entire agency of Christ was a divine thing derived from God; according to the latter, a human thing derived from the same source.³ To the first class belonged Praxeas,⁴ who, notwith-

On the other hand, c. 27, aequae in una persona utrumque distinguunt, patrem et filium, dicentes filium carnem esse, id est hominem, i. e. Jesum: patrem autem spiritum, i. e. Deum, i. e. Christum, and c. 29. Ergo, inquis, et nos eadem ratione dicentes patrem, qua vos filium, non blasphemamus in Dominum Deum: non enim ex divina sed ex humana substantia mortuum dicimus. Baur (Lehre v. d. Dreienigkeit, i. 246) and Meier (Lehre v. d. Trinität, i. 77) are of opinion that Praxeas held the view that God connected himself immediately with the flesh, without the medium of a rational human soul. But Tertullian in express terms explains carnem by hominem; and when Praxeas said, filium carnem esse, he could not possibly declare a body animated by a mere ψυχὴ to be filius Dei.—Comp. † Comp. the extracts from the anonymous work against Artemon, apud Euseb. v. 28, which designates Theodotus as the πρώτος εὐκρετής ψάδης ἀποστολὴν τοῦ Χριστοῦ. Append. 1. de praescr. 53: Ex Spiritu quidem Sancto natum, ex virgine, sed hominem solitarium atque nudum, nullo alio prae ceteris nisi sola justitiae auctoritate. Alter post hunc Theodotus (trapezita) haereticus erupit, qui et ipse introduxit alteram sectam, et ipsum hominem Christum—inferiorem esse quam Melchisedech, eo quod dictum sit de Christo: Tu es sacerdos in aeternum secundum ordinem Melchisedech (Hebr. 7, 21). Nam illum Melchisedech praecipuae gratiae coelestem esse virtutem: eo, quod agat Christus pro hominibus, deprecator et advocatus ipsorum factus, Melchisedech facere pro coelestibus angelis atque virtutibus. (Melchisedeciani). According to Theo-chian doctrine generally became so notorious, that Artemon (Artemas) under bishop Zephyrinus, although he did not agree with the Theodotians, was included in the same class with them, and attacked in various writings.⁷ Hence this theory was rendered suspicious everywhere, even in Asia where it took its rise; and Noetus was excommunicated in Smyrna (about 230) on account of his doctrine, which harmonised with that of Praxeas.⁸ On the other hand, Origen succeeded in drawing off Beryllus, bishop of Bostra, from that view, at a council held in that place, in 244 A.D.⁹ Sabellius, presbyter in Ptolemais (250 doret (haer. fab. comp. 2, 5), even ὁ μικρὸς Λαβύρινθος accused them of corrupting the Holy Scriptures.

⁹ Euseb. vi. 33. His doctrine was: τὸν σωτήρα καὶ κύριον ἡμῶν μὴ προφασσάμεναι κατ' ἰδίαν οὐσίας περιγραφὴν πρὸ τῆς εἰς ἀνθρώπους ἐπιδημίας. μηδὲ μὴν θεότητα ἰδίαν εἶχειν, ἀλλ' ἐμπολιτευομένην αὐτῷ μόνῃ τὴν πατρικὴν. Athanas. c. Arian. Or. iv. 11 : τὸν θεὸν σωπόμενον μὲν ἀνεργήτως, λαλοῦντα δὲ λόγῳ. Theodoret, haer. fab. comp. ii. 9, ἐν μὲν τῇ παλαιᾷ ὡς πατέρα νομοθεῖσθαι, ἐν δὲ τῇ καινῇ ὡς υἱὸν ἐναυθροῦνθαι· ὡς πνεῦμα δὲ ἅγιον τοῖς ἀποστόλοις ἐπιφοιτῆσθαι.—(τρία πρόσωπα). Pseudo-Greg. Thaumatz., ἡ κατὰ μέρος πίστις (in Ang. Maji Scriptt. vett. nova collectio, vii. 1, 171 : Ἀποφειόμενον τὸν Σεβέλλιον λέγοντα τὸν αὐτὸν πατέρα, τὸν αὐτὸν υἱόν· Πατέρα μὲν γὰρ λέγει εἶναι τὸν λαλοῦντα, υἱὸν δὲ τὸν λόγον ἐν τῷ πατρὶ μένοντα, καὶ κατὰ καιρὸν τῆς δημιουργίας φαινόμενον, ἔπειτα μετὰ τὴν ἀπάντων πληρώσιν τῶν πραγμάτων εἰς θεὸν ἀνατρέχοντα. Τὸ αὐτὸ δὲ καὶ περὶ τοῦ πνεύματος λέγει. Athanas. c. Arian. Or. iv. 12 : ἡ μονὰς πλατυθεῖσα γέγονε τριάς. Ib. 13 : συνετέλλεσθαι καὶ πάλιν ἐκτείνεσθαι τὸν θεόν, respecting this ἐκτασις καὶ συστολή see the Clementinen und Philo above § 58, note 13). Ib. 25 : ὡς περ διαίρεσις χαρισμάτων εἰσι, τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ πνεῦμα, οὕτως καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ὁ αὐτὸς μὲν ἐστὶ, πλατύνεται δὲ εἰς υἱὸν καὶ πνεῦμα. Arii epist. ad Alexandrum Alex. ap. Epiphan. haeres. 69 : Σεβέλλιος τὴν μονάδα διαιρῶν υιοπτότερα εἶπεν. (Gregorius Nyssa, contra Arium et Sabellium in Ang. Maji Scriptt. vett. nova coll. viii. ii. 1 : οἱ κατὰ Σεβέλλιον—ἀναιρεῖν μὲν πειρῶνται τὴν ὑπόστασιν τοῦ υἱοῦ, αὐτὸν δὲ τὸν πατέρα ἕνα ὄντα διὸς ἐν ὁνόμασι γεραίροντα οἰόμενοι, υιοπτότερα προσαγορεύουσιν). According to Epiphanius, haer. lxii. 1, he compared the Godhead to the sun, ὅτι μὲν ἐν μᾶζ ὑποστάσει, τρεῖς δὲ ἔχοντι τὰς ἐνεργείας, namely τὸ τῆς περιφέρειας σχῆμα, or τὸ εἶδος πάσης τῆς ὑποστάσεως, τὸ φωτιστικόν, and τὸ θάλασσαν. The Monas is the divine essence in itself, in its concealed state, which reveals itself in the trias, while it assumes three characters (πρόσωπα) according to the nature of the revelations. These three πρόσωπα are ὁ πατὴρ, ὁ υἱός, τὸ πνεῦμα. The Logos is never called a second prosopon, but it is the Logos which became man, and, as such, took the name ὁ υἱός (Athanas. c. Arian. Or. iv. 22 : ἐν ἀρχῇ μὲν λόγος ἀπλῶς· ὅτε δὲ ἐνηθρώπησε, τότε ὠνομάσθαι υἱόν). Hence Baur's opinion (Dreieinigkeit, i. 261) is very probable that, in the sense of Sabellius, the Logos, in opposition to the Monas, is the manifested God generally, and that the three πρόσωπα are to be considered as the changing forms personal interviews and letters, and in unfolding antagonist views went so far as to make new assertions equally objectionable. Sabellians were found so late as the fourth century, in Rome and Mesopotamia. Still greater offence was given by Paul of Samosata, who, being at the same time bishop of Antioch (from 260), and holding a civil office,¹¹ exhibited a vanity and love of display hitherto unexampled in a christian bishop. While he maintained with strictness the unity of God, he declared Jesus to be a man begotten by the Holy Spirit, on whom the Divine wisdom descending exerted its influence in a peculiar manner.¹² Three councils were held in Antioch on his account.

of the Logos. If, in some accounts, the divines essence is styled ὁ πατήρ generally, this may have been done by Sabellius, since, according to the Catholic doctrine, ὁ πατήρ may even designate the triune God ὁ ὁσιωδῶς. Finally, with regard to the question whether Sabellius considered the πρόσωπον of the Son as a transitory appearance united to the earthly existence of Jesus, (as Baur, l. c. p. 266, thinks), or whether he believed that the person of Christ should cease to be only with the final consummation, (according to Neander, i. ii. 1031), Gregory of Nyssa decides in favour of the former view, contra Arium et Sabellium, in Ang. Maji coll. viii. ii. 4; Οἱ δὲ κατὰ Σαβέλλιον—eis τὴν μεγίστην τῆς ἀσεβείας ἐκπεπτόκασι πλάνην, οὐόμενοι, διὰ μὲν λειποταξίαν ἀνθρωπίνην προεληλυθέναι τὸν υἱὸν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς προσκαίρως· αὐτοὶ δὲ μετὰ τὴν διόρθωσιν τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων πλημμελημάτων ἀναλελυκότες ἐνδύναι τε καὶ ἀναμεμῆχθαι τῷ πατρὶ.

¹¹ He was a Ducenarius, Euseb. vii. 30. We must not here think of the Ducenarii whom Augustus created as the fourth decuria of knights, so called because they must have property to the amount of ducena sestertia (Sueton. Octav. c. 32), but the ducenarii procuratores, officers of a higher rank, who had so much yearly revenue, to whom Claudius granted the ornamenta consularia (Sueton. Claud. c. 24), and who still continued under Constantine (Cod. Justin. x. 19, 1).

¹² His history is given in Euseb. vii. 27—30. Here also, cap. 30, is found the historical part of the circular letter of the last council of Antioch which was held against him. Doctrinal fragments of the same are given in Leontii Byz. contra Nestor. et Eutyech. lib. iii. in the Greek original from a Bodleian MS. apud J. G. Ehrlich diss. de erroribus Pauli Samos. Lips. 1745, 4. p. 23. Among other original documents put together in the collection of councils (apud Mansi, i. 1033), the Epist. Episcoporum ad Paulum is still the most trust-worthy. The others are partly suspicious, partly spurious beyond a doubt, such as the epistle of Dionysius Alex. ad Paulum.—Fragments of Paul himself are found in the Contestatio ad Clerum Constantinop. in the acts of the council of Ephesus, apud Mansi, v. 393, ap. Leontius, l. c. In Greek from a Paris MS. in J. G. Feuerlini diss. de haeresi Pauli Sam. Gotting. 1741, 4. p. 10, and in Justiniani Imp. lib. contra Monophysitas, in Ang. ¹⁴ A remarkable command of Aurelian, Euseb. vii. 30, 9: τούτοις κρίναι τὸν οἶκον, οἱς ἂν ἐκ κατὰ τὴν Ἰταλίαν καὶ τὴν Ῥωμανίαν πόλιν ἐπισκοποῖ τοῦ δόγματος ἐπιστέλλουσιν.

¹ Fragments of the Greek original are given by Epiphanius (haer. 66). Respecting their spuriousness, see Beausobre, i. p. 129 ff. Yet even by Jerome they were regarded as authentic (catal. c. 72). Cf. Fabricii bibl. Graeca, ed. Harles, vol. vii. p. 275 ss.

Since the Syrian Gnosis, which had spread even to Persia,³ presented so many points of union with the doctrine of Zoroaster,⁴ it is not surprising that the Persian Gnostics should have been led to connect their Christianity still more closely with the Zend doctrine.⁴ After the spiritual aspect of the religion of Zoroaster had declined under the Arsacidae, and become a rude dualism and mere ceremonial worship, the Sassanides (from 227) did every thing in their power to restore its ancient splendour. In the assemblies of the Magi a supreme principle was acknowledged, (Zeruane akerene); and, on the other hand, unqualified dualism with its adherents (Magusaeans, al thanaviah) condemned. These commotions in the bosom of Parsism probably gave rise to the attempt of Manes to unite Christianity with the system of these magusaeans.⁵ Eastern and western writers differ from one another, not only in the name of this sect-founder (Mani—Cubricus, Manes, Manichaeus), but also in their accounts of him.⁶ They agree only in this, that he was hated by the magi, persecuted by the Persian kings, compelled to flee, and lastly, at the command of a king (according to the orientals, Baharam or Bararanes I. from 272—275) barbarously put to death as a corrupter of religion in a fort or castle, (according to the oriental writers Dascarrah, according to the occidental Arabion).

His system of religion rests on the assumption of two everlasting kingdoms coexisting and bordering on each other, the kingdom of light and the kingdom of darkness, the former under the dominion of God, the latter under the demon or hyle.

After the borders had been broken through by a war between the two kingdoms, and the material of light had been mixed with the material of darkness, God caused the world to be formed by the living spirit, (ὁ ζῶν πνεῦμα, spiritus vivens) out of this mixed material, in order that by degrees the material of light here captured (anima and Jesus patibilis) might be again separated, and the old boundaries restored. Two exalted natures of light, Christ (whom Mani calls in preference dextra luminis, τοῦ δεξιῶν φωτός ὡς, &c.) and the Holy Spirit, the former dwelling in the sun and moon (naves), the latter in the air, conduct this process of bringing back the material of light; while the demon and the evil spirits, fettered to the stars, endeavour to hinder them. In every man there dwells an evil soul besides the soul of light;⁷ and it is his commission to secure to the latter the sway over the former, to unite with it as many as possible of the elements of light, which are scattered in nature, especially in certain plants, and thus to free it from the fetters of the evil principle, and prepare the way for its return to the kingdom of light.⁸ After men had long been led astray by the demon, by means of false religions (Judaism and Heathenism), Christ descended from the sun to earth in the appearance of a body, to lead them to the worship of the true God, and by his doctrine to help the souls of light in their struggles for liberty. But his instructions were ¹⁰ Mani begins his Epistola fundamenti (ap. Augustinum contra epist. Manichaei, c. 5) thus: Manichaeus Apostolus Jesu Christi providentia Dei patris. Haec sunt salubria verba de perenni et vivo fonte, quae qui audierit et eisdem primum crediderit, deinde quae insinuant custodierit, numquam erit morti obnoxius, verum aeterna et gloriosa vita fruetur caet.—The Manichaean Felix (Augustin. de act. cum Felice, i. 9: Paulus in altera epistola dicit: "Ex parte scimus et ex parte prophetamus: cum venerit autem quod perfectum est, abolebuntur ea, quae ex parte dicta sunt." (1 Cor. xiii. 9, 10.) Nos audientes Paulum hoc dicere, venit Manichaeus cum praedicatione sua et suscepimus eum secundum quod Christus dixit: "Mitto vobis spiritum sanctum."—Et quia venit Manichaeus, et per suam praedicationem docuit nos initium, medium et finem: docuit nos de fabrica mundi, quare facta est, et unde facta est, et qui fecerunt: docuit nos, quare dies et quare nox: docuit nos de cursu solis et lunae: quia hoc in Paulo non audivimus, nec in caeterorum Apostolorum scripturis: hoc credimus, quia ipse est Paracletus. Itaque illud iterum dico, quod superius dixi: si audiero in altera scriptura, ubi Paracletus loquitur, de quo voluero interrogare, et docueris me, credo et renuntio.—Without doubt, Manes made a distinction between the Holy Spirit and the Paraclete, but was misunderstood by the Catholics (for example, Euseb. h. e. 7, 31, τοῦ μὲν τὸν Παράκλητον καὶ αὐτὸ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον αὐτὸς αὐτὸν ἀπακρόβτην).

⁸ Manes in epist. ad. filiam Menoch (in Augustini op. imperf. lib. iii. c. 172): Sicut animae gignuntur animabus, itaque figmentum corporis a corporis natura digeritur. Quod ergo nascitur de carne, caro est, et quod de spiritu, spiritus est: spiritum autem animam intellige.—(c. 177) Sive enim bonum geramus, non est carnis,—sive malum geramus, non est animae. Hence the Manichaeans had peculiar notions of freedom and sin. Fortunatus, disp. ii. cum Augustino, c. 21: Id est peccatum animae, si post commonitionem Salvatoris nostri et sanam doctrinam ejus a contrari natura et inimica sui stirpe se non segregaverit anima. Secundinus epist. ad Augustin., § 2: (Anima) carnis commixtione ducitur, non propria voluntate. At si, cum se ipsum cognoverit, consentiat malo, et non se armet contra inimicum, voluntate sua peccavit. Quam se iterum pudeat errasse, paratum inveniet misericordiarum auctorem. not fully understood even by the apostles, and after his death were still more falsified by the Christians.⁹ Hence he promised a still greater apostle, the Παράκλητος, who should separate all that was false, and announce the truth in perfection and purity.¹⁰ This person appeared in Mani. The Manichaeans accordingly rejected entirely the Old Testament.¹¹ All that they thought they could make use of in favour of their doctrine belonging to the canonical and apocryphal writings of the New Testament, was regarded by them as a remnant of the original truth. Whatever was opposed to their views was supposed to be error which had been subsequently mixed up with the truth.¹² Thus, they appealed, where it served their purpose, to the canonical gospels¹³ and the epistles of St Paul, as well as to apocryphal gos-

pels, without entirely adopting these writings,¹⁴ but at the same time, without attempting to purge them from error, as Marcion did. Since they found least truth in the history of the apostles written by Luke, they confronted the canonical production with another, under the name of Lucius or Leucius.¹⁵ All these writings could not be canonical in their estimation, meaning by that term, absolutely authoritative. The works of Mani alone were canonical.¹⁶

Their morality had for its object to procure for the good the dominion over the bad soul, by a rigid self-denial. It was divided into the signaculum oris, sign. manus, and sign. sinus. It imposed on the baptised members (electi, perfecti, τέλειαι) so great privations, that most adherents of the sect remained cate-

¹⁴ Cyrillus, Hieros. Catech. iv. and vi. pronounces the gospel of Thomas to be a Manichaean production, and many have followed him; but the Manichaeans may have quoted it for particular sentiments, without entirely adopting it (see Thilo, cod. apocr. N. T. Proleg. p. lxxx.). The gospel of Philip was of Gnostic origin, which document is said to have been used also by the Manichaeans, Trechsel, S. 59.—A catalogue of such writings, which, in part at least, may have been first used by the later Manichaeans, may be found in Timotheus (presb. There have been published Acta S. Thomae Apostoli, ed. J. C. Thilo, Lips. 1823, 8. Comp. the prolegomena to this work, p. lx. Respecting the person of Leucius, the most contradictory accounts are given (Trechsel, S. 61). It is highly probable that he is a mythic collective for all heretical histories of the apostles, and that the name was modelled after that of Luke.

chumens (auditores) as long as possible, for the sake of being released from the observance of the most stringent laws. The worship of the Manichaeans was very simple. They celebrated Sunday by fasting; the day of Mani's death by a yearly festival (βήμα). Baptism, which was administered with oil,¹⁷ and the Lord's supper belonged to the secret worship of the electi.

Mani himself sent out twelve apostles to propagate his doctrine, in like manner afterwards electi were constantly despatched for this purpose. Hence the party remained in very close union. At the head of them was one person, to whom 12 magistri immediately, and again the 72 bishops of the churches, were subordinate. Many followers were attracted by the historical form in which Mani endeavoured to explain so much that is incomprehensible,¹⁸ and by the asceticism of his adherents. Accordingly the Manichaeans spread, soon after the death of their founder, into proconsular Asia, and even further in the Roman dominions, although they were opposed with vehemence, not only by the catholic church, but also persecuted by heathen emperors,¹⁹ who

ALEXANDRIAN SCHOOL.

J. G. Michaelis de scholæ Alexandrinæ sic dictæ catechetice origine, progressu ac præcipuis doctoribus (Symbolæ literariæ, i. iii. 195. Bremæ 1745). J. F. Hilscher de schola Alexandrina, Lips. 1776, 4. H. E. F. Guericke de schola, quæ Alexandria floruit, comm. hist. et theol. (Pp. ii. Halis Sax. 1824, 25, 8.) Pars prior: de externa Scholæ Historia. C. In the present period, Christian theology was cultivated especially at Alexandria, at that time the seat of all the sciences, where the catholic teachers, even by their external relations to the heathen and Gnostics, were compelled to enter philosophical-ly into the doctrines of Christianity.¹ Here began to be very soon felt the necessity of an instruction beyond the usual one given to catechumens, as well for the philosophical proselytes as for those who were to become teachers. After many persons thirsting for knowledge had been in this way collected about a distinguished man, the institution of the *Alexandrian catechetical school*² attached itself to these prior individual efforts shortly before the present period. The height of its prosperity falls under this very time, and its distinguished teachers (κατηχήσεων magistri, Hieron. cat. c. 38.) Pantaenus, Clemens Alexandrinus, Origenes, Heraclas, Dionysius,³ (Pierius and Theognostus?) are the only persons by whom Christian theology was now advanced. The Alexandrian school took its peculiar direction from its very first teachers. Pantaenus, a Stoic philosopher, is otherwise unknown; and we can only judge of him by his pupil Titus Flavius Clemens. The peculiarity of the Alexandrian school is already stamped on the writings of the latter, who was president of the catechetical institution from about 191 till 202, then fled in the persecution raised by Severus, and probably returned to Alexandria († about 220).⁴ But the characteristics of the school

This account is given more fully by Jerome in catal. 36: Pantaenus, stoicæ sectæ philosophus, juxta quandam veterem in Alexandria consuetudinem, ubi a Marco Evangelista semper ecclesiastici fuere doctores, tantæ prudentiæ et eruditionis tam in Scripturis divinis, quam in sæculari literatura fuit, ut in Indiam quoque—mitteretur. Names: τὸ τῆς κατηχήσεως διδασκαλείον (Euseb. h. e. vi. 3, 1, vi. 26,) τὸ ἱερὸν διδασκαλεῖον τῶν ἱερῶν μαθημάτων (Sozom. h. e. iii. 15), ecclesiastica schola (Hieron. cat. c. 38), schola κατηχήσεων (ibid. c. 69).

With others of his writings have been also unfortunately lost the ἑρμηνεύσεις in 8 books, in which later orthodoxy found many ἀσεβεῖς καὶ μυθώδεις λόγους (see Photius, cod. 109). The fragments of it have been collected by Potter in his edition of Clement, vol. ii. p. 1006 ss. A small portion of it, Remarks on the Catholic Epistles, has been preserved in a Latin translation under the title of Adumbrationes Clem. Alex. (best ed. Potter, l. c.); probably the same of which Cassidorus, de institut. div. lit. c. 8, says, that he had prepared it ut exclusis quibusdam offendiculis purificata doctrina ejus securior possit hauriri. were completely developed and matured by the great Origen (ὁ χαλκέντερος, ὁ ἀδαμόντιος) the son of the Martyr Leonides, who died in 202. When a youth of eighteen he was a catechist at Alexandria, and procured for himself a great reputation even in other places. But he displeased his bishop, Demetrius, by being consecrated presbyter at Caesarea (228), went thither in 231, and was then excluded from communion with the church on account of his peculiar opinions. The churches in Palestine, Arabia, and Achaia paid no regard, however, to this excommunication; and Origen not only continued to fill the office of presbyter in Caesarea, but likewise gave instruction in the sciences. Besides, the revision of the corrupted Septuagint (τὰ ἑπταλῶ) occupied him for twenty-eight years. During this time he was twice invited to synods which were held in Arabia against heretics; and both times he succeeded in convincing them of their errors (Beryllus of Bostra, 244—Arabici, 248). So distinguished a teacher of Christianity could not be overlooked in persecutions. He escaped from Maximin the Thracian by fleeing to his friend Firmilian, bishop of Caesarea in Cappadocia. But in the Decian persecution he suffered so much ill usage in Tyre, that he died there some years after († 254).⁶

In opposition to Ritter (Gesch. d. Philos. iv. 576, Gesch. d. christl. Phil. i. 467,) who denies it, see Redepenning, i. 230, and L. Krüger über das Verhältniss d. Orig. zu Amm. adopted as an immutable basis for the orthodox Gnosis, having been moulded and modified in express opposition to the Gnostics. Yet these orthodox Gnostics were led by the connection of certain general philosophical principles and opinions with Christianity, to many speculations which were very like those of their heretical brethren. Like them too, they believed that their Gnosis³ had been handed down as a mysterious doctrine;⁴ and that it should be communicated only to the initiated.⁵ Hence Origen writes about such doctrines with visible hesitation, and warns in particular, against bringing them before the people.⁶ Towards the uninitiated, the Alexandrians regarded removing from the Deity every idea of groundless caprice, that the external circumstances of all morally free beings can only be made conditional by their moral relations. Since, at the same time, this theology assumed that the world was created only on account of the rational being and conformably to his moral necessities, the existence of evil in the present world was thereby explained, though the necessity of a change of world is also established, so far as the moral relations of those beings change. The most remarkable of their principles which result from these premises, and appear fully unfolded in Origen, are the following :

1. The godhead can never be idle. Before the present world there was an endless series of worlds, and an infinite succession of them will follow it.⁹

2. All intellectual beings (angels, stars, men, demons,) were originally created alike, but they were never without bodies, since incorporeality is a peculiar prerogative of Deity. After a great moral inequality had arisen among them by their difference of conduct, God created the present world, which affords a dwelling place to all classes in proportion as they answer their moral condition. The fallen intellectual beings he put into bodies more or less gross according to the measure of their sinfulness.¹⁰ Still they all retain their moral freedom, so that they may rise again from the degraded circumstances in which they exist. Even the punishments of the condemned are not eternal, but only remedial; the Devil himself being capable of amelioration and pardon.¹¹ When the world shall have answered its purpose, as the abode of fallen spirits, it will then be destroyed by fire; and by this very fire souls will be completely purified from all stains contracted by intimate union with the body.¹³ But as spirits always retain their freedom, they may also sin again, in which case a new world like this will be again necessary.

¹¹ That Clemens, Strom. i. p. 367 s., δ δὲ Διάβολος αἰτερούσιος ὢν, καὶ μετανοῆσαι οἷός τε ἦν καὶ κλέψαι, did not hold this point, is proved by Hofstede de Groot, p. 71. On the contrary, Origen de princ. i. 6, § 2: Hi vero, qui de statu primæ beatitudinis moti quidem sunt, non tamen irremediabiliter moti, illis, quos supra descripsimus, sanctis beatisque ordinibus dispensandi subjecti sunt ac regendi: quorum adjutorio usi, et institutionibus ac disciplinis salutaribus, reformati, redire ac restitui ad statum suæ beatitudinis possint.—§ 3: Ex quo, ut opinor, hoc conse-

3. The Alexandrians speak of the Logos,¹⁴ the mediator of all Divine agency, in very exalted, but not always definite, expressions. Evidently, however, they place him beneath the supreme God.¹⁴ Their endeavour to remove all ideas unworthy of God quentia ipsa videtur ostendere, unamquamque rationabilem naturam posse ab uno in alterum ordinem transeuntem per singulos in omnes, et ab omnibus in singulos pervenire, dum accessus profectum defectumve varios pro motibus vel conatibus propriis unusquisque pro liberi arbitrii facultate perpetitur.

¹⁹ Every human term to express this production could not be a fit representative, but only an incomplete symbol. Thus, as far as the Logos was a being like to God, his origination was a γενεῖν, so far as he was produced by the will of God, a ποιεῖν, κτίσειν. Respecting Clement, see Photius, cod. 109: τὸν υἱὸν εἰς κτίσμα κατὰγει (namely in the Hypotyposes). Even Rufinus, de adulterat. libb. Origenis, confesses: interdum invenimus aliqua in libris ejus (Clementis) capitula, in quibus filium Dei creaturam dicit; although he would fain regard these passages as spurious. Clemens Strom. v. p. 699: ἡ σοφία ἢ πρωτόκτιστος τῷ θεῷ. So also Origenes, Comm. in Joh. tom. i. 22: κτίσας—ἐμφύχων σοφίαν ὁ θεός, contra Celsum, v. p. 257, the Son is πρεσβύτατος πάντων τῶν δημιουργημάτων. So also Justinian, l. c. accuses Origen of calling the Son κτίσμα, de princip. lib. iv. These expressions were now generally used by others, since in Prov. viii. 22: Κύριος ἐκτίσέ με ἀρχὴν ὁδῶν αὐτοῦ was a cardinal passage relating to the Logos. See Münter's Dogmengesch. i. 445.—The question whether the Son was of the divine essence was capable of receiving a twofold answer from the standing-point of Origen. De princip. iv. 36 according to the translation of Jerome (Epist. ad Avitum): Intellectualem rationabilemque naturam sentit Deus et unigenitus Filius ejus et Spiritus sanctus; sentiunt Angeli et potestates, caeteraeque virtutes; sentit inte-

4. The human body assumed by the Logos was a real body, but could not have been a common one. According to Clement, it was united immediately with the Logos, and therefore, as it required the Divine ἀνάθεμα of the latter, without πάθη.²¹ Origen taught expressly a human soul in the person of Christ, with which the Logos united itself directly.²² Thus those πάθη were no stumbling-block to him, since the soul only was affected by them. On the contrary, in his opinion, the body of Christ,

Quae utraque similitudines manifestissime ostendunt, communionem substantiae esse Filio cum Patre. Aporrhoea enim ῥοοῦσις videtur i. e. unius substantiae cum illo corpore, ex quo est vel aporrhoea, vel vapor. Selecta in Psalm 135: ὁ σωτὴρ οὐ κατὰ μετουσίαν, ἀλλὰ κατ' οὐσίαν ἐστὶ θεός. On the other hand, de oratione, c. 50: ἕτερος κατ' οὐσίαν καὶ ὑποκειμένης ἐστὶν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ πατρὸς. Comp. Comm. in Joh. tom. ii. 18. The Son was of the divine essence, but did not partake of the divine essence of the Father.

5. The Christian sage (ὁ γνωστικός) in the way the Alexandrians represent him as a pattern, is said to be elevated above the simple believer, not merely by higher perception, but also by a higher virtue which is entirely dispassionate.²⁵ The aim of this virtue is likeness to God,²⁶ its basis, freedom from all the restraints of sensuality,²⁷ its character the highest disinterestedness.²⁸

²⁴ Both have often been accused of holding docetic views even in ancient times. Then, according to Photius, cod. 109, Clement in his Hypotyposes is said to have taught directly, μὴ σαρκωθῆναι τὸν λόγον, ἀλλὰ δόξαι. Modern writers, too, have discovered doceticism in the words of Clement, Coh. ad Graec. p. 86: τὸ ἀνθρώπου προσωπεῖον ἀναλαβὼν καὶ σαρκὶ ἀναπλασάμενος τὸ σωτήριον δρᾶμα τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος ὑπεκρίνετο. 6. The Alexandrians could not be averse to sensual chiliasm. Clement does not allude to it. Origen, however, expressly opposes the chiliasm expectations; and would have all the passages which appear to favour it interpreted allegorically.²⁹

7. Since, in the view of the Alexandrians, the body is merely a prison of the true I; they also assumed that souls, at the time of the resurrection, should not resume the gross material body, but one of fine, incorruptible texture.³⁰

To establish this system from the Holy Scriptures the Alexandrians availed themselves of the allegorical mode of interpretation which had been in use before. But after the interpretation of Scripture had been in this way a mere arbitrary play of fancy till now, Origen gained for himself the merit of reinstating the grammatical interpretation in its rights by a more accurate distinction between the literal, the moral and the mystical (mystic-anagogic and mystic-allegorical) sense.³¹ In his

(CONTINUATION)—ADHERENTS AND OPPOSERS OF ORIGEN.

Origen's peculiar opinions met, even in his lifetime, with as many opponents as friends,¹ and excited suspicion in many bishops.² He and his disciples, however, succeeded in combating and refuting many sensuous views and expectations which were then current among Christians. Thus some overvalued the importance of the body in the personality of man, so much as to suppose that the soul dies, and is again raised along with it.³ Origen overthrew this error, when it appeared in Arabia.⁴ To

His hermeneutical principles are laid down most fully in de princip. lib. iv. his most distinguished disciple Dionysius (president of the catechetical school from 233, from 248 bishop in Alexandria, † 265)⁵ belongs the merit of having victoriously continued, in the east, the opposition to chiliasm begun by his master. An opportunity for this was furnished to him by an Egyptian bishop, Nepos, who in the Ελεγχος Ἀλληγοριστῶν insisted particularly on the literal acceptance of the Apocalypse, and the description of the millennium contained in it. Doubtless the Decian persecution which soon followed contributed to procure many advocates to a view which furnished so strong motives to Christian steadfastness, especially in the province of Arsinoe. But after the persecution, Dionysius succeeded, by oral representations and his work περὶ ἐπαγγελιῶν, not only in convincing that party of their error, but in banishing chiliasm entirely, even among the theologians of the eastern church.⁶ Similar opposition he presented to Sabellius. It is true, that in trying to develop more precisely the Origenist distinctions as adverse to Sabellius' doctrine of the Trinity, he gave offence by designating the Logos a creature of the Father,⁷ and was therefore blamed by the Romish Dionysius; but the many-sided views of Origen's doctrines which he held, permitted him to cloak his view of the Logos as a created being, without altering it.⁸ This convenient pliability of ex-

OTHER DISTINGUISHED TEACHERS OF THE EASTERN CHURCH.

While at Alexandria Scripture interpretation was made to subserve the purpose of speculation, we find in Syria and the neighbouring provinces, favoured by the linguistic relations of these lands, the first traces of that more independent historico-grammatical and critical treatment of the Scriptures, by which the east was so much distinguished in the fourth and fifth centuries.¹ Of their writers we are acquainted, though very imperfectly, with Julius Africanus in Nicopolis (Emmaus), probably a presbyter (about 230), a friend of Origen, the first Christian chronographer;² and two presbyters of Antioch, Doro-

Tertia, quae his omnibus valde contraria est, quod dicunt eum, secundum Arteman vel Paulum Samosatenum, purum hominem, id est, non etiam Deum dicere Christum filium Dei. Post (iv.), ista est, quae istis omnibus adversatur (caeca enim est malitia), quod dicunt eum dicere, δοκῶν i. e. putative tantum et per allegoriam, non etiam secundum ea, quae per historiam referuntur, gesta esse omnia, quae a Salvatore gesta sunt. Alia (v.), quoque criminatio est, qua asserunt, eum duos Christos predicare. Addunt (vi.), illud quoque, quod historias corporales, quae per omnem S. Scripturam referuntur de gestis Sanctorum, penitus deneget. Sed et (vii.), de resurrectione mortuorum, et de impiorum poenis non levi impugnans eum calumnia, velut negantem peccatoribus inferenda esse supplicia. Quidam vero (viii.), disputationes ejus vel opiniones, quas de animae statu vel dispensatione disseruit, culpant. Ultima vero omnia (ix.), est criminatio illa, quae cum omni infamatione dispergitur, μετεσθαιματώσεως, i. e. quod humanas animas in muta animalia, vel serpentes vel pecudes assertat transmutari post mortem, et quod etiam ipsae mutorum animalium animae rationabiles sint.

Still he is considered by Eusebius, Athanasius, Jerome, Chrysostom (comp. his panegyric on him, tom. i. hom. 46), &c., as a holy martyr, and is so regarded by the Romish church at this day.

⁹ Concerning him and his numerous writings, among which the treatise περὶ τοῦ Πάσχα, which adduced the first Canon paschalis (see on it Ideler's Chronologie, ii. 213), was the most important, see Eusebius, vi. 20, 22. Hieronymus in catal. c. 61. Both call him bishop, but do not know in what place. Jerome also designates him as a martyr, Comm. ad Matth. praef., and so later writers call him Episcopus et Martyr. Prudentius, περὶ σφεδράων hymn. xi. relates the martyrdom of one Hippolytus. The same person was a presbyter among the Novatians, stood in high repute with his own party (the heathen called out, v. 80 : ipsum Chisticolis esse caput populi), but in view of death he repented of his taking part in the schism, and exhorted his own disciples, who accompanied him in great numbers, to return to the Catholic communion (v. 27 ss.) Thus he became a Catholic martyr at Portus Romanus (probably under Valerian 258), and his bones were dug up in the vicinity of Rome (v. 151). At the time of Prudentius a splendid martyrdom was here dedicated to him (v. 183), and his memory was celebrated on the ides of August (v. 232.) In the eighth century Hadrian I. restored this Coemeterium b. Hippolyti Martyris (Liber pontificalis, in vita Hadr. I.) At the same place the statue of Hippolytus was found 1551, on whose cathedra the Canon paschalis and a catalogue of his writings are inscribed. It belongs probably to the sixth century (Beschreibung der Stadt Rom von Platner, Bunsen, Gerhard, u. Röstel, ii. ii. 329), and proves that at that time the ancient writer and the martyr were looked upon as the same person. In the later martyrologies a fragment of genuine tradition must be preserved concerning him. Usuardus, Ado, Notker, and others, have the following, on the 30th January:—Apud Antiochiam passio b. Hippolyti Martyris, qui Novati schismate aliquantulum deceptus, operante gratia Christi correctus, ad caritatem ecclesiae rediit, pro qua et in qua illustre martyrium consummavit. Petrus Damianus, lib. i. epist. 9, ad Nicolaum, ii. says: Beatus quoque Nonus Martyr, qui et Hippolytus—postquam denique nonnullos sanctarum expositionum libros luculenter explicuit, tandem Episcopatum deseruit, de Antiochenis partibus, unde erat oriundus, abscessit, Romanos fines appetiit; and then relates his death and burial in Portus Romanus. The result of our inquiry into the history of Hippolytus may be stated. Novatian found great favour particularly in Antioch. The bishop Fabius, and many others, were friendly to him (Euseb. vi. 44, 46, see below § 72, note 8). One of them, the presbyter Hippolytus, determined to travel in person to Rome. Probably he was the same Hippolytus who, while travelling over Alexandria, took with him to Rome the ἐπιστολή διακονική of Dionysius of Alexandria (Euseb. vi. 46. Eusebus here names him without any other specifying circumstance, after having spoken before of one Hippolytus). In Rome he attached himself to the Novatians, and attained to great repute. The separation

II.—THEOLOGY IN THE WEST.

The Latin church, which had been hitherto little more than an

from the church, however, made him suspicious, until the prospect of immediate death decided him to return to the Catholic Church. His memory was celebrated at Antioch, his native city, on the 30th January; at Rome on the 13th August. The later martyrologies have adopted both days, and so made two Hippolytuses out of one. The great reputation which Hippolytus obtained as an ecclesiastical historian misled Eusebius, when he represents him to have been a bishop. Jerome followed him in this particular. The clergyman who was martyred at Portus Romanus may have been previously a bishop somewhere in the east. Although, however, Prudentius correctly designates Hippolytus a presbyter, yet all later writers call him bishop, and conjecture different places where he was such. The Greeks naturally looked for this place in the part where he had suffered, and regarded him sometimes as a bishop of Rome, after the example of Leontius; sometimes as a bishop of Portus Romanus, according to the Paschal Chronicle, Georgius Syncellus, Zonaras, and Nicephorus Callistus. The Romish bishop Gelasius, misled by Rufinus's translation of Euseb. vi. 20 (Beryllus—Episcopus fuit apud Bostram, Arabiae urbem maximam. Erat et nihilominus Hippolytus, qui et ipse aliquanta scripta dereliquit, Episcopus), thought that he was a metropolitian of Arabia, but maintained at the same time as an indubitable fact that he had come to Rome, and suffered martyrdom there. (The later legend dressed out this with other additions: Petrus Dam. l. c. qui postquam triginta millia Saracenorum ad Christi fidem efficacissima praedicatione convertit, etc.) In order to find a middle way between these different accounts, Steph. le Moyne conjectured that he was bishop of Portus Romanus (Aden) in Arabia Felix, and in this several have followed him; but this attempt to reconcile errors could only be a new error itself, since Christianity came for the first time into Arabia Felix in the fourth century. With the results already given agrees very well what may be gathered from the writings of Hippolytus. 1st. Novatianism is as little found in them as in the works of Novatian himself. They were probably composed earlier. 2d. According to Photius, cod. 121, Hippolytus's σύνταγμα κατὰ ἀλφειῶν was an extract from the works of Irenaeus. But Photius infers too much from a passage of that writing when he makes him a disciple of Irenaeus. 3. Jerome, cat. c. 61, enumerates among the works of Hippolytus ὑπομνήματα de laude Domini Salvatoris, in qua praesente Origene se loqui in Ecclesia significat. What follows: In hujus aemulationem Ambrosius—cohortatus est Origenem, in scripturas Commentarios scribere, is founded merely on a misunderstanding of the expression ἐκ τῆς οἰκῆς τοῦ ἐκ τῆς οἰκῆς, which forms a transition in Euseb. vi. c. 22 to chapter 23.) 4.

appendage to the Greek, now attained to more independence and individuality, after it had materially enlarged itself, and since the Latin language had been more adapted, particularly by Tertullian,¹ to the expression of Christian ideas, and had become the usual written language of the western Christians. As the speculative tendency of the Greeks prevailed in the Greek church, so the practical character of the Romans gave expression to itself in the Latin church in the inclination to cultivate chiefly the science of constitutional rights and jurisprudence. While the Greek language now disappeared from the western church, the lively interest of the latter in the new developments of the theology of the east also ceased. In proportion as the Greek theology of the second century was adopted and represented with material grossness in the writings of Tertullian, so was it held fast in the western church, in the third century. Philosophy was too much hated by the westerns,² and their inter-

The numerous exegetical writings (see apud Jerome) point to the east. 5. The Ἀπολογία ὑπὲρ τοῦ κατὰ Ἰωάννην εὐαγγελίου καὶ ἀποκαλύψεως and περὶ χαρισμάτων, marked upon the cathedra, are either directed against the Alogi in Asia Minor (§ 48, note 15), or against the opponents of the Montanists in Rome (§ 59, note 9). For this last supposition appears to speak the notice of Ebedjesu (+ 1318) in Assemani bibl. orient. T. iii., p. i., that among the Chaldeans Hippolyti capita adv. Caium were in existence. (Comp. pretation of Scripture, from ignorance of the original language, was too imperfect to induce them to develop the Grecian theology intelligently. Hence, there arose in the occidental church an aversion to all theological speculation,³ and a doctrinal stability which was urged on by the Greek church only to negative and unconscious improvements. It is true that Montanism, having continued for a long time unmolested in the west, had been condemned, as far as its peculiar doctrines were concerned, in the beginning of this period; but its spirit had obtained so firm a sympathy with the disposition of the westerns to cultivate the science of external ecclesiastical ordinances, that its continuance may be still recognised in a sensuous acceptance of Christianity, and the high value set upon external discipline. Thascius Caecilius Cyprianus, at first a rhetorician in Carthage, (converted to Christianity from 245, bishop at Carthage 248, suffered martyrdom 258,) left behind several small works apologetic and admonitory, and many letters which refer for the

The tendency of the western church to a stable unity could effect so little in the province of dogmatic theology, that even gnostic doctrines were still in many instances tolerated as harmless. attacked on account of it. As a certain theological coarseness is manifestly expressed in the western theology, so the same peculiarity is also exhibited in the sensuous mode of treating the traditional doctrines. Even in definitions of the essence of God, the western writers of this period are not able to disentangle themselves from the forms of a sensuous conception. They thought of the Deity himself as corporeal, and of the soul as literally his breath.¹² They also firmly maintained the resurrection of the same body, the millennium, which appears here almost in its most sensual form,¹³ the condemnation of all who are not Christians, and the eternity of hell punishments. With regard to the Logos, they retained the old emanistic notions, both as to its origin, which was conceived for the most part in a very coarse form,¹⁴ as also its relation to the Father.¹⁵ A remarkable stage of development as concerns this dogma is exhibited by Dionysius, bishop of Rome (259—270) whose education was Grecian, and who unites the Origenist idea of an eternal generation of the Logos with those emanistic notions.¹⁶

Nam sermo est spiritus cum voce aliquid significante prolatus. Sed tamen quoniam spiritus et sermo diversis partibus proferuntur, siquidem spiritus naribus, ore sermo procedit: magna inter hunc Dei filium ceterosque angelos differentia est. FOURTH CHAPTER.

The changes in ecclesiastical life, the germs of which appeared in the second century, though not completely developed till the third, proceeded from certain ideas in particular. The idea of one catholic church out of which there is no salvation, received its full development from Cyprian,¹ and strove to give itself an κράτορα λέγω) συγκεφαλαιουῖσθαι τε καὶ συνάγεσθαι πᾶσα ἀνάγκη. Then he censures τοὺς ποιήματα τὸν υἱὸν εἶναι δοξάζοντας, καὶ γεγενῆσθαι τὸν κύριον, ὡς περ ἐν τι ὅτις γενομένων, νομίζοντας.—Βλάσφημον οὖν οὐ τὸ τυχεῖν, μέγιστον μὲν οὖν, χειροποιήτων τρόπων τινὰ λέγειν τὸν Κύριον. Εἰ γὰρ γέγονεν υἱός, ἦν ὅτε οὐκ ἦν· ἀεὶ δὲ ἦν, εἰ γὰρ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ ἔστιν, ὡς αὐτὸς φησί, καὶ εἰ λόγος καὶ σοφία καὶ δύναμις ὁ Χριστός.—ταῦτα δὲ δυνάμεις οὐσαι τοῦ θεοῦ τυγχάνουσιν· εἰ τοιούτων γέγονεν ὁ υἱός, ἦν ὅτε οὐκ ἦν ταῦτα· ἦν ἄρα καιρὸς, ὅτε χωρὶς ταύτων ἦν ὁ θεός· ἀποκρίσεων δὲ τοῦτο. The expression κύριος ἐκτισέ με ἀρχὴν ἡδὼν αὐτοῦ Prov. viii. 22 means: ἐπέστησε τοῖς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ γεγενησὶν ἔργοις, γεγενησὶ δὲ δι' αὐτοῦ τοῦ υἱοῦ.—Ὁ βυζαντινὸς ἀνθρωπὸς! ποίημα ὁ πρωτότοκος πάσης κτίσεως, ὁ ἐκ γαστρὸς πρὸ ἐωσφόρου γενηθεὶς (Ps. cix. 3), ὁ εἰπὼν ὡς σοφία (Prov. viii. 26)· πρὸ δὲ πάντων βουῶν γενεῇ με; καὶ πολλαχοῦ δὲ τῶν θείων λογίων γεγενῆσθαι, ἀλλ' οὐ γεγενῆσθαι τὸν υἱὸν λεγόμενον εὖροι τις ἄν. We should therefore believe εἰς θεὸν πατέρα παντοκράτορα, καὶ εἰς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα· ἠρῶσθαι δὲ τῷ θεῷ τῶν ὄλων τὸν λόγον. ἐγὼ γὰρ, φησί, καὶ ὁ πατήρ ἐν ἑσμεν (Joh. x. 30). καὶ ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ, καὶ ὁ πατήρ ἐν ἐμοί. Οὕτω γὰρ ἂν καὶ ἡ θεία τριάς, καὶ τὸ ἅγιον κήρυγμα τῆς μοναρχίας διασώζοιτο. Comp. Martini l. c. S. 277 ff. Baur's Lehre v. d. Dreieinigkeit, i. 311.

outward expression in the unity of everything belonging to the church. While religious faith was made interchangeable with the intelligent expression of it in doctrine, men began also to consider the unity of the latter as necessary to the unity of the church, and to limit freedom of inquiry more and more. How an endeavour was made to carry out an agreement in regard to ecclesiastical usages, with this very view, may be seen from Victor's conduct respecting the celebration of Easter in Asia (§ 59); and, after his example, the constant effort to bring about uniformity, even in external usages, is obvious particularly in the western church. The idea of this unity naturally led still farther to a closer external union among the separate churches; and since the bishops, as successors of the apostles, were looked upon as the centre of ecclesiastical unity, that connection was effected by their more intimate attachment to one another; and the episcopal dignity obtained not a little elevation in consequence. Another idea which exerted much influence on ecclesiastical life was this, that the constitution of the Christian church was a nobler copy of the Jewish temple-worship, and therefore, that the Mosaic laws relative to public worship, particularly the priesthood, were still valid in the church. (§ 53). No less fruitful in alterations in the worship of God was finally the idea of a disciplina arcani;² which was current towards the conclusion of the second century. After the Christians had always been compelled to keep their worship private, through fear of persecution and profanation; they now began to find a reason for this mystery in the nature of their holy transactions, by virtue of which they must be kept secret as mysteries from all unbaptized persons (see General Orig. c. Cels. iii. p. 147),³ an idea

Si potuit evadere quisquam, qui extra arcam Noë fuit, et qui extra ecclesiam foris fuerit, evadet.—Tales etiam si occisi in confessione nominis fuerint, macula ista nec sanguine abluitur.—Esse martyr non potest, qui in ecclesia non est.—Occidi talis potest, coronari non potest, &c. ² This appellation of the Christian mysteries is new, and appears to have been first used by G. Th. Meier de recondita veteris ecclesiae theologia, Helmst. 1679, 4.

In primis, quis catechumenus, quis fidelis, incertum est: pariter adeunt, pariter orant, etiam ethnici, si supervenerint: sanctum canibus, et porcis margaritas, licet non veras, jactabunt. cf. Apologet. c. 7. But this secrecy was still limited to the non-admission of the unbaptised to holy ordinances. The fathers of the third century speak without reserve, as yet, of these transactions, as of all the doctrines of Christianity, and Tertullian even reproaches the Valentinians in the following language, adv. Val. 1: nihil magis curant quam occultare, quod praedicant. It was not till the fourth century when this mysterious tendency became general, that even the positive doctrines of Christianity began to be treated as mysteries. Catholic writers have been inclined to explain the non-appearance of their peculiar institutions and dogmas in antiquity by the aid of this disciplina arcana. This is done particularly by Em. a Schelstrate de disciplina arcana, Rom. 1685, 4. Of late works see Th. Lienhart de antiquis liturgiis et de discipl. arcana. Argentor 1829. J. A. (§ 63, note 4 ff).

⁴ The apostolic constitutions and canons (the best edition of them is in Cotelerii Patr. apostolicis, vol. i.) are records of the ecclesiastical customs regarded as apostolic, in the form of apostolic prescriptions (cf. Hieron. epist. 52 ad Lucinium: Unaquaeque provincia abundet in sensu suo, et praecepta majorum leges apostolicas arbitretur. Augustin. contra Donatist. iv. 24: quod universa tenet Ecclesia, nec Conciliis institutum, sed semper retentum est, id non nisi apostolica auctoritate traditum certissime credatur). The apostolic constitutions, ἡ ἀποστολικὴ συντάξις, consist of eight books, and probably belong to Syria. The first six books, presenting an account embracing the entire range of Christian life, were written towards the end of the third century, and are probably the books which Eusebius, h. e. iii. c. 25, quoted as ἡ ἀποστολικὴ συντάξις, Athanasius, in ep. festali, and in Synopsi sacrae Script. as ἡ ἀποστολικὴ συντάξις. The seventh book is an independent shorter manual of the same kind. Hence it generally treats of the same subjects as the first six books, and probably belongs to the beginning of the fourth century. The eighth book refers solely to the holy transactions (τὰ μυστήρια), contains agenda in addition to the appropriate canonical prescriptions, and was put together in the middle of the fourth century as a pontifical book for the use of the clergy. This book had the title ἡ ἀποστολικὴ συντάξις, which,

be considered, after deducting later interpolations, as an evidence of the constitution of the church at the present time. The apostolic canons belong to the fifth and sixth centuries.⁵

HISTORY OF THE HIERARCHY.

After the number of the Christians had greatly increased in after the work had been soon after put along with the other books, was transferred to the whole. Epiphanius often quotes it as διατάξεις or διδασκαίαι τῶν Ἀποστόλων. After Epiphanius there must, however, have been some interpolations, the most important of which are those by which the prescriptions respecting the festival of Christ's birth (v. 13), and the Easter festival (v. 17, cf. Epiphanius haer. xxx. 10), have been altered agreeably to the later form of observance. Krabbe assumes that after Epiphanius many interpolations were made, even doctrinal ones, favourable to the Arians and Macedonians, and that the eighth book was first appended after the time of that father; but in opposition to his opinion see Drey, p. 154, 177. Comp. Dr O. Krabbe über den Ursprung u. den Inhalt d. apost. Constitutionen des Clemens Romanus. Hamburg 1829, especially Dr J. S. v. Drey's neue Untersuchungen über die Constitutionen und Kanones d. Apostel., Tübingen 1832, 8.—According to Baur (über den Ursprung des Episcopats, S. 125 ff. 131 ff), the constitutions are of Ebionitish origin and antipauline tendency, and originated in Rome (p. 134).

Canones Apostolorum, κανόνες ἐκκλησιαστικοὶ τῶν ἁγίων Ἀποστόλων among the Greeks 85, among the Latins 50. Every ecclesiastical fundamental law, whether recorded or not, was at first called κανὼν ἀποστολικός (Alexander, Ep. Alex. about 318 in Theodoret, h. e. i. 3), κανὼν (Conc. Nicaeni Can. 5, 9,) κανὼν ἐκκλησιαστικός (ibid. Can. 2 10): in this sense the expression οἱ ἀποστολικοὶ κανόνες was also used at the Council of Constantinople ann. 394, without however supposing that our present collection is meant. (Drey, p. 396). The first fifty canons were gathered soon after the middle of the fifth century, under the name of Clement, (who, known as the organ of the apostles, by means of the Clementines and Recognitions, (§ 58) appeared the most suitable person for this purpose, from the apostolic constitutions, and from the canons of several synods of the fourth century, (in particular the Synod of Antioch 341). Dionysius Exiguus translated them, and the Latin church holds fast by them alone. But after the commencement of the sixth century, 35 were added among the Greeks, the canons were appended to the constitutions, and the name of Clement transferred to these also. Drey, p. 208 ff. M. the country, separate churches in the country were now frequently formed, which attached themselves either to the district (παροικία) of the nearest town-bishop, and received from him a presbyter or deacon;¹ or chose their own bishops (χρηματοκτονοί) who, however, soon came, in part, to be in a certain state of dependence on the nearest town-bishop.² The power of the bishops was enlarged, not only by this enlargement of their district, but also by an institution which now arose, in consequence of which the bishops came into a closer and more regular union among themselves. We allude to Provincial Synods, which were always becoming more frequent since the end of the second century, and were held in several provinces once or twice in the year.³ As they were for the most part convened in the principal city of the province, under the presidency of the bishops of that city; and since the latter was, as it were, the middle term in relation to the other smaller bishops, by whom alone they stood in connec-² Thus they are called in the Epist. Syn. Antioch. ann. 270, apud Euseb. h. e. vii. 30, 6, ἐπισκόπους τῶν ὁμῶν ἀγῶν. In the Conc. Ancyranum ann. 315, can. 13: Χωρεπισκόπους μὴ ἐξῆναι, πρεσβυτέρους ἢ διακόνους χειροτονεῖν. cf. Bingham, i. p. 192 ss. Planck's Gesellschaftsverf. i. S. 73 ff. In Africa, where the country bishops were particularly numerous, they were not at all distinguished from others, not even by a peculiar name. cf. St. A. Morcelli Africa christiana (Partes iii. ³ Firmiliani epist. ad Cyprian. (in epist. Cyprian. 75): Qua ex causa necessario apud nos fit, ut per singulos annos seniores et praepositi in unum conveniamus ad disponenda ea, quae curae nostrae commissa sunt, ut si qua graviora sunt communi consilio dirigantur. What had hitherto been usual in some provinces, was made a universal regulation by the Council of Nice, Can. 5: καλῶς ἔχει βέλτε, ἐκαστον ἐνιαυτοῦ καθ' ἐκαστην ἐπαρχίαν ὅς τοις ἐτους συνόδους γίνεσθαι. On the origin of Synods see above, § 53, note 6. The regular provincial Synods had, in most of the provinces, their natural type in the Κοινὸν, commune, i. e. the union of the civitates of the province which met from time to time, by deputies, in the metropolis, and gave advice in common matters. So we find frequently on coins Κοινὸν Ἀσίας, Κ. Βαθυρίας, &c. see Eckhel doctrina numorum vet. T. iv. p. 428 ss. Such assemblies were also called concilium, provinciale concilium, see Cod. Theodos. lib. xii. Tit. 12, and Gothofredi paratitlon prefixed to this title. Dirksen's civilistische Abhandl. Bd. 2, S. 16. And vice versa the ecclesiastical provincial synod is called Can. Nic. 5, τὸ κοινὸν τῶν Ἐπισκόπων.

tion with the rest of the church, the bishops of the principal cities (Μητροπολίτης, Metropolitanus)⁴ came gradually to obtain a kind of superintendence over the other bishops of their province (ἐπαρχία). As yet, however, this metropolitan constitution was general only in the east. In the west, it is true, Rome was elevated to be the ecclesiastical metropolis of a great part of Italy; and even in Africa a somewhat similar, though peculiar, diocesan regulation had been adopted;⁵ but in the remaining parts of the west, the Christians had not yet reached such hierarchical associations, on account of the small number of Christian churches.⁶

By this establishment of large ecclesiastical bodies the entire organisation of the church became more compact and united.

Through the medium of the metropolitans the testimonies and papers of the separate churches⁷ were better attested and more safely forwarded; accounts of all important ecclesiastical events and resolutions were more expeditiously and generally circulated; and thus each community was always acquainted with the state of the whole church.

The bishops of the three great cities of the Roman empire, Rome, Alexandria, and Antioch, had at the same time the largest dioceses. Hence they were regarded as the principal bishops of Christendom; and their assent in all general affairs was looked upon as of special importance. Still, however, at this time, great stress was laid on the fact that all bishops were perfectly alike in dignity and power; and that each in his own diocese was answerable only to God for his conduct.⁸ They could the less believe in the superior authority of the Romish bishop, because the idea of his being Peter's successor only began to be developed;⁹ and besides, no higher power was attributed to Peter than to the other apostles.¹⁰ In the west, indeed, gem damus, quando habeat in Ecclesiae administratione voluntatis suae arbitrium liberum unusquisque praepositus, rationem actus sui Domino redditurus.

⁹ The fiction of Peter being first bishop of Rome proceeded from the Clementines (§ 58, note 9), and was propagated in the Catholic church by the Recognitions. Cyprian is the first who designates the Romish chair the locum Petri (Ep. 52 ad Antonianum), and Petri cathedram; but at the same time he takes all bishops to be successors of Peter (see note 10). Thus he was of the same opinion as Eusebius, Rufinus, and Epiphanius (§ 27, note 6,) that Peter, during his stay at Rome, had the supreme direction of the church there, without having been connected with it as bishop. In Rome itself, however, many went farther, as may be seen from Firmiliani ep. ad Cyprianum (Ep. Cyp. 75): Stephanus, qui sic de Episcopatus sui loco gloriatur, et se successionem Petri tenere contendit.

Hence § 14: λέλεκται τῷ Πέτρῳ καὶ παντὶ Πέτρῳ. Cyprian. ep. 27: Dominus noster—episcopi honorem et ecclesiae suae rationem disponens in evangelio loquitur et dicit Petro: Ego tibi dico, quia tu es Petrus, &c. (Matth. xvi. 18, 19).—Inde per temporum et successionum vices episcoporum ordinatio et ecclesiae ratio decurrit, ut ecclesia super episcopos constitatur, et omnis actus ecclesiae per eosdem praepositos gubernetur:—Cyprian. de unitate ecclesiae: Loquitur Dominus ad Petrum: “Ego tibi dico,” inquit, “quia tu es Petrus,” &c. (Matth. xvi. 18, 19). [Et iterum eidem post resurrectionem suam dicit: “Pascere oves meas” (Joan. xxi. 15). Super illum unum aedificat ecclesiam suam, et illi pascendas mandat oves suas]: et quamvis Apostolis omnibus post resurrectionem suam parem potestatem tribuat et dicat: “sicut misit me pater,” &c. (Joh. xx. 21, 23): tamen ut unitatem manifestaret [unam cathedram constituit, et] unitatis ejusdem originem ab uno incipientem sua auctoritate disposuit. Hoc erant utique et caeteri Apostoli, quod fuit Petrus, pari consortio praediti et honoris et potestatis: sed exordium ab unitate proficiscitur [et primatus Petro datur, ut una Christi ecclesia et cathedra una monstretur. Qui ecclesiae renititur et resistit, [qui cathedram Petri, super quem fundata est ecclesia, deserit,] in ecclesia se esse confidet? The passages in brackets are wanting in the oldest MSS., and are Romish interpolations. See especially Rigaltii observatt. ad Cyp. p. 162 ss. and Baluzii notae 11—15 to the lib. de unit. eccl. (which last, however, have been very much abridged by the Benedictine editors). Even the words still admitted by Rigaltius: super illum unum aedificat ecclesiam, are wanting in the oldest MSS. cf. Edm. Richerii defensio lib. de eccles. et polit. potestate, i. p. 115. These additions have quite another sense in the mouth of Cyprian than the interpolators meant. For example, what is denoted by the expression in Cyprian, primatus Petro datur, is clear from his 71 epist.: Nam nec Petrus, quem primum Dominus elegit, et super quem aedificavit ecclesiam suam, cum secum Paulus de circumcissione postmodum disceptaret, vindicavit sibi aliquid insolenter aut arroganter assum-sit, ut diceret, se primatum tenere, et obtemperari a novellis et posteris sibi potius oportere.

¹¹ Cypriani epist. 55, ad Cornelium Episc. Romanum, who had received the excommunicated Felicissimus as ambassador of the Carthaginian archbishop Fortunatus:—satis miratus sum, cum animadvertissem, te minis atque terroribus eorum, qui venerant, aliquantum esse commotum, cum te, secundum quod scripsisti, agressi essent, cum summa desperatione comminantes, quod si litteras quas attulerant non acce-pisses, publice eas recitarent, et multa turpia ac probrosa et ore suo digna proferrent. Quod si ita res est, frater carissime, ut nequissimum timeatur audacia—actum est de episcopatus vigore, etc. Quibus etiam satis non fuit ab evangelio recessisse—foris sibi extra ecclesiam et contra ecclesiam constituisse conventiculum perditae factionis.—Post ista adhuc insuper pseudoepiscopo sibi ab haeticis constituto navigare audent et ad Petri cathedram, atque ad ecclesiam principalem, unde unitas sacerdotalis exorta est, a schismaticis et profanis litteras ferre, nec cogitare, eos esse Romanos, quorum fides Apostolo praedicante laudata est (Rom. i. 8), ad quos perfidia habere non possit accessum. Quae autem causa veniendi et pseudoepiscopum contra episcopos factum nuntiandi? Aut enim placet illis quod fecerunt: et in suo scelere perseverant: aut si displicet et recedunt, sciunt quo revertantur. Nam cum statutum sit ab omnibus nobis, et aequum sit pariter ac justum, ut uniuscujusque causa illic audiatur, ubi est crimen admissum; et singulis pastoribus portio gregis sit adscripta, quam regat unusquisque et gubernet, rationem sui actus Domino redditurus: oportet utique eos quibus praesumus non circumcursare, nec episcoporum concordiam cohaerentem sua subdola et fallaci temeritate collidere, sed agere illic causam suam, ubi et accusatores habere et testes sui criminis possint; nisi si paucis desperatis et perditis

As all bishops were supposed to be perfectly alike in dignity and power, so also they believed that they had the same general duties towards the whole church in addition to those peculiar duties they owed to their respective dioceses.¹³ Accordingly they all asserted equally the right of interfering, in cases where other bishops had departed from the fundamental rules of the church, by admonitions, reprimands, and even ecclesiastical punishment.¹⁴

minor videtur esse auctoritas episcoporum in Africa constitutorum, qui jam de illis judicaverunt. Jam causa eorum cognita est, jam de eis dicta sententia est: nec censuræ congruit sacerdotum inobis atque inconstantis animi levitate reprehendi, cum Dominus doceat et dicat: Sit sermo vester, est est, non non (Matth. v. 37). Cyprian, in his letters, constantly calls the Roman bishops frater and collega. What gave the latter a predominance in the west is evident from Synodi Arelatensis (in the year 314), Epist. ii. ad Sylvestrum Papam: Placuit etiam ante scribi ad te, qui majores dioeceses teneas, et per te potissimum omnibus insinuari. Quid autem sit, quod senserimus, scripto nostræ mediocritatis subjunximus.

Sufficiat multos illic ex fratribus nostris annis istis superioribus excessibus sine pace. Vel ceteris subveniatur qui supersunt. Iocirco enim, frater carissime, copiosum corpus est sacerdotum concordiae mutuae glutino atque unitatis vinculo copulatum, ut si quis ex collegio nostro hæresim facere et gregem Christi lacerare et vastare tentaverit, subveniant cæteri, et quasi pastores utiles et misericordes oves dominicas in gregem colligant. Quid enim si in mari portus aliquis munitionibus suis ruptis infestus et periculosus esse navibus coeperit, nonne navigantes ad alios proximos portus naves suas dirigunt, ubi sit tutus accessus et salutaris introitus et statio secunda? Quod nunc esse apud nos debet, frater carissime, ut fratres nostros, qui jactati Marciani scopulis petunt ecclesiæ

This common right was of course principally exercised by the most distinguished and powerful bishops.

(CONTINUATION.) HIERARCHY IN THE SEPARATE CHURCHES.

After the idea of the Mosaic priesthood had been adopted in the Christian church, the clergy, as was natural, elevated themselves far above the laity. A peculiar mystic influence was ascribed to the ancient consecration as ordination performed by them; and they now appeared in the character of persons appointed by God himself to be the medium of communication between Him and the Christian world.¹

portus salutare, suscipiamus ad nos prompta et benigna humanitate. Nam etsi pastores multi sumus, unum tamen gregem pascimus, et oves universas, quas Christus sanguine suo et passione quæsiuit, colligere et fovere debemus, etc. In the matter of the Spanish bishops Basilides and Martial (in the year 256), Cyprian called upon to interfere, declares the interposition of Stephanus, bishop of Rome, in favour of those deposed bishops to be exceptionable, Epist. 68, ad cleram et plebes in Hispania consistentes: Nec rescindere ordinationem (Sabini) jure perfectam potest, quod Basilides post crimina sua detecta et conscientiam etiam propria confessione nudatam, Romam pergens, Stephanum collegam nostrum longe positum et gestae rei ac veritatis ignarum fefellit, ut exambiret reponi se injuste in episcopatum, de quo fuerat jure depositus. Etsi aliqui de collegis nostris exstiterint (namely, Stephanus), fratres dilectissimi, qui deificam disciplinam negligendam putant, et cum Basilide et Martiale temere communicant, conturbare fidem nostram res ista non debet, etc. Cf. du Pin, p. 150.

For the inferior services of the church particular offices were appointed, different, however, in the Greek and Latin churches. in the former, ὑπηρέται (or ὑποδιδάκοντες), ψαλτωδοί or (ψάλλται), ἀναγνώσται and πυλῶται;² in the latter, Subdiaconi, Acoluthi, Exorcistae, Lectores; and Ostiarii,³ (afterwards called ordines minores). All oppressed and helpless persons, especially widows, orphans, and virgins,⁴ were referred to the clergy for assistance. The Memini enim, quid jam mihi sit ostensum, immo quid sit servo obsequenti et timenti de dominica et divini auctoritate praeceptum: qui inter caetera quae ostendere et revelare dignatus est, et hoc addidit: Itaque qui Christo non credit sacerdotem facienti, et postea credere incipiet sacerdotem vindicanti. Cf. Epist. 45, 52, 65. On the dignity of the priests, and particularly of the bishops, see Const. Ap. ii. 26 ss. As spiritual fathers, they are to be regarded as higher than earthly parents, c. 33, higher than kings and princes, c. 34: Τοῦτοις ἄρχοντας ὑμῶν καὶ βασιλεῖς ἡγείσθαι νομίζετε, καὶ δασμοὺς ὡς βασιλεῖς προσφέρετε. Ὅσαυτοῖν ψυχῇ σώματος κρείττων, τοσοῦτῳ ἱεροσότην βασιλείας· δεσμεύει γὰρ αὐτῇ καὶ λύει τοὺς τιμωρίας ἢ ἀφέσεως ἀξίους· διὰ τὸν ἐπίσκοπον στέργειν ὀφείλετε ὡς πατέρα, φοβέσθαι ὡς βασιλέα, τιμᾶν ὡς κύριον.

² So Constitutt. Apost. iii. 11, v. 17. Those who are called in the first six books ὑπηρέται are denominated ὑποδιδάκοντες in viii. 28 (ὑπηρέται γὰρ εἰσι διακόνων): a ὑποδιδάκων is also named by Athanasius in epist. ad solitariam vitam agentes. Many communities, however, had different regulations. In the enumeration contained in Const. Apost. ii. 28, the ὑπηρέται are wanting, in the eighth book the πυλῶται. On the other hand, in viii. 11, the deacons have to watch the doors of the men, the subdeacons those of the women (cf. Conc. Laodic. in the fourth century, can. 22: ὅτι οὐ δεῖ ὑπηρέτην τὰς θύρας ἐγκαταλιμπάνειν). Thus the ὑποδιδάκοντες and the πυλῶται were sometimes the same, sometimes different individuals. Respecting the readers and singers, see Socrates, hist. eccl. v. 22: ἐν Ἀλεξανδρείᾳ ἀναγνώσται καὶ ὑποβολεῖς ἀδιάφορον, εἴτε κατηχούμενοι εἴτε, εἴτε πιστοί. The Greek church never adopted Acoluthi and Exorcists, comp. Constitutt. Apost. viii. 26: ἐπορκιστὴς οὐ χειροτονεῖται. His gift is free favour bestowed by God; and should he wish to assume the clerical office, he is ordained a bishop, presbyter, or deacon.

⁴ Const. Ap. ii. 26: Αἱ τε χῆραι καὶ ὀρφανοὶ εἰς τύπον τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου

bishop (Papa, Tert. de pudic. 13. Πάπα ιερότατος, Gregor. Thaum. epist. can. i. Praepositus, Cyprian note 1), exercised this support, as well as the administration of the entire wealth of the church by the deacons.⁵ In like manner, supported by his clergy, he was umpire in all disputes between the members of his church.⁶ The bishops greatly increased in reputation and revenues, both by the enlargement of their dioceses and the clergy subject to them, and by the operation of synods. But in this very way many were now led astray into pride, ambition, and avarice;⁷ sometimes even into an imλελογισθῶσαν ὁμῶν· αἱ τε παρθέναι εἰς τόπον τοῦ θυμιατηρίου τετιμῆσθωσαν καὶ τοῦ θυμιάματος.

⁶ As the Jews were accustomed to decide their disputes by umpires chosen from among the people, agreeably to the Mosaic law (Joseph antt. xiv. 10, 17, xvi. 6), so from the beginning the Christians also, according to 1 Cor. vi. 1 ff., were wont to establish the relations subsisting among them by the gospel, not by a heathen tribunal. The Roman jurisprudence favoured generally procedure by arbitration, as Digest. lib. iv. tit. 8 : De receptis, qui arbitrium receperunt, ut sententiam dicant, and in order to make the arbitration sentence secure, prescribed a penal clause to be inserted in the compromise. The Christians were accustomed to choose their bishops as umpires. Their decisions required no such safeguard, but were sufficiently protected by religious awe. Respecting this point, see Const. App. ii. 45—53. According to chapter 47, Monday is said to be the episcopal judicial day on which the bishop, surrounded by his presbyters and deacons, hears the contending parties, and also complaints regarding unchristian conduct. First of all, the other clergy attempted to reconcile the parties, and if this proves ineffectual, the episcopal sentence succeeds. But the bishop ἐν τῇ δικαστηρίῳ σύμφηρον ἔχει καὶ συνίστορα τῆς δίκης τὸν χριστὸν τοῦ θεοῦ.

⁷ Origenes in Exod. hom. xi. § 6 : Quis autem hodie eorum, qui populis praesunt, non dico si jam aliqua ei a Deo revelata sunt, sed in legis scientia aliquid meriti habet, consilium dignatur inferioris saltem sacerdotis accipere? nedum dixerim laici vel gentilis. Idem in Matthaeum, Tom. xvi. § 8 (on Luke xxii. 25, 26) : Ἡμεῖς—τιούτοις ἔσμεν, ὡς ἐπὶ τότε καὶ τὸν τῶν κακῶς ἀρχόντων ἐν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ὑπερβάλλειν τόπον, καὶ μορσουχί ζητεῖν ὡς οἱ βασιλεῖς δορυφόρους, καὶ φοβερούς ἑαυτοὺς καὶ δυσπρόσιτους μάλιστα τοῖς πένθῃ κατασκευάζοντες, τοιοῦτοι ἔσμεν πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἐντυγχάνοντας ἡμῶν, καὶ περὶ τινος ἀξιοῦντας, ὡς οὐδὲ οἱ τώρανοι, καὶ ὠμότεροι τῶν ἀρχόντων πρὸς τοὺς ἱκέτας. Καὶ ἐστὶ γε ἰδεῖν ἐν πολλαῖς νομιζομέναις ἐκκλησίαις, καὶ μάλιστα ταῖς τῶν μεζόνων πόλεων, τοὺς ἡγουμένους τοῦ λαοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ μηδεμίαν ἰσολογίαν ἐπιτρέποντας, ἔσθ' ὅτε καὶ τοῖς καλλίστοις τῶν Ἰησοῦ μαθητῶν, εἶναι πρὸς αὐτοὺς· καὶ ταῦτα πάντα μοι λελεκται βουλευμένῳ κατὰ τὸν λόγον παραστῆσαι, ὅτι οὐ μνηστέον τῷ ἀρχοντι τῆς ἐκκλησίας τὸν ἀρχοντα τῶν ἐθνῶν κ. τ. λ. moderate ostentation.⁸ Still, however, their power continued to be restricted in many ways. Although the provincial bishops exercised a decided influence on the choice of a bishop, yet the election depended in a great degree on the church.⁹ The bishop himself, it is true, nominated the inferior clergy, but the presbyters had first to be approved by the church.¹⁰ In the discharge Ibid. § 10, 12, 14, 61, in Num. hom. ii. 1, in Esaiam, hom. vii. 3. Cyprian. de lapsis: Episcopi plurimi, quos et hortamento esse oportet caeteris et exemplo, divina procuracione contemta, procuratores rerum saecularium fieri; derelicta cathedra, plebe deserta, per alienas provincias oberrantes, negotiationis quaestuosae nundinas aucupari; esurientibus in ecclesia fratribus, habere argentum largiter velle, fundos insidiosis fraudibus rapere, usuris multiplicantibus fenus augere.

⁹ Comp. § 30, note 12. Cyprian. epist. 68: plebs ipsa maxime habet potestatem vel eligendi dignos sacerdotes, vel indignos recusandi. Quod et ipsum videmus de divina auctoritate descendere, ut sacerdos plebe praesente sub omnium oculis deligatur, et dignus atque idoneus publico iudicio ac testimonio comprobetur, sicut in Numeris Dominus Moysi praecepit dicens: Apprehende Aaron fratrem et Eleazarum filium ejus, et impone eos in montem coram omni synagoga, etc. (Num. xx. 25). Coram omni synagoga jubet Deus constitui sacerdotem, id est, instruit et ostendit, ordinationes sacerdotales non nisi sub populi assistentis conscientia fieri oportere, ut plebe praesente vel detegantur malorum crimina vel bonorum merita praedicentur, et sit ordinatio justa et legitima, quae omnium suffragio et iudicio fuerit examinata. Propter quod diligenter de traditione divina et apostolica observatione servandum est et tenendum, quod apud nos quoque et fere per provincias universas tenetur, ut ad ordinationes rite celebrandas ad eam plebem, cui praepositus ordinatur, episcopi ejusdem provinciae proximi quique conveniant, et episcopus deligatur plebe praesente, quae singulorum vitam plenissime novit, et uniuscujusque actum de ejus conversatione perspexit. Origenes in Levit. hom. vi. c. 3. Hence in Cyprian: Episcopus factus de Dei et Christi ejus iudicio, de Clericorum testimonio, de Plebis suffragio (epist. 52, cf. ep. 41), cf. Lamprid. in Sev. Alex. c. 45 (§ 56, note 6). F. A. Staudenmaier's Gesch. der Bischofswahlen, Tübingen 1830, S. 20.

DIVINE SERVICE.

In the third century the traces of buildings devoted exclusively to Christian worship became more frequent and obvious;¹ and as early as the peaceful times between the Valerian and Diocletian persecutions, splendid edifices had been erected for this purpose. These were called προσευκτήριον, κυριακόν, dominicum, οίκος ἐκκλησίας and simply ἐκκλησία. From the time of Constantine they were also styled ναός, templum, but never fanum and delubrum. In imitation of the temple of Jerusalem, a part of the interior was inaccessible to the people (ἀγίασμα, βῆμα, chorus), where the wooden table for the Lord's Supper (τράπεζα, mensa sacra) stood beside the seats of the clergy (καθέδρα, θρόνοι).² Though the Christians were fond of certain religious symbols on many of their household utensils,³ yet nothing of this kind was allowed in the churches.⁴

At the time of Origen, the Christians had no other general festivals besides Sunday, than the paraceve (preparation), the

The arrangement of Divine worship at this time is found in the Constitt. Apost. ii. 57. At the agapae, the clergy and poor were particularly remembered. (l. c. ii. 23.)

The respect paid to martyrs still maintains the same character as in the second century, differing only in degree, not in kind, from the honour shown to other esteemed dead. As the churches held the yearly festivals of their martyrs at the graves of the latter,⁹ so they willingly assembled frequently in the burial places of their deceased friends,¹⁰ for which they used in many places even caves (cryptae, catacumbae).¹¹ At the cele-

After the holiest transactions of public worship began to be treated as mysteries, the mode of admission to Christianity naturally assumed another form. A preparatory course preceded it, in which the catechumens (κατηχούμενοι) were instructed by suitable teachers (catechistes, doctor audientium) and prepared for baptism through different classes (ἀκροούμενοι, audientes,—γυνυκλινόντες, genuflectentes,—βαπτιζόμενοι, φωτιζόμενοι, competentes).² The condition of catechumen usually continued several years; but the catechumens often deferred even baptism as long as possible on account of the remission of sins by which it was to be accompanied.³ Hence it was often necessary to baptise the sick; and for them the rite of sprinkling was introduced (baptismus clinicorum, τῶν κλινικῶν).⁴ The baptism of children was more common.⁵ The exorcism of those about to

² At this time the positive doctrines had not yet been kept secret from the catechumens. See the rule respecting their instructions in Const. Apost. vii. 39.

³ In Tertullian and Cyprian the audientes and catechumeni are synonymous. In Origen contra Cels. iii. 481, ed. de la Rue, Boehmer christl. Kirchl. Alterthumswissenschaft, ii. 287, and Rothe de disciplinæ arcani origine, p. 13, find three classes of catechumens. See on the other side C. F. W. Hasselbach de Catechumenorum ordinibus, quot fuerint in vetere Eccl. graeca et lat., 1839, and Redepenning's Origenes, i. 358. The γυνυκλινόντες are first mentioned by Conc. Neocaesar. can. 5, Nicaen. can. 14. Tob. Pfanner de Catechumenis antiquae ecclesiae, Francof. et Goth. 1688, 12. Bingham antiquitt. lib. x. (vol. iv.)

⁵ cf. Cypriani ep. 76, ad Magnum, that the baptism of them ought not to be regarded as invalid, eo quod aqua salutari non loti sunt, sed perfusi.

When the congregations became larger, presbyters and deacons baptised in addition to the bishop. In the west, however, the baptised had to receive from the bishop the imposition of hands.⁷ In the east the baptising presbyters performed this ceremony.⁸

As those who were excommunicated were universally supposed to be under the dominion of the devil,⁹ as much as the unbaptised, they had to undergo, as poenitentes, a similar though more severe probation-period than the catechumens, before they could be again received (pacem dare, reconciliare).¹⁰ The No-

¹⁰ In what relation this admission was supposed to stand to the forgiveness of sins may be seen from Firmiliani ep. ad Cypr. (Ep. Cypr. 75):—per singulos annos seniores et praepositi in unum convenimus, ut si qua graviora sunt, communi consilio dirigantur, lapsis quoque fratribus et post lavacrum salutare a diabolo vulneratis per poenitentiam medela quaeratur: non quasi a nobis remissionem peccatorum consequantur, sed ut per nos ad intelligentiam delictorum suorum convertantur, et Domino plenius satisfacere cogantur. Cyprian. de lapsis: Nemo se fallat, nemo se decipiat. Solus Dominus misereri potest: veniam peccatis, quae in ipsum commissa sunt, solus potest ille largiri, qui peccata nostra portavit.—Homo Deo esse non potest major; nec remittere aut donare indulgentia sua servus potest, quod in Dominum delicto graviore commissum est.—Dominus orandus est, Dominus nostra satisfactione placandus est, qui negantem negare se dixit, qui omne iudicium de patre solus acceperit.—Confiteantur singuli, quae so vos, fratres dilectissimi, delictum suum, dum adhuc qui deliquit in saeculo est, dum admitti confessio ejus potest, dum satisfactio et remissio facta per sacerdotes apud Dominum grata est.—Rogamus vos, ut pro vobis Deum rogare possimus. Preces ipsas ad vos prius vertimus, quibus Deum pro vobis, ut misereatur, oramus. (Later Leo I. about 450, Ep. 89: sic divinae bonitatis praesidia ordinata, ut indulgentia Dei nisi supplicationibus sacerdotum nequeat obtineri). vation disputes occasioned the orientals to appoint a πρεσβύτερος ἐπὶ τῆς μεταβολῆς in the separate churches;¹¹ and this seems to have had an influence in bringing it about that public penance, even at the end of the third century, had a succession of grades similar to the probation-period of the catechumens.¹² The four gradus or stationes poenitentiae were πρόσκλησις, ἀκράσις, ὕπνισσις, σύστασις (προσκλησίνοντες, χειμάζοντες, flentes, hiemantes,—ἀκροώμενοι, audientes—γόνυκλίνοντες, ὕποκλινοντες, genuflectentes, substrati—συνιστάμενοι, consistentes). Excommunication fell only on public, gross offences. Other sinners were referred to the admonition of the more experienced brethren.¹³

note 1. The reconciliation was no actus ordinis, but jurisdictionis, and could therefore be transferred from the bishop himself to a deacon. Cypr. ep. 12, directa, ut qui libellos a martyribus acceperunt, et praerogativa eorum apud Deum adjuvari possunt (ep. 13, et auxilio eorum adjuvari apud Dominum in delictis suis possunt), si incommodo aliquo et infirmitatis periculo occupati fuerint, non expectata praesentia nostra, apud presbyterum quemcunque praesentem, vel si presbyter repertus non fuerit, et urgere exitus coeperit, apud diaconum quoque exomologesin facere delicti sui possint: ut manu eis in poenitentiam imposita veniant ad Dominum cum pace, quam dari martyres litteris ad nos factis desideraverunt.

Tantummodo circumspice diligentius, cui debeas confiteri peccatum tuum. Proba prius medicum, cui debeas causam languoris exponere, qui sciat infirmari cum infirmante, flere cum flente, qui condolendi et compatiendi noverit disciplinam: ut ita demum, si quid ille dixerit, qui se prius et eruditum medicum ostenderit et misericordem, si quid consilii dederit, facias, et sequaris, si intellexerit et praeviderit, talem esse languorem tuum, qui in conventu totius Ecclesiae exponi debeat et curiari, ex quo fortassis et caeteri aedificari poterunt, et tu ipse facile sanari: multa hoc deliberatione, et satis perito medici illius consilio procurandum est. Of course application was especially made to the clergy: hence Origenes in Levit. hom. ii. § 4: Est—per poenitentiam remissio peccatorum, cum lavat peccator in lacrymis stratum suum,—et cum non erubescit sacerdoti Domini indicare peccatum suum, et quaerere medicinam; in Levit. hom. v. § 4: Discant sacerdotes Domini, qui Ecclesiis praesunt, quia pars eis data est cum his, quorum delicta repropitiaverint. Quid autem est repropitiare delictum? Si assumseris peccatorem, et monendo, hortando, docendo, instruendo adduxeris eum ad poenitentiam, ab errore correxeris, a vitis emendaveris, et effeceris eum talem, ut ei converso propitius fiat Deus pro delicto, repropitiassse diceris.

Cyprian. 21): Cum benedictus martyr Paulus adhuc in corpore esset, vocavit me et dixit mihi: Luciane, coram Christo dico tibi, ut si quis post arcessionem meam abs te pacem petierit, da in nomine meo. Epist. 16: Universi Confessores Cypriano Papae Salutem! Scias, nos universis, de quibus apud te ratio constiterit, quid post commissum egerint, dedisse pacem, et hanc formam per te et aliis Episcopis innotescere volumus. Optamus te cum sanctis Martyribus pacem habere. Praesente de Clero et Exorcista et Lectore, Lucianus scripsit.—Cyprian. epist. 22, ad Clerum Romanum: Quae res maiorem nobis conflât invidiam, ut nos, cum singulorum causas audire et excutere coeperimus, videamur multis negare, quod se nunc omnes jactant a Martyribus et Confessoribus accepisse. Denique hujus seditionis origo jam coepit. Nam in provincia nostra per aliquot civitates in Praepositos impetus per multitudinem factus est, et pacem, quam semel cuncti a martyribus et confessoribus datam clamitabant, confestim sibi repraesentari coegerunt, territis et subactis Praepositis sui, qui ad resistendum minus virtute animi et robore fidei praevalebant. Apud nos etiam quidam turbulenti, qui vix a nobis in praeteritum regebantur, et in nostram praesentiam differebantur, per hanc epistolam (Confessorum, ep. 16) velut quibusdam facibus accensi, plus exardescere, et pacem sibi datam extorquere coeperunt. Cyprian's decisions regarding the praerogativa Martyrum (see Epist. 12, above note 10.) Lib. de lapsis: Credimus quidem posse apud judicem plurimum Martyrum merita et opera justorum: sed cum iudicii vies venerit, cum post occasum saeculi hujus et mundi ante tribunal Christi populus ejus adstiterit. Caeterum si quis praepropera festinatione temerarius remissionem peccatorum dare se cunctis putat posse, aut audet Domini praecepta rescindere, non tantum nihil prodest, sed et obest lapsis. Provocasse est iram non servasse sententiam, nec misericordiam prius Dei deprecandum putare, sed contento Domino de sua facultate praesumere.—Mandant martyres aliquid fieri? sed si justa, si licita;—ante est, ut sciamus illos de Deo impetrasse quod postulant, tunc facere quod mandant. Cyprian deferred the final decision respecting the lapsed to a council which was to be held after persecution had ceased, (ep. 9, 11): but he allowed that before this, those lapsi furnished with libellis pacis might be re-admitted on the sick-bed. Ep. 12, 13, see above note 10. Comp. Rettberg's Cyprianus, S. 64.

Nam cum—proelium gloriosi certaminis in persecutione ferveret, toto hortatu et pleno impetu militum vires fuerant excitandae, et maxime lapsorum mentes—fortiter animandae, ut poenitentiae viam non solum precibus et lamentationibus sequerentur, sed—ad confessionis potius ardorem et martyrii gloriam nostris increpiti vocibus provocarentur.—Secundum quod tamen ante fuerat destinatum, persecutione sopita,—copiosus Episcoporum numerus—in unum convenimus, et scripturis divinis ex utraque parte prolatis, temperamentum salubri moderatione libravimus, ut nec in totum spes communicationis et pacis lapsis denegaretur, ne plus desperatione deficerent,—nec tamen rursus censura evangelica solveretur, ut ad communicationem temere prosilirent; sed traheretur diu poenitentia, et rogaretur dolenter paterna clementia, et examinarentur causae et voluntates et necessitates singulorum.—Ac si minus sufficiens Episcoporum in Africa numerus videbitur, etiam Romam super hac re scripsimus ad Cornelium collegam nostrum; qui et ipse cum plurimis coëpiscopis habito concilio in eandem nobiscum sententiam pari gravitate et salubri moderatione consensit.—Nec putes, frater carissime, hinc aut virtutem fratrum minui aut martyria deficere, quod lapsis laxata sit poenitentia, et quod poenitentibus spes pacis oblata.—Nam et moechis a nobis poenitentiae tempus conceditur et pax datur (comp. § 53, note 39, § 59, note 4). Non tamen iccirco virginitas in ecclesiae deficit, &c.—Miror autem quosdam sic obstinatos esse, ut dandam non putent lapsis poenitentiam, aut poenitentibus existiment veniam denegandam, cum scriptum sit: Memento unde cecideris, et age poenitentiam, et fac priora opera (Apoc. ii. 5). After quoting many similar passages: Quod legentes scilicet et tenentes neminem putamus a fructu satisfactionis et spe pacis arcendum, cum sciamus juxta scripturarum divinarum fidem, auctore et hortatore ipso Deo, et ad agendam poenitentiam peccatores redigi, et veniam atque indulgentiam poenitentibus non denegari. In this sense it was even made a general church law by the Conc. Nicaen. c. 13, ὅστε, ἐὰν τις ἐξομολογῇ τοῦ τελευτήσαντος καὶ ἀναγκασθέντος ἐφοδίου μὴ ἀποστρέψασθαι.

¹⁹ Comp. Concil. Illiberit. above § 59, note 10. So says Pacian, bishop of Barcelona, about 370, in his book of capital sins, Paraeneticus ad poenitentiam (Bibl. PP. max. T. iv.) peccatis capitalibus: Reliqua peccata meliorum operum compensatione curantur. Haec quicunque post fidem fecerit, Dei faciem non videbit. Cf. Innocentii i. Epist. 6, ad Exsuperium Episc. Tolosanum (in the year 405), c. 2: Et hoc quaesitum est, quid de his observari oporteat, qui post baptismum omni tempore incontinentiae voluptatibus dediti, in extremo fine vitae suae poenitentiam simul et reconciliationem communionis exposcunt. De his observatio prior durior, posterior interveniente misericordia inclinatio. Nam consuetudo prior tenuit, ut concederetur poenitentia, sed communio negaretur.

(CONTINUATION) CONTROVERSY CONCERNING MATTERS OF CHURCH DISCIPLINE.

1. *The schism of Felicissimus in Carthage.*¹ A party already dissatisfied with the selection of Cyprian as bishop, afterwards continued in a divided relation in opposition to the bishop, who was extremely jealous of his dignity. The Decian persecution put an end to the dispute arising between Cyprian and the presbyter Novatus.² But during that trying time, some presbyters re-admitted the lapsed (Cypriani ep. 9) solely on the strength of the libelli pacis of the martyrs, which were too freely granted, without regard to the bishop of Carthage, who had been obliged to leave his church. Cyprian found fault with this. But the party of the dissatisfied increased notwithstanding, at whose head the deacon Felicissimus appeared, and to which several confessors also were now added. This party now refused to obey the commands of the bishop, who had fled from persecution,³ and went on adding to its numbers by the reception of the lapsed.⁴ After Cyprian's return (251) they were excommunicated, and choose Fortunatus for their bishop, but do not appear to have long survived.

³ In particular, Felicissimus withstood a commission sent by Cyprian to inquire about the substance of the poor, Cypr. ep. 38.

Hi fomenta olim quibusdam confessoribus et hortamenta tribuebant, ne concordarent cum episcopo suo, ne ecclesiasticam disciplinam cum fide et quiete juxta praecepta dominica continerent, &c.—nunc se ad lapsorum perniciem venenata sua deceptione verterunt, ut aegros et*

2. *Novatian schism.*⁵ The presbyter Novatian (in Eusebius Νοβάτος) was dissatisfied with the choice of the bishop Cornelius at Rome (251) because Cornelius, in his opinion, had conducted himself with too great lenity towards the lapsed. In the controversy that now ensued, in which the Carthaginian presbyter Novatus proved particularly active in favour of Novatian,⁶ the latter returned to the old principle that none of the lapsed ought to be admitted to church communion.⁷ Hence arose a division in the church. Novatian was chosen bishop by his party at Rome. Though the other bishops, particularly Cyprian at Carthage, and Dionysius at Alexandria, stood on the side of Cornelius, yet many in different countries joined the strict party.⁸ At first the Novatians (καθαρῶν) declared themselves only against the re-admission of the lapsi;⁹ but afterwards they fully return-saucios—a medela vulneris sui avocent, et intermissis precibus et orationibus, quibus Dominus longa et continua satisfactione placandus est, ad exitiosam temeritatem mendacio captiosae pacis invitent.

⁶ Although he had formerly ordained Felicissimus deacon (note 2), it does not thence follow that he afterwards was of the same opinion with him regarding the re-admission of the lapsed, and still later that he came over to the opposite view at Rome. See Mosheim de rebus Christ. ante C. M. p. 518. Perhaps it was even dissatisfaction with his party that urged him to go from Carthage to Rome.

⁷ Formerly Novatian's opinion was milder, in the letter written by him, epist. Cleri Rom. ad Cypr. (Ep. Cypr. 31,) cf. Cypr. ep. 52.

⁸ Even Fabius, bishop of Antioch, was ὑποκατακλινόμενος τῷ σχίσματι (Euseb. vi. 44), and at a synod in Antioch τοῦ Νοουάτου κρατύνειν τινὲς ἐπεχίρουν τὸ σχίσμα (l. c. 46). Cf. Socrat. iv. 28. Respecting Marcian bishop of Arles, see § 68, note 14.

ed to the old African notion, that all who had defiled themselves by gross sins after baptism should be for ever excluded from the church,¹⁰ because the church itself would be tainted if they were received again. In accordance with this view they declared all other churches to have forfeited the rights of a Christian church; and baptised anew those who came over to them.¹¹ This party was widely extended, and continued for a long time.¹² In Phrygia they united with the remnant of the Montanists.¹³

3. *Controversy concerning the baptism of heretics.*¹⁴ The custom prevalent in Africa, Egypt, Syria, and Asia Minor, of regarding reclaimed heretics as unbaptised, was considered objectionable at Rome,¹⁵ where they were prepared for re-admission without baptism, by passing through the gradus poenitentiae; especially since the time the Novatians began to re-baptise the Christians who had joined them. In Africa, too, there arose doubts regarding it; but two Carthaginian councils (255, 256) confirmed the old practice. When the second council informed Stephen, bishop of Rome, (253—257) of its decisions, in a synodical letter, (ep. Cypr. 72), it received from him a haughty reply disapprov-

ing of them.¹⁶ This led to an interchange of violent letters between Stephen and Cyprian.¹⁷ The former broke off all communion with the Africans; but notwithstanding this they repeated, in the most emphatic terms, their opinions at a third council at Carthage (1st Sept. 256).¹⁸ Firmilian, bishop of Caesarea, in Cappadocia, assured them (epist. Cyprian. 75), with bitter observations on Stephen,¹⁹ of the full assent of the churches in his pro-

¹⁷ The earlier letters of Cyprian on this affair are ep. 70—73. Notices of the controversial writings between him and Stephen are found in Cyprian. epist. 74 ad Pompejum, and Firmiliani ep. ad Cyprian. (ep. Cyprian. 75). Cyprian says of Stephen's letter (ep. 74): Caetera vel superba vel ad rem non pertinentia, vel sibi ipsi contraria, quae imperite atque improvide scripsit, &c.—Quae ista obstinatio est, quaeve praesumptio, humanam traditionem divinae dispositioni antepone, nec animadvertere, indignari et irasci Deum, quoties divina praecepta solvit et praeterit humana traditio.—Nec consuetudo, quae apud quosdam obreperat, impedire debet, quominus veritas praevaleat et vincat. Nam consuetudo sine veritate vetustas erroris est. On the other hand (ep. 75): non pudet Stephanum—Cyprianum pseudochristum et pseudoapostolum et dolosum operarium dicere. The consequences to be deduced from this controversy respecting the papal supremacy afterwards asserted, may be seen in J. La Placette observatt. historico-eccl., quibus eruitur veteris ecclesiae sensus circa Pontif. Rom. potestatem in definiendis fidei rebus, Amsterd. 1696, 8, p. 102 ss.

¹⁹ *Ex. gr. gratiam referre Stephano in isto possumus, quod per illius inhumanitatem nunc effectum sit, ut fidei et sapientiae vestrae experimentum caperemus.—Sed haec interim, quae a Stephano gesta sunt, praetereantur, ne dum audaciae et insolentiae ejus meminimus, de rebus ab eo improbe gestis longiorem molestiam nobis inferamus.—Atque ego in hac parte juste indignor ad hanc tam apertam et manifestam Stephani stultitiam, quod qui sic de Episcopatus sui loco gloriatur, et se successionem Petri tenere contendit, super quem fundamenta Ecclesiae collocata sunt, multas alias petras inducat.—Lites et dissensiones quantas parasti (Stephane) per ecclesias totius mundi? Peccatum vero quam magnum tibi exaggerasti, quando te a tot gregibus scidisti? Exscidisti enim temet ipsum: noli te fallere. vince; and Dionysius also bishop of Alexandria, decidedly condemned the conduct of Stephen.²⁰ After Stephen's death, peace was immediately restored to the church,²¹ although difference of opinion on the disputed point continued for a long time.²² In the meantime, even now, an intermediate opinion had arisen in the western church,²³ which afterwards became the prevailing one.

4. Meletian schism. During the Diocletian persecution, Meletius, bishop of Lycopolis in Thebais, maintained, that the lapsed should not be admitted to penance before peace should have from a Roman centrum unitatis). Dum enim putas omnes a te abstinere posse, solum te ab omnibus abstinuisti, &c. This letter, so unpleasant to the Romish see (extant in 26 codd.) was purposely omitted in the edition of Cyprian, Romae ap. Paul. Manutium 1563, and first printed in that of Guil. Morellii, Paris 1564, who is bitterly censured for it by Latinus Latinus and Pamelius: Christ. Lupus (ad Tertull. libr. de præscr. Bruxell. 1675, 4.) first denied the authenticity of the letter. A Franciscan Raimund Missori (in duas celeberr. epist. Firm. et Cypr. disputt. crit. Venet. 1733, 4.), the Jesuit R. J. Tournemine (mémoires de Trévoux de 1734, p. 2246, ss.), the Franciscan Marcellinus Molkenbuhr (in two dissertations, Münster 1790 and 1793, 4.), and A. Ant. Morcelli Africa christiana, ii. 138, declare, moreover, that Cyprian's letters respecting the baptism of heretics are forged. These arbitrary assumptions, which none else has thought fit to repeat, have been refuted by J. H. Sbaralea germana S. Cypr. et Afrorum necnon Firmiliani opinio de hæreticorum baptism. Bonon. 1741, 4., and in academic dissertations by G. G. Preu, Jenae 1788, and D. Cotta, Tüb. 1740.

5. *Donatist schism.*²⁵ As early as the Diocletian persecution there arose at Carthage a fanatical party in opposition to the bishop Mensurius, and his archdeacon Caecilianus, because they had contended against the perverseness with which many Christians longed for martyrdom partly from fanaticism and partly from still more impure motives.²⁶ When therefore, after Mensu-

Quidam etiam in eadem epistola facinorosi arguebantur et fisci debitores, qui occasione persecutiones vel carere vellent onerosa multis debitis vita, vel purgare se putarent, et quasi ablueri facinora sua, vel certe acquirere pecuniam, et in custodia deliciis perfui de obsequio Christianorum. With this coincides what had been objected to Caecilian immediately after his election (l. c. cap. 14. no. 26): cum esset diaconus, victum afferri martyribus in custodia constitutis prohibuisse dicebatur. There is manifestly great exaggeration in the Donatist Actis Saturnini presbyteri, Felicis, Dativi, Ampelii et aliorum, c. 17 (in Baluzii miscellan. T. ii. p. 72, du Pin Monumenta, p. 156: On the other hand, this appendix is left out in the Actis SS. and apud Ruinart where he is called): (Mensurius) tyranno saevior, carnifice crudelior, idoneum sceleris sui ministrum diarius's death (311), Caecilianus was chosen his successor, this party set up in opposition to him Marjorinus, who was soon succeeded by Donatus the great (313). In this proceeding they were supported by the Numidian bishops, particularly Secundus, bishop of Tigisis, and Donatus, bishop of Casae Nigrae. The pretext was, that Caecilianus had been consecrated by a Traditor, Felix, bishop of Aptunga. This pars Majorini, afterwards called pars Donati, Donatistae, who gained many adherents in Africa, on account of their attaching great value to purity in the church, brought their complaint against Caecilian before Constantine; the first example of spiritual affairs being laid before a civil ruler for his decision. Constantine at first entrusted Miltiades, bishop of Rome, along with three Gaelic bishops (313) with an enquiry into the affair; and afterwards a council was assembled at Arelate for the purpose of investigating it (314). Both decisions, as well as the judgment of the emperor himself (316), occasioned by a new appeal, proved unfavourable to the Donatists. But though severe laws also had been passed against them, yet they persisted in their opposition, and continued, full of enmity towards the catholic church, for more than a century in Africa.

ASCETICISM.

In this division of time, we still find in the church a living consciousness of Christian freedom, which was manifested, especially at the beginning of the period, in opposition to the ascetic precepts of the Montanists.¹ Fasting continued to be left to the

Et caedebantur a Caeciliano passim qui ad alendos martyres veniebant, sitientibus intus in vinculis confessoribus, pocula frangebantur ante carceris limina, cibi passim lacerandi canibus spangebantur, &c.

Sit et cum Galatis nos quoque percuti ajunt observatores dierum et mensium et annorum (Gal. iv. 10, cf. c. 14: galaticamur plane). Jactantur interea et Esaiam pronuntiassse : non tale jejunium Dominus elegit, id est, non abstinentiam cibi, sed opera justitiae, quae subterxit (Es. lviii. 5, 6). Et ipsum Dominum in evangelio ad omnem circa vicium scrupulositatem compendio respondisse, non his coinquinari hominem, quae in os inferantur, sed quae ex ore proferantur, cum et ipse manducaret et biberet usque in notationem : Ecce homo vorator et potator (Matth. xi. 19). Si autem addas aliquid praeceptis, tunc non jam inutilis servus eris, sed dicetur ad te: Euge serve bone et fidelis (Matth. xxv. 21). Quid autem sit quod addatur praeceptis, et supra debitum fiat, Paulus Apostolus dicit: De virginibus autem praeceptum Domini non habeo: consilium autem do, tamquam misericordiam consecutus a Domino (1 Cor. vii. 25). Hoc opus super praeceptum est. Qui ergo completis praeceptis addiderit etiam hoc, ut virginitatem custodiat, non jam inutilis servus, sed servus bonus et fidelis vocabitur. notion of its being especially becoming in priests to renounce the marriage intercourse.¹³ And though no general ecclesiastical law was yet enacted on the subject,¹⁴ yet, as the priests had already been forbidden to marry a second time (§ 53, note 28), a regulation was now made in addition that they should only keep the woman whom they had married before ordination; while in office itself, they should not marry;¹⁵ and that the person they had married must have been a virgin.¹⁶ Among ascetics, the dangerous practice arose of taking to themselves virgins for the purpose of living with them in pure spiritual communion, vanquishing all temptations. They called them ἀδελφαί, sorores.¹⁷ Others gave them the appellations συνεπισκαιοί,¹⁸ subintro-

These latter might live together with their wives, can. 65: si cujus Clerici uxor fuerit moechata, et maritus—non eam statim projecerit, nec in finem accipiat communionem. Examples of married bishops and presbyters, belonging to this period, may be found in Calixtus de conjugio clericorum, ed. ¹⁷ So previously among the Gnostics. Irenaeus, i. 1, § 12, says of some Valentinians: ὡς μετὰ ἀδελφῶν προσποιούμενοι συνοικεῖν, πρῶτοντος τοῦ χρόνου ἡλέγχθησαν, ἐγκύμονος τῆς ἀδελφῆς ὑπὸ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ γεννηθελσῃς. Perhaps also in the case of Marcion. See Hall. A. L. Z. April 1823, S. 850. Epiphanius, haer. 47, c. 3, accuses the Encratites of the same thing. The first trace of it among the catholics is in Hermae pastor, lib. iii, sim. ix. § 11, where the virgins say of Hermas: Nobiscum dormies ut frater, non ut maritus: frater enim noster es, et de caetero tecum habitare paratae sumus: valde enim carum te habemus, &c. Tertullian also, de jejuniis, c. 17, appears to blame the Catholics for the ductae, ἐγαπηται, extraneae. Against this practice, which prevailed principally among the unmarried clergy, Cyprian first declared himself, and after him several synods.¹⁹

Hitherto the ascetics had lived scattered among other Christians without external distinction; but the Decian persecution was the cause of some Egyptian Christians²⁰ fleeing into the desert, and there in solitariness giving themselves up to an asceticism in the highest degree extravagant (ἐρημικαὶ μοναχοί). This new asceticism began to make greater noise, when, during Maximin's persecution (311), the hermit *Antonius*²¹ appeared in a wild attire at Alexandria. But a season of persecution, which so readily engenders fanaticism, in addition to enthusiasm, was peculiarly adapted to procure approbation even for such oddities. Hence, Antony found imitators; and since the following time favoured such undertakings in another point of view, he was in the sequel regarded as the father of Monachism.²² same reason: apud te agape in cacabis fervet, fides in culinis calet, spes in ferculis jacet. Sed major his est agape, quia per hanc adolescentes tui cum sororibus dormiunt (an allusion to 1 Cor. xiii. 13). From the time of Cyprian the thing occurs more frequently. See below, note 19. Those ascetics appealed to the example of Jesus, John, and the apostles (Lib. de singularit. cleric. c. 20. Epiphan. haer. 78, c. 11), and named the young women after 1 Cor. ix. 5, Sorores (Conc. MORAL CHARACTER OF CHRISTIANITY IN THIS PERIOD.

Though Christian freedom at this time had been fettered only by a few ecclesiastical laws, and the teachers, for the most part, were still able rightly to distinguish the essence of Christian virtue from its forms, yet it cannot but be perceived, that germs were already developed in the church, from which its moral corruption afterwards arose. The notion of the church's external unity, with its consequences, led men to set too high a value on orthodoxy of the letter,¹ and on external connection with the church. Heretics were universally hated as men wholly corrupt and lost.² On the contrary, even an Origen was of opinion that, in the communion, and at the intercession of the church, even wicked sinners might be accepted of God.³ To this was added the error

² Orig. selecta in Job, ed. de la Rue, p. 501 : καὶ ὁ αἰρετικὸς ὅταν εὐξηται—ὅταν δοκῇ κατεστηρίχθαι, τότε εἰς τέλος ἀπολείται· ἡ γὰρ εὐχή αὐτοῦ λογίζεται αὐτῷ εἰς ἁμαρτίαν. Hence it was thought that heretics must have only the worst motives, and be guilty of the worst deeds. This was the source of so many distorted descriptions and fabrications respecting them.

³ Origenes in libr. Jesu Nave, hom. x. 1, on the narrative of the Gibeonites, Jos. ix. : Isti ergo veniunt ad Jesum cum omnibus vetustatibus suis, et orant ab eo hoc tantum ut salventur. of estimating many virtues as mistakes, too much according to external circumstances, while the temptation was easy to confound the ecclesiastical estimate of them;⁴ which could only proceed upon the external form of the transactions, with the moral standard. The distinction between a higher and lower virtue did not indeed develope for a long time all the germs of corruption which it bore within itself; yet it must even already have perplexed the ideas of morality, since men began to place the higher virtue chiefly in certain external asceticism.⁵ As too great value was attributed to this external asceticism, so also the stedfast endurance of persecution for the sake of Christianity was overvalued.⁶ Although it is certain that many had worked themselves up to undergo martyrdom, from motives not wholly pure,⁷ and although the confessors also were not always morally good men,⁸ yet it was a general opinion that by the external

In Matthaëum commentariorum series, c. 120 (ad Matth. xxvii. 15:) Illud quaeramus, si tale aliquid fiat et in iudicio Dei, ut omnis Ecclesia petere possit aliquem peccatorem, ut solvatur a condemnatione peccati, maxime autem si quando habeat perditionis caetera opera, ad benefaciendum autem Ecclesiae impiger sit. Tales enim invenies saepe in potentibus constitutos, alias quidem peccatores, tamen pro Christianis, quantum possibile iis est, multa agentes. Hoc si videtur alicui dignum requisitione, requireret. Quod autem manifestum est, omnes curare tentemus, ut ex petentibus inveniamur esse, et in ordine eorum, qui bene vixerunt, magis quam ex illis, pro quibus petitur, quasi pro hominibus malis. Nam etsi concedatur aliquis peccatorum ad preces Ecclesiae, non tamen iustum est gloriam et beatitudinem consequi eum, qui huiusmodi est: sufficit enim quod a poena dimittitur.

Non in sacerdotibus religio devota, non in ministris fides integra, non in operibus misericordia, non in moribus disciplina.—Jungere cum infidelibus vinculum matrimonii, prostituere gentilibus membra Christi : non jurare tantum temere, sed adhuc etiam pejerare caet. Origenes in Jerem. hom. iv. 3 : Καὶ ἀληθῶς ἐὰν κρίνωμεν τὰ πράγματα ἀληθεῖα, καὶ μὴ δόλους,—ὀψόμεθα νῦν, ὡς οὐκ ἐσμὲν πιστοί· ἀλλὰ τότε ἦσαν πιστοί, ὅτε τὰ μαρτύρια τῇ γενεᾷ ἐγίνοντο κ. τ. λ.—Τότε ἦσαν πιστοὶ ὀλίγοι μὲν, πιστοὶ δὲ ἀληθῶς.—Νῦν δὲ, ὅτε γεγονάμεν πολλοί,—ἐκ τοῦ πλήθους τῶν ἐπαγγελιομένων θεοσέβειαν σφόδρα εἶσιν ὀλίγοι, οἱ καταπύοντες ἐπὶ τὴν ἐκλογὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ τὴν μακαρίτητα. On the peaceful times before the Diocletian persecution Eusebii h. e. viii. 1 : ἄλλας ἐπ' ἄλλαις προσετρίβεν κακίας.

¹⁴ Origenes in Gen. hom. x. 1 : Ubi vel quando vestrum tempus inveniam (ad distribuendam in tempore tritici mensuram, Luc. xii. 42)? Plurimum ex hoc, imo paene totum tempus mundanis occupationibus teritis in foro, aliud in negotiatione consumitis : alius agro, alius litibus vacat, et ad audiendum Dei verbum nemo, aut pauci admodum vacant. Sed quid vos de occupationibus culpo? Quid de absentibus conqueror?

While we cannot overlook these moral defects, we still find in the church a living Christianity prevailing, and in consequence thereof, fine moral phenomena which are sought for in vain out of its pale at this period.¹⁵ In particular, that philanthropy which Christianity awakened in its professors, deserves so much the more honourable mention, as it was not confined merely to the Christian brethren,¹⁶ but manifested itself in noble traits towards the heathen.¹⁷

Præsentēs etiā et in ecclesia positi non estis intenti, sed communes ex usu fabulas teritis, verbo Dei vel lectionibus divinis terga convertitis.—Sine intermissione orandum Apostolus præcipit. Vos, qui ad orationes non convenitis, quomodo impletis sine intermissione, quod semper omittitis?—quid faciunt hi, qui diebus tantum solemnibus ad Ecclesiam conveniunt? in Num. hom. xii. 2: Aliqui vestrum ut recitari audierint, quæ leguntur, statim discedunt.—Alii ne hoc ipsum quidem patienter expectant, usque quo lectiones in Ecclesia recitentur. Alii vero nec si recitantur, sciunt, sed in remotioribus dominicæ domus locis sæcularibus fabulis occupantur. Hom. xiii. 3: Quanti modo hic præsentēs sumus, et sermo Dei tractatur? Sunt, qui concipiunt corde, quæ lecta sunt, sunt, qui omnino non concipiunt, quæ dicuntur, sed est mens eorum et cor aut in negotiis, aut in actibus sæculi, aut supputationibus lucri: et præcipue mulieres quomodo, putas, corde concipiunt, quæ tantum garrunt, quæ tantum fabulis obstrepunt, ut non sinant esse silentium? Jam quid de mente earum, quid de corde discutiam, si de infantibus suis, aut de lana cogitent, aut de necessariis domus?

Cypriani per Pontium Diaconum. c. 9, on the conduct of Cyprian and his church on occasion of a desolating plague: Aggregatam primo in loco uno plebem de misericordiae bonis instituit, docens divinae lectionis exemplis, quantum ad promerendum Deum prosint officia pietatis. Tunc deinde subjungit, non esse mirabile, si nostros tantum debito caritatis obsequio foveremus: eum perfectum posse fieri, qui plus aliquid publicano vel ethnico fecerit: qui malum bono vincens, et divinae clementiae instar exerceans, inimicos quoque dilexerit: qui pro persequentium se salute, sicuti, Dominus monet et horatur, orarit. Oriri Deus facit jugiter solem suum, et pluvias subinde nutriendis seminibus impertit, exhibens cuncta ista non suis tantum, sed etiam alienis: et qui se Dei etiam filium esse profitetur, cur non exemplum patris imitatur? Respondere, inquit, nos decet natalibus nostris, et quos renatos per Deum constat, degeneres esse non congruit; sed probare potius in sobole tradicem boni patris aemulatione bonitatis. Cap. 10: Multa alia, et quidem magna prætereo.—Quod si illa gentiles pro rostris audire potuissent, forsitan statim crederent. Quid christiana plebs faceret, cui de fide nomen est? Distributa sunt ergo continuo pro qualitate hominum atque ordinum ministeria. Multi qui angustia paupertatis beneficium sumtus exhibere non poterant, plus sumtibus exhibebant, compensantes proprio labore mercedem divitiis omnibus cariorem.—Fiebat itaque exuberantium operum largitate, quod bonum est ad omnes, non ad solos domesticos fidei, etc. Dionysius Alex. ap. THE BENEFITS BELONGING TO CHRISTIANITY UNDER CONSTANTINE AND HIS SONS.

Martini über die Einführung der christl. Religion als Staatsrelig. im röm. Reiche durch d. Kaiser Constantin. München 1813, 4, S. 29 ff.

Although Constantine, after his victory over Licinius, gave full toleration to all religions,¹ protected the heathen priests in their prerogatives,² reserved to himself the dignity of a pontifex maximus,³ and not till shortly before his death († 337) received the rite of baptism from Eusebius, bishop of Nicomedia;⁴ yet he openly professed Christianity immediately after that victory,⁵ seeking to make it more acceptable to his subjects by recom-

Zosimus's history. It is very favourably judged by Jo. Leunclavius (Apologia pro Zosimo in his Romanæ hist. scriptt. minores. Francof. 1590, fol. reprinted in the edition of Cellarius) and Reitemeier (disquis. de Zosimo, prefixed to his edition): quite unfavourable is the judgment of the older church historians, and of Guil. de Sainte-Croix, observations sur Zosime, in his Mémoires de l'Acad. des Inscriptions, T. 49 (1808) p. 466 ss.

In this way he himself converted the Pagan inhabitants of Heliopolis in Phoenicia, l. c. iii. 58: *προνοῶν, — ὅπως ἂν πλείους προσίοιεν τῷ λόγῳ, τὰ πρὸς ἐπικουρίαν τῶν πενήτων ἐλπεῖα παρέιχε, καὶ ταύτῃ προτρέπων ἐπὶ τὴν σωτήριον στεύδειν διδασκαλίαν· μονασυχὶ τῷ φάντι παραπλησίως· εἰπὼν ἂν καὶ αὐτοῖς· "εἴτε προφάσει, εἴτ' ἀληθείᾳ Χριστοῦ καταγγελλέσθω (Phil. i. 18!)." ⁸ See his letter to all bishops, Euseb. de vit. Const. ii. 46, in which he directs them, σπουδάζειν περὶ τὰ ἔργα τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν· καὶ ἡ ἐκταροῦσθαι τὰ ὄντα, ἢ εἰς μείζονα αὐξάνειν, ἢ ἐνθα ἂν χρεῖα ἀπαιτῇ, κατὰ ποιεῖν. Αἰτήσεις δὲ—τὰ ἀναγκία παρὰ τε τῶν ἡγεμῶν, καὶ τῆς ἐπαρχικῆς τάξεως· τοῖσι γὰρ ἐπεστάδην, πᾶσιν προθυμία ἐξυπηρετήσασθαι τοῖς ὑπὸ τῆς σῆς δούτης λεγομένοις. continued to prevail in Rome,¹⁰ he transferred the seat of his government to Byzantium, and changed this city into a chiefly Christian New-Rome, (afterwards Constantinople).¹¹ But yet the greater number of the principal families of the kingdom remained heathen still, and hence, he was obliged to have many heathens about his person, and in the higher offices of state,¹² although he most readily advanced Christians to posts of honour.¹³ The more violent measures of Constantine against paganism were confined to his confiscating in the east many less frequented temples, whose revenues he converted to the use of Christian churches, or the building of Constantinople,¹⁴ and his prohibiting the rites of worship connected with immoralities.¹⁵

Theodoret. iv. 4 : σύνταξις σίτου) πρὸς παρασκευὴν ἐπιτηδίων ἀπένευμε τοῖς πανταχοῦ κλήροις. The unfortunate consequences of these measures and the exemption of the clergy, on the state of municipal affairs are shown by F. Roth de re municipali Romanorum libb. ii. Stüttg. 1801, p. 32 ss. Hegewisch, hist. versuch über d. röm. Finanzen. Altona 1804, S. 324 ff.

¹¹ Euseb. de vita Const. iii. 48. τὴν πόλιν—καθαρεῖν εἰδωλοπατρίας ἀπάσης ἐδικαίον· ὡς μηδαμοῦ φαίνεσθαι ἐν αὐτῇ τῶν τοιζομένων θεῶν ἀγάλματα ἐν ἱεροῖς θρησκευόμενα, ἀλλ' οὐδὲ βωμοὺς λύθροις αἱμάτων μαινομένους, οὐ θυσίας δλοκαυτούμενας πυρὶ, οὐ δαιμονικάς ἐορτάς, οὐδ' ἕτερον τι τῶν συνήθων τοῖς δεσποδαίμοσιν. Constantine besides beautified his new city with works of art, even with statues of the gods, which were everywhere pilaged and brought away together. The ναοὶ δύο, with the images of Rhea and the Fortuna Romae, ap. Zosimus, ii. 31, were probably only niches. When Constantine caused his gilded statue to be set up at the dedication of the city, with the Τέχνη τῆς πόλεως on the right, which was to be honoured at the yearly festival of the birth-day of the existing emperor (Chron. paschale, p. 285) : this merely proves that as yet no suitable Christian symbolism had been formed for such solemnities (comp. Manso, l. c. S. 77). It is an analogous case when we find frequently on the coins of the first Christian emperors Victoria with the Labarum. The later tradition, (ap. Zonaras, Cedrenus, &c.), that Constantine dedicated his city to the mother of God, is ridiculous.

The law by which he is said to have interdicted all sacrifices was not at least carried out into operation.¹⁶ After his death he was, according to custom, placed by the senate among the gods.¹⁷

After the death of Constantine II. († 340) Constantius ruled the east, and Constans the west. Both declared themselves decided opponents to paganism.¹⁸ Constans, however, could not proceed very strictly in opposition to it in the west, but had to act with some respect towards Rome in particular, still addicted as it was to the monuments of the ancient religion.¹⁹ But under these emperors the Christians sometimes forgot the principles of religious toleration on which they had so loudly insisted during former persecutions,²⁰ and fanatical voices calling for the violent extinction of paganism were raised among them.²¹ When the whole empire devolved on Constantius after Constans' death († 350) all sacrifices were prohibited for the first time on pain of death.²² This law could not however be fully carried out in Rome and Alexandria.²³ Everywhere else heathenism from this

These violent measures had certainly the effect of opening the eyes of the heathen people to the impotency of their gods and the fraud of their priests;²⁶ but with nobler patriotic spirits they tended rather to increase the prejudices against Christianity, so partial as it appeared to be, and favoured by measures so unjust. Whatever truth they discovered in it appeared to them to have been already taught by the ancient philosophers.²⁷ They regarded the positive doctrines of it as foreign superstitions, while the theological controversies concerning these doctrines brought suspicion on Christianity, and turned its professors into ridicule.²⁸ On the other hand, paganism gained in this respect, that the ancient classic science and literature, containing a religious doctrine at once pure and national, seemed chiefly to belong to it, and to be entrusted to its keeping.²⁹ The most celebrated schools of rhetoric and philosophy in Alexandria, Athens,³⁰ &c., had heathen preceptors. The new platonic philosophy was silently working in favour of paganism.³¹ Jamblichus († 333), the great orators Libanius († 395), Himerius († 390), and Themistius († 390), were heathen;³² while there were few Christian scholars who could rival them, like the two Apollinaris in Laodicea in Syria; and these had to struggle with the prejudices against all heathen learning which were increased by monachism.³³ Thus the most distinguished spiritual orators among the Christians were obliged to receive their education in heathen schools.

Under these circumstances it cannot appear strange that we should find most attachment to paganism in the higher ranks;³⁴ or that we should hear even from Christian writers, that among the great numbers which certainly passed over to Christianity at this time, the majority were unfortunately led to that step merely by external considerations.³⁵ Others, on the contrary, wavered between the old and new religion, hoping to find the truth between. From this tendency even new sects sprang up, of which the Massalians (Euchites, Euphemites, θεοσεφείς) in Phoenicia and Palestine,³⁶ and the Hypsistarii in Cappadocia,³⁷

The injury which Julian had to endure from the first Christian emperors, the strict education by which Christianity was attempted to be forced upon him, and his early private acquaintance with new platonic philosophers, especially Maximus, had early disposed him towards heathenism, whose dead forms had been animated with so much life by the new platonists.¹ When he attained to the imperial dignity (361), he declared himself openly in favour of the ancient national religion, to which he endeavoured to impart a more moral and religious form, even by introducing many practices borrowed from Christianity,² while

The sacred national literature appeared to him to be profaned by the contradictory and scoffing Christian interpretation. But there is no ground in this to attribute to him the design of degrading the Christians into a state of ignorance, as has been frequently done by writers. For there were so few Christian grammarians, on account of the prejudices with which they had to contend among their brethren of the same faith (see § 75, note 27), that Christians had almost the only opportunity of studying the ancient literature under heathen preceptors, a thing which they might yet do without prohibition. In the mean time, however, some Christian authors, especially the two Apollinaris, and Gregory of Nazianzum, were led by that prohibition to attempt imitations of heathen works in poetry and eloquence with biblical materials, Socrat. iii. 16. Hence it was natural that many who had hitherto been Christian professors for the sake of external advantages, should now go back to heathenism from the same motives.⁷ The Jewish religion was respected by Julian as an ancient national faith; and on his march against the Persians, he even permitted the temple at Jerusalem to be rebuilt, though it was soon after destroyed.⁸ On this same expedition he composed in Antioch, where he bore the scoffs of the Christian people with philosophical indifference, his work against Christianity.⁹ Soon after this he was killed in a battle with the Persians (363).¹⁰

GENERAL TOLERATION TILL 381.

The reign of Jovian († 364) was in so critical times that he found it advisable to allow full freedom to all religions,¹ although he himself was a zealous Christian.² But this very disposition of the emperor encouraged the Christians in many places not only to demand restitution for injuries actually suffered under the preceding reign, but also to exhibit their hatred against the pagans, which had been increased by Julian's measures.³ The legal toleration of all religions also continued under the following emperors, Valentinian I. (in the west † 375),⁴ and Valens, (in the east † 378,⁵) although they forbade bloody sacrifices;⁶ in like manner, in the first years of the emperors Gratian and Valentinian II. in the west, and Theodosius in the east, till the

SUPPRESSION OF PAGANISM BY THEODOSIUS.

After Theodosius had secured the east against the Goths, he directed his greatest energies to the suppression of paganism. In the same year in which he summoned the second oecumenical synod at Constantinople (381), he forbade apostacy to paganism,¹ but still allowed the other rites of heathen worship to be practised except sacrifice. The two emperors of the west followed his example. Gratian laid aside the dignity of pontifex maximus,² commanded the altar of Victoria to be removed from

² According to Zosimus, iv. c. 36, who alone speaks of the circumstance, he might have refused it as soon as it fell to him, that is, after the death of Valens (for only the first Augustus was pontifex maximus). This supposition, however, is contradicted by the fact that Gratian bore the same title for some time. See Ausonii gratiarum actio pro consulatu, and the inscriptions in Orelli inscriptionum latinarum amplissima collectio, vol. i. p. 245. The usual assumption that Gratian merely declined the priestly dress offered to him, but yet bore the title, is arbitrary; for Zosimus speaks in express terms of the refusal of the dress and of the title. Hence, it must be maintained that Gratian wore that dignity for some years, and then laid it aside. J. A. Bosius de pontificatu maximo Imp. præcipue christianorum, in Graevii thesaur. antiquitt. Aurelius Symmachus*, to have the former regulations restored, and in particular the altar of Victoria re-erected, had no influence upon Gratian († 383), Valentinian II., and Theodosius.⁷ In the east, the Christians proceeded far beyond the imperial ordinances. TOTAL SUPPRESSION OF PAGANISM IN THE EAST.—ITS STRUGGLE IN THE WEST AFTER THEODOSIUS.

Paganism was at present only an external ceremonial, which retained its hold upon a few noble spirits with a feeling of patriotism; but with the mass, it was kept up merely from unreflecting custom or superstitious fear. Almost with all, however, its ancient doctrine was obliged to sink under the pressure of new ideas.¹ Hence the victory of Christianity over paganism inter-

A different account, and one more accordant with later phenomena, is given by Zosimus, iv. 59, in his representation of the effect of Theodosius's discourse in the senate: Μηδενὸς δὲ τῇ παρακλήσει πεισθέντος, μηδὲ ἐλομένου τῶν ἀπ' οὐπερ ἡ πόλις ψεκίσθη παραδειδομένων αὐτοῖς πατρίων ἀναχωρήσαι, καὶ προτιμῆσαι τούτων ἀλογον συγκατάθεσιν (ἐκεῖνα μὲν γὰρ φυλάξαντας ἦδη διακοσίοις καὶ χιλίοις σχεδὸν ἔτεσιν ἀπὸρῆγον τὴν πόλιν οἰκεῖν· ἕτερα δὲ ἀντὶ τούτων ἀλλαζόμενοι τὸ ἐκβησόμενον ἀγνοοῖν). τότε δὲ ὁ Θεοδοσίος βαρύνεσθαι τὸ δημόσιον εἶλετο τῇ περὶ τὰ ἱερὰ καὶ τὰς θυσίας δαπάνῃ, βούλεσθαι τε ταῦτα περιελεῖν κ. τ. λ. Restat igitur de intelligentia veri Dei per multas intelligendi suspensiones confusa dissensio, quia de uno Deo omnium paene una opinio est. Few were ready to suffer for their religion.⁴ But it is true, that in this manner also the number of merely external Christians was increased—men who still entertained heathen modes of thought and disposition; and the value of Christianity was by no means so generally manifested in the practices of its confessors as before.⁵

In the empire of the east (Arcadius 395—408, Theodosius II. till 450), which was less disturbed from without, the ordinances of Theodosius against paganism could be strictly enforced.⁶ Crowds of monks were sent about through the provinces with full power from the emperors, for the purpose of destroying all traces of idolatry.⁷ Even misdeeds and murders were allowed to Quis eorum comprehensus est adorare idolum, et non clamavit, non feci, et timuit ne convinceretur? Tales ministros Diabolus habebat. He then contrasts with them the steadfastness of the Christian martyrs. Chrysostom, de. s. Babyla, § 7, says of the heathen priests, μάλλον δεσποτῶν καὶ τῶν εἰδωλῶν δὲ αὐτῶν τοὺς βασιλεῖς θεραπεύουσι, and describes the neglected state in which the temples, altars, and images of the gods were in consequence, under Christian emperors.

As early as 423, all visible traces of paganism had disappeared in the east.¹⁰

It was otherwise in the west, notwithstanding the want of all living attachment to paganism in this quarter of the world also. So little hold had it on the minds of the people that even in Rome, its continued centre, where many families of note were still heathen, and many of the highest places were still occupied by heathens,¹¹ sacrifices were totally discontinued, after the cost of public oblations had ceased to be defrayed by the state. Under the feeble reign of Honorius (395—423), the earlier laws against paganism still remained in force, and were even increased by the addition of several new enactments; but the emperor was obliged at times to limit their operation,¹² to acknowledge heathen priests as public officers,¹³ and to put a check to the destruction of temples,¹⁴ for the sake of preserving some degree of

The struggle, however, between Christianity and paganism often proceeded here and there to acts of violence, in which the one party prevailed at one time, the other at another.¹⁵ As the heathens had always been accustomed to lay the blame of all misfortune on the Christians; so, since the west of Europe had been inundated by barbarous people, and even Italy had been several times devastated by such hordes, they were especially loud in declaring all these disasters to be punishments sent by the gods,¹⁶ and in predicating the speedy downfall

In Anaunia, a valley of the Rhoetian Alps, the missionaries Sisinnius, Martyrius, and Alexander, were horribly murdered, A.D. 397, by the heathens during the Pagan festival of the Ambarvalia, and the church built by them destroyed. See Acta SS. (ad. d. 29 Maj.) Maji, T. vii. p. 38. In Suffecte, in Africa, the Christians had demolished a statue of Hercules, and the heathens killed sixty of them for it (August. ep. 268, ad Suffectanos). How at Calama, in Numidia, the heathens, during one of their festivals in the year 408, attacked the church there, and persecuted the Christians, may be seen in Augustin. ep. 202, ad Nectarium.

¹⁶ When the Gothic king Rhadegaisus, 405, broke into Italy, the heathens said (Augustin. de civ. § 80.

INTRODUCTION.

The universally received articles of the Christian faith in the beginning of this century were still so simple as to admit of very different modes of interpretation, and afford a wide province to reason for free inquiry. How manifold were the theological views which arose, may be seen particularly from a comparison of the different schools, the speculative Origenist, the traditional, and the historico-exegetical, which now first began. And a still greater contrast of systems might be expected from the inclination of the Greek Christians to speculation and argument,¹ when external tranquility was offered them, after the cessation of persecution.

Thus theological controversies were unavoidable, though they would have had none other than a salutary influence on the development of reason, if parties had abided by the old distinction between πίστις and γνῶσις with clear consciousness; and if debated questions belonging to theology had not been drawn into the province of religion and the church. But the very simplicity of the older articles of faith frequently invited the disputants to appeal to them in their own favour, and so to accuse their opponents of deviating from the faith. If the accused also, wished to lay claim for themselves to that freedom of speculation on the basis of the πλοῖα, the hierarchy on the other hand was a natural enemy to such liberty as should withdrew itself from its guardianship of any department affecting the church, and had of course an interest in bringing all theological matters of debate from the province of theology into the province of religious faith, in order to be able to lay claim to the right of deciding. This interest now appeared the more regardless in proportion as opposition to the heathen ceased to be a formidable thing, requiring a forbearing patience within the church, while the hierarchy was now supported by worldly power. Thus religious controversies assumed at the present time a very different character. While they were formerly limited to particular provinces, the whole Christian world was now divided by theological disputes into two parties. To put an end to the division by a final ecclesiastical decision the emperors called general councils, (σύνδοτοι οἰκουμενικαί), elevated their decisions into laws of the realm, and applied worldly power to enforce them universally. In earlier times, the councils summoned against heretics contented themselves merely with warding off the false doctrine by denials; but now the general councils, feeling their ecclesiastical importance, and supported by the imperial power, began to exalt positive decisions regarding disputed points, into ecclesiastical articles of faith.² Thus the development of doctrines proceeded rashly and rapidly while the field left to free speculation was always narrowed in proportion. On this very account too, opponents presented a much more obstinate opposition, and the schisms became greater and more incurable. The struggle had the most important influence on the development of the internal relation of the church, and was even of great political moment, from the circumstances of the emperors themselves taking a share in it. Hence, from this time forward, the history of theological disputes forms the central point not only of the whole history of the church, but sometimes also of the political history of the Roman empire.

Dei, viii. p. 165, writes of Africa: Quis non eorum, qui Christiani appellabantur, Caelestem illam (see note 17) aut post Christum adoravit, aut, quod est pejus multo, ante quam Christum? Quis non daemoniacorum sacrificiorum nidore plenus, divinae domus limen introiit, et cum foetore ipsorum daemonum Christi altare conscendit?—Ecce quae Afrorum, et maxime nobilissimorum, fides, quae religio, quae christianitas fuit!—At, inquis, non omnes ista faciebant, sed potentissimi quique, ac sublimissimi. Adquiescamus hoc ita esse, caet.

BEGINNING OF THE ARIAN CONTROVERSY TO THE SYNOD OF NICE (325).

While endeavours were made in vain to reunite the Donatists and Meletians with the church, the progressive development of the doctrine of the Logos gave rise to a new controversy, which soon became more general and violent than any that had preceded it. The common doctrine of the Logos, after the expulsion of the Monarchians, was, that he is the mediator of all Divine agency in the finite, by the will of the Father, and less than He. Regarding his origin, the emanistic idea had been by far the most general. In opposition to it, the school of Origen represented him as an eternal ray of the Divine glory. This bringing forth of the Logos from the Divine essence by the will of the Father was still, however, a creation; and that this creating could not be eternal, had been already perceived, when Dionysius of Alexandria, in opposition to Sabellius, gave greater prominence to the fact that the Son was created.¹ But the emanists also took offence at this conclusion; for with them the Logos was eternal, though not as a person, yet still in the essence of God from whom he had proceeded. Dionysius at that time prevented a controversy by yielding; but now Arius, a presbyter in Alexandria, who, in the school of Lucian by a historico-exegetical training had received the love of intelligible clearness, wished to remove the latent contradiction in Origen's doctrine, by teaching that the Logos is created, and consequently not an eternal being.* When he fell into disputes with his

of the Logos; the latter denies it; a proof that he did not express it as his opinion. If, however, the Logos was a creature, he was not eternal. Hence the Arians referred even to Dionysius in favour of this doctrine. See § 64, note 7. Athanasius, de sententia Dionysii, endeavours to excuse him; but Basil the Great, Ep. ix. 2, finds in him the germ of Arianism.

* Writings of Arius: Epist. ad Eusebium Nicomediensem, ap. Epiphanius, haer. 69, § 6, and Theodoret, hist. eccl. 1, 4, Epist. Alexandrum ap. Athanasius de synodis Arim. et Seleuc. c. 16, and Epiphanius, haer. 69, § 7, θαλεία (ἐμφερής τῇ χαυρότητι τοῖς Σωτᾶδος φρασιν Sozom. i. 21), not extant except fragments in Athanasius. According to Athanasius, c. Arian. Or. ii. 24, Arius, Eusebius, and Asterius, in their works, inculcated these sentiments respecting the creation of the world ὡς ἀρα θείων ὁ θεὸς τὴν γενετὴν κτίσαι φύσιν, ἐπειδὴ ἐώρα μὴ δυναμένην αὐτὴν μετασχεῖν τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς ἀκράτου (χειρὸς), καὶ τῆς παρ' αὐτοῦ δημιουργίας, ποιεῖ καὶ κτίζει πρῶτος μόνος μόνων ἓνα καὶ καλεῖ τοῦτον υἱὸν καὶ λόγον, ἵνα τούτου μέσου γενομένου οὕτως γοιπὸν καὶ τὰ πάντα δι' αὐτοῦ γενέσθαι δυνηθῇ. Epist. ad Alex. οἰδομεν ἓνα θεόν, μόνον ἀγέννητον,—τούτων θεὸν γενήσαντα υἱὸν μονογενῆ πρὸ χρόνων αἰώνων, δι' οὗ καὶ τοὺς αἰῶνας, καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ πεποίηκε· γενήσαντα δὲ οὐ δοκῇσι, ἀλλ' ἀληθείᾳ, ὑποστήσαντα δὲ ἰδιῷ θελήματι, ἀτρεπτον καὶ ἀναλλοίωτον, κτίσμα τοῦ θεοῦ τέλειον, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὡς ἐν τῶν κτισμάτων, γέννημα, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὡς ἐν τῶν γεννημάτων, οὐδ' ὡς Οὐαλεντίνο προβόλῃν τὸ γέννημα τοῦ πατρὸς ἐδογματίσεν, οὐδ' ὡς ὁ Μαρικαῖος μέρος ὁμοούσιον τοῦ πατρὸς τὸ γέννημα εἰσηγήσατο, οὐδ' ὡς Σαβέλλιος τὴν μονάδα διαίρων, υἱοπάτορα εἶπεν, οὐδ' ὡς Ἰερᾶκας λόχρον ἀπὸ λόχρου, ἢ ὡς λαμπάδα εἰς δύο, οὐδὲ τὸν ὄντα πρότερον, ὕστερον γεννηθέντα, ἢ ἐκκτισθέντα εἰς υἱόν.—ἀλλ', ὡς φαμέν, θελήματι τοῦ θεοῦ πρὸ χρόνων καὶ πρὸ αἰώνων κτισθέντα, καὶ τὸ ζῆν καὶ εἶναι παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς εἰληφότα, καὶ τὰς δόξας συνυποστήσαντος αὐτῷ τοῦ πατρὸς. οὐ γὰρ ὁ πατήρ, δοὺς αὐτῷ πάντων τὴν κληρονομίαν, ἐστέργησεν αὐτόν, ὡν ἀγεννήτως ἔχει ἐν αὐτῷ. πηγὴ γὰρ ἔστι πάντων. ὥστε τρεῖς εἰσω ὑποστάσεις, καὶ ὁ μὲν θεὸς αἰτίος τῶν πάντων τυγχάνων, ἔστιν ἀναρχος μονώτατος. ὁ δὲ υἱὸς ἀχρόνως γεννηθεὶς ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ πρὸ αἰώνων κτισθεὶς καὶ θεμελιωθεὶς, οὐκ ἦν πρὸ τοῦ γεννηθῆναι.—οὐδὲ γὰρ ἔστιν bishop Alexander on the point (318), who excluded him and his followers from church-fellowship, many bishops in Syria and Asia Minor declared themselves in favour of Arius; some, especially Eusebius bishop of Nicomedia, (Συλλογιασμός Arius ad Euseb. ap. Theodoret, I, 4, see above § 65, note 5), because they adopted his views; others, as Eusebius, bishop of Caesarea,³ because they held that the faith of the church was at least not violated by the doctrine of Arius. The most important writer who endeavoured to defend the Arian principles was the sophist Asterius of Cappadocia, also a disciple of Lucian († about 330.)⁴ Thus the controversy communicated itself to the whole east. After Constantine had in vain endeavoured to induce the contending parties to give up the dispute, by rational representations,⁵ he

From the Thaleia (ap. Athanas. contra Arianos Orat. ii. c. 9): οὐκ ἀεὶ ὁ-θεὸς πατὴρ ἦν, ἀλλ' ὕστερον γέγονεν. οὐκ ἀεὶ ἦν ὁ υἱός, οὐ γὰρ ἦν, πρὶν γεννηθῆναι. οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς, ἀλλ' ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ἐπέστη καὶ αὐτός. οὐκ ἔστιν ἴδιος τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς οὐσίας, κτίσμα γὰρ ἐστὶ καὶ ποίημα. καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν ἀληθινὸς θεὸς ὁ Χριστός, ἀλλὰ μετοχῇ καὶ αὐτὸς ἐθεοποιήθη· οὐκ οἶδε τὸν πατέρα ἀκριβῶς ὁ υἱός, οὔτε ὁρᾷ ὁ λόγος τὸν πατέρα τελείως, καὶ οὔτε συνίει, οὔτε γινώσκει ἀκριβῶς ὁ λόγος τὸν πατέρα· οὐκ ἔστιν ὁ ἀληθινὸς καὶ μόνος αὐτὸς τοῦ πατρὸς κύριος, ἀλλ' ἐνόματι μόνου λέγεται λόγος καὶ σοφία, καὶ χάρις· λέγεται υἱὸς καὶ δούλαμος· οὐκ ἔστιν ἀτρεπτος, ὡς ὁ πατὴρ, ἀλλὰ τρεπτὸς ἐστὶ φύσει, ὡς τὰ κτίσματα, καὶ λειπεί αὐτῷ εἰς κατὰληψιν τοῦ γινῶναι τελείως τὸν πατέρα. When the Son is sometimes called τρεπτὸς, sometimes ἀτρεπτος, that is explained by a preceeding fragment (Orat. ii. c. 5): τῷ μὲν φύσει, ὥσπερ πάντες, οὕτω καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ λόγος ἐστὶ τρεπτὸς, τῷ δὲ ἰδιωαυτεφουσίῳ, ἕως βούλεται, μένει καλός. ὅτε μέντοι θέλει, δύναται τρέπεσθαι καὶ αὐτός, ὥσπερ καὶ ἡμεῖς, τρεπτῆς ὡν φύσεως. called the first oecumenical council at Nice (325).⁶ As the number of Arian bishops was much smaller than that of their opponents, the party of Alexander prevailed, their cause being pleaded by Athanasius, deacon in Alexandria, and Marcellus, bishop of Ancyra. The Arian doctrine was rejected; but the ancient emanistic notion was confirmed, and was merely developed farther by the decision that the Son is of the same essence with the Father (ὁμοούσιος τῷ πατρί).⁷ This expression, which had been till

⁶ According to Eusebius, de vita Constantina, this council numbered more than 250 bishops. In later times 318 were usually reckoned to it, and it was called the council of τὴ. The first persons who have the latter number expressly refer to the 318 servants of Abraham, in whom Barnabas, so early as his day, had found a prediction relating to Christ, c. 9, Hilary de synodis, c. 86: et mihi quidem ipse ille numerus hic sanctus est, in quo Abraham victor regum impiorum ab eo, qui æterni sacerdotii est forma, benedicitur. Liberius ap. Socrat. iv. 2. Ambrasinus de fide, lib. i. prolog. § 5. Doubtless this sacred number was arbitrarily assumed for the purpose of conferring honour on the council of the Nicenes. Gelasius, however, hist. Conc. Nic. and an anonymous author in the Spicilegium Romanum, t. vi. (Romæ 1841, 8.) p. 608, give the number 300.

Καὶ εἰς ἓνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, γεννηθέντα ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς μονογενῆ, τοῦτέστιν, ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ πατρὸς, θεὸν ἐκ θεοῦ, φῶς ἐκ φωτός, θεὸν ἀληθινὸν ἐκ θεοῦ ἀληθινοῦ, γεννηθέντα, οὐ ποιηθέντα, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρί. δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο, τὰ τε ἐν τῷ αἰῶνι καὶ τὰ ἐν τῇ γῆ. τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν κατελθόντα καὶ σαρκωθέντα, καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαντα, παθόντα καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, ἀνελθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, καὶ ἐρχόμενον κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς. Concerning the composition of this creed: Athanasius, epist. de decretis synodi Nicaenae, and now regarded as Sabellian, was very suspicious in the eyes of the oriental bishops.⁸ The most of them, however, yielded to the imperial authority, and subscribed the new creed.⁹ None but the two Egyptian bishops Theonas and Secundus refused, who were therefore banished with Arius to Illyria. The Nicene decrees were universally proclaimed as imperial law; and when the bishops Eusebius of Nicomedia, and Theognis of Nice, departed from them, they were sent into exile to Gaul (325).

OPPOSITION OF THE EUSEBIANS TO THE NICENE COUNCIL TILL THE SECOND SYNOD AT SIRMIIUM (357.)

The opponents of Arianism declared it to be polytheism. On the contrary, the Arians charged the omoúsios with Sabellianism,¹ Eusebii Caesar. epist. ad Caesarienses, most complete as appended to Athanasii epist. cit. and in Theodoret, h. e. i. 11. The dis thes is here the Father alone, consequently the sameness of essence between Him and the Son is not a numeral unity of essence. See Münscher über den Sinn der Nic. Glaubensformel, in Henke's neuem Magazin, vi. 334. Even here the sentiment, that the Son exists by the will of the Father, and is less than he, is not spoken against.

and succeeded in spreading this view in the east so generally that Constantine thought he could effect a general union on the disputed dogma only by giving up the expression. Accordingly, the banished were recalled, not only Eusebius and Theognis, but Arius too (328—29), his orthodoxy being acknowledged by the emperor in a confession of faith expressed in general terms which he gave in. Eusebius of Nicomedia obtained a decided influence over Constantine. Several bishops who obstinately adhered to the Nicene decrees, and refused to hold church communion with the recalled, were banished, particularly Eustathius bishop of Antioch (330).² Athanasius himself, now bishop of Alexandria, was deposed by a council held at Tyre (335), and banished into Gaul by Constantine; and Arius, immediately after, was solemnly received again into church communion at Jerusalem. He died not long after at Constantinople (336).³ Thus the east was separated from the western church; the latter adopting the homousios, and espousing the cause of Athanasius, which the former rejected. This division continued after the death of Constantine († 337), when Constans had become sovereign in the west, and Constantius of the east, and that all the more readily, inasmuch as Eusebius, bishop of Nicomedia, gained the same influence over Constantius, as he had formerly over Constantine, and was appointed bishop of Constantinople (338). The prevailing doctrine of the east respecting the Son was the old emanistic doctrine,⁴ as had been set forth at the council of the Orientals were unjustly styled Arians by the Nicenes. More appropriate was the title Eusebians,⁷ from their head Eusebius, bishop of Nicomedia. In order to remove the schism between the east and west, Constantius and Constans united in summoning a new general council at Sardica (347).⁸ But here the matter went so far as to issue in an entire separation. The westerns remained alone in Sardica; the orientals assembled in the neighbouring town Philippopolis. Both parties confirmed their former acts; and in the east, Eusebianism continued as prevalent under Constantius as the Nicene faith in the west under Constans.

The prejudice of the Eusebians that Homousianism led to Sabellianism,⁹ was not a little favoured by the case of Marcellus, bishop of Ancyra, one of the principal defenders of the Nicene council. By representing the Logos as the eternal wisdom of God, and contending that the incarnate Logos alone could be called Son of God, this bishop manifestly came near Sabellianism; and, when deposed from his office (336), was nevertheless declared orthodox by the westerns, and taken under their protection. ¹⁰ Marcellus's chief work was De subiectione domini Christi. (Fragments of it in Marcelliana, ed. et animadvers. instruxit Chr. H. G. Rettberg, Goet. 1794, 8). He was answered by Asterius, Eusebius of Caesarea, Acacius (fragments in Epiphanius, haer. 72, § 5—9), Apollinarius, and Basil of Ancyra. Of these are extant only Eusebii contra Marcellum, lib. ii. and De ecclesiast. theologia, libb. 3, (both appended to Eusebii demonstr. evang. Paris 1628, fol.)—His orthodoxy was acknowledged by Julius, bishop of Rome (epist. ad Episcop. Eusebianos Antiochiae congregatos, in Athanasii apol. contra Arianos, n. 21—35), Athanasius in several passages, and the Synod of Sardica. On the contrary, the later catholic fathers, Basil the Great, Chrysostom, Sulpicius Severus, and others, judged of him unfavourably. The majority of the moderns, Baronius, Petavins, Schelstrate, &c. hold him also to be a heretic. His most important defender is Montfaucon, diatr. de causa Marcelli Ancyran (in ej. collect. nova Patrum. T. ii. p. 51 ss. Paris 1707, fol.; reprinted in J. Vogt, biblioth. hist. haeresiolo- taught Sabellianism in a fully developed form.¹¹ His doctrine was rejected not only by the Eusebians at the second council of Antioch (345),¹² but also by the westerns at a council at Milan (347); and at the first council of Sirmium (351),¹³ he was deposed by the Eusebians. The party of the Photinians continued, however, till the reign of Theodosius the younger. In the meantime, Constans had died (350). Constantius became master of the whole Roman empire after his victory over Magnentius (353), and now endeavoured to introduce Eusebianism by force into the west also. At the synods of Arles (353), and Mediolanum (355), the bishops were forced to subscribe the condemnation of Athanasius; all who refused being deposed and ¹³ Baronius placed the first Sirmian synod in the year 357. On the other hand, Petavius (in annot. ad Epiphan. p. 300, and Diss. de Photino haeretico ejusque damnatione, annexed to the third edition of the Rationar. temp. Par. 1636) correctly in the year 351. See his controversy on the subject with Sirmond, who defended Baronius. Petavius has been followed by Matth. Larroquanus (de la Roque) diss. duplex, i. de Photino haeret. ii. de Liberio Pontif. Rom. Mansi, on the contrary, in the treatise before cited (note 8), places the Sirmian Council in the year 358. The confession of faith of the first Sirmian Synod (ap. Athanas. de Syn. § 27) is the formula Antioch. iv., to which, however, instead of one, twenty-seven anathemas are appended. Of these, Nos. 4—22 are directed against Photinus. Among other things No. vi. says: εἰ τις τὴν οὐσίαν τοῦ θεοῦ πλατύνεσθαι ἢ συστέλλεσθαι φάσκει, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. vii.: εἰ τις πλατυνομένην τὴν οὐσίαν τοῦ θεοῦ τὸν υἱὸν λέγει ποιεῖν, ἢ τὸν πλατυσμὸν τῆς οὐσίας αὐτοῦ υἱὸν ὀνομάζει, ἀν. ε. viii.: εἰ τις ἐνδιδάχον ἢ προφορικὸν λόγους λέγει τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, ἀ. ε.

DISSENSIONS AMONG THE EUSEBIANS TILL THE SUPPRESSION OF ARIANISM (381).

After the Eusebians had become the predominant party, and those who were internally separated were no longer held together by the necessity of contending together against the Homousiasts, the variety of their opinions, which had been hitherto concealed, began to appear. A strict Arian party came forth among them which was named sometimes after its leaders Aetius of Antioch (ἀέτιος),¹ Eunomius of Cappadocia,² and Acacius, bishop of Caesarea; sometimes from its principles ἀριόμοιοι, ἑξουκότιοι.³ In opposition to it, the majority, under the leadership of Basilius, bishop of Ancyra, and Georgius, bishop of Laodicea, held fast by the old emanistic doctrine, adopted the farther development of it which had formerly appeared among the Eusebians, viz. That the Son is of similar essence with the Father, (ὁμοούσιος τῷ πατρὶ), and were hence called Ὀμοουσιώδισταί, Ἡμιάραιοι,

Semiariani. The emperor Constantius was attached to the Semiarians; but a powerful party about his court exerted themselves with no less cunning than perseverance in favour of the Anomoeans. And because they could not publicly vindicate their formula, they persuaded the emperor, that, in order to restore peace, the formulas of the two other parties also must be prohibited; which measure they brought about at the second synod of Sirmium (357).⁴ On the other hand, Basil, bishop of Ancyra, called together a synod at Ancyra (358), which established the Semiarian creed in a copious decree, and rejected the Arian.⁵ Constantius allowed himself to be easily convinced that that Sirmian formula favoured the Anomoeans; and therefore the confession of faith adopted at the second must now be rejected at a third synod of Sirmium (358), and the Anathemas of the synod of Ancyra be subscribed.⁶ The Anomoeans, for the purpose of uniting in appearance with the Semiarians, and yet establishing their own doctrine, now adopted the formula, τὸν υἱὸν ὁμοιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ πάντα, ὡς αἱ ἀγίαι γραφαὶ λέγουσι τε καὶ διδάσκουσι,⁷ and succeeded in convincing the emperor that all parties might be most easily united in it. For this purpose all bishops were now prepared, and then the westerns were summoned to a council at Ariminum, the easterns to another at Seleucia, simultaneously (359). After many efforts, the emperor at last succeeded in getting most of the bishops to adopt that formula. But along with this external union, not only did the internal doctrinal schism continue, but there were besides differences among such as had been like-minded, whether they had gone in with that union or not. Thus Constantius at his death left all in the greatest confusion.⁸

Quod vero quosdam aut multos movebat de substantia, quae graece usia adpellatur, id est, ut expressius intelligatur, homousion, aut quod dicitur homoeousion, nullam omnino fieri oportere mentionem, nec quemquam praedicare: ea de causa et ratione, quod nec in divinis scripturis continetur, et quod super hominis scientiam sit, nec quisquam possit nativitatem filii enarrare, de quo scriptum est: generationem ejus quis enarrabit? Scire autem manifestum est solum patrem, quomodo genuerit filium suum, et filium, quomodo genitus sit a patre. Nulla ambiguitas est, majorem esse patrem. Nulli potest dubium esse, patrem honore, dignitate, claritate, et ipso nomine patris majorem esse filio, ipso testante: qui me misit, major me est. Et hoc catholicum esse, nemo ignorat, duas personas esse patris et filii, majorem patrem: filium subjectum cum omnibus his, quae ipsi pater subiecit. Patrem initum non habere, invisibilem esse, immortalem esse, impassibilem esse. Filium autem natum esse ex patre, deum ex deo, lumen ex lumine. Cujus filii generationem, ut ante dictum est, neminem scire, nisi patrem suum, caet.

καὶ τῷ υἱῷ ἔδωκε ζῶντι ἔχειν ἐν ἑαυτῷ (John v. 26). τὴν δὲ 'κατ' ἐνέργειαν, διὰ τὸν πατέρα'· ἃ γὰρ ἂν ὁ πατὴρ ποιῇ, ταῦτα καὶ ὁ υἱὸς ὁμοίως ποιῇ (Joh. v. 19), μόνον τὴν κατ' ἐνέργειαν ὁμοιότητα διδόντες, τῆς κατ' οὐσίας, ἥ ἐστὶ τὸ κεφαλαιωδέστατον ἡμῶν τῆς πίστεως, ἀποστεροῦν τὸν υἱόν—ἀ. ἔ. Εἰ τις τὸν πατέρα πρεσβύτερον χρόνῳ λέγει τοῦ ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ μονογενοῦς υἱοῦ, νεώτερον δὲ χρόνῳ τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ πατρὸς, ἀ. ἔ. But also finally: Εἰ τις ἐξουσίαν καὶ οὐσίαν λέγων τὸν πατέρα πατέρα τῷ υἱῷ, ὁμοούσιον δὲ ἢ ταυτοούσιον λέγει τὸν υἱὸν τῷ πατρὶ, ἀ. ἔ.

Rom. potestatem in definiendis fidei rebus. Amstel. 1695, p. 137—150.

⁸ There is a correct estimate of his character in Ammian. Marcellin. xxi. 16: Christianam religionem absolutam et simplicem anili superstitione confundens; in qua scrutanda perplexius, quam componenda gravius, excitavit discordia plurima, quae progressa fusius aluit concertatione verborum: ut ceteris Antistitum jumentis publicis ultro citroque discor-

The interference of emperors, which was foreign to the object of religion, now ceased, at least for some time. Julian (361—363) was of course equally indifferent to all Christian sects, and restored all banished bishops to their sees.⁹ Jovian also († 364) and his successors in the west, Valentinian I. († 375), then Gratian and Valentinian II. maintained general toleration. On the contrary, Valens, emperor of the east (364—378), was a zealous Arian, and persecuted the Homousiasts and Semiarians.

Since the last years of Constantius, various causes had been always tending to increase in the east the number of adherents to the Nicene council. When, in its greatest strictness, Arianism wished to gain the ascendancy, the majority of the orientals, who held fast by the emanation of the Son from the Father, must have felt a most decided aversion to it; while the Nicene decrees were naturally allied to those older notions, as fuller developments of them. Besides, the unity of the Nicenes, as contrasted with the constant wavering of the Eusebians, could do nothing less than make a most favourable impression. To this was added finally, the influence of monachism, which, having now arisen in Egypt, and speedily excited universal admiration, was closely connected with Athanasius; and in all countries where it was diffused, was busy in favour of the Nicene council.¹⁰

rentibus per Synodos, quas appellant, dum ritum omnem ad suum trahere conatur arbitrium, rei vehiculariæ succideret nervos.

¹⁰ Hence the frequent persecutions of the monks in Egypt by the Arians. Cf. Athanasii encyclica, c. 3, hist. Arianorum, c. 70, 72, and often. In like manner under Valens, Socrat. iv. 22 and 24. Thus the monks of Cappadocia, in the year 363, broke off church communion with Gregory, bishop of Nazianzum, father of the theologian, because he had subscribed an ambiguous formula. See Ullmann's Gregor. v. Nazianz. S. 61. Gregory of Nazianzum, orat. xxi. p. 388, says of the monks in reference to that occurrence: οἱ κἀν τὰλλα ὡς ἐν εἰρημικοῖς τε καὶ μέτροις, τοῦτο δὲ γὰρ οὐ φέρουσιν ἐπιεικεῖς εἶναι, θεὸν προδίδουσι διὰ τῆς ἡσυχίας. ἀλλὰ καὶ λίαν εἰς ἐν ταῦθα πολεμικοὶ τε καὶ δόσμαχοι—καὶ θάττον ἢ τι μὴ δέον παρακινῆσαιεν, ἢ θέον παραλίπουν.

First of all, Meletius declared himself in favour of the Nicene confession, immediately after he had been nominated bishop of Antioch, A.D. 361.¹¹ But the old Nicene community which had still existed in Antioch from the time of Eustathius (§ 82, note 2), and was now headed by a presbyter Paulinus, refused to acknowledge the former Eusebian as bishop; and this Meletian schism¹² soon found a ground for itself also in the doctrinal distinction that the Meletians believed they must abide by three Hypostases in the Trinity, while the old Nicenes would only acknowledge in it three Prosopa.¹³ The council of Alexandria,

¹² Respecting this schism, see Walch's Ketzerhistorie, Th. 4, S. 410 ff.

¹³ The Nicene Synod considered οὐσία and ὑπόστασις as synonymous, when it anathematised the formula, ἐξ ἐτέρας ὑποστάσεως ἢ οὐσίας εἶναι. The old Nicenes, the Egyptians and Westerns, held fast by this. So Athanasius, ep. ad Afros, c. 4: ἡ ὑπόστασις οὐσία ἐστὶ, καὶ οὐδὲν ἄλλο σημαίνουσιν ἔχει, ἢ αὐτὸ τὸ ὄν· ἡ γὰρ ὑπόστασις καὶ ἡ οὐσία ὑπαρξὶς ἐστίν. ἐστὶ γὰρ καὶ ὑπάρχει. Gregory of Nazianzum (orat. xxi.) derives this interchange of the terms from the poverty of the Latin language, which certainly translated both by substantia. We might venture to suppose here that the Nicene creed originated especially under the influence of a Latin, Hosius (see § 81, note 9). Hence the expression τρεῖς ὑποστάσεις, as well as τρεῖς οὐσίαι, in Rome and Alexandria was regarded as Arian, and Meletius and Eusebius, bishops of Samosata, were here accustomed τοῖς Ἀρειομανίταις συγκατηριθμῆσθαι (Basil. ep. 266). Basil may be considered the representative of the opposite view. Ep. 236: οὐσία καὶ ὑπόστασις ταύτην ἔχει τὴν διαφορὰν, ἣν ἔχει τὸ κοινὸν πρὸς τὸ καθ' ἑκάστον. (Comp. similar explanations by others in Maji scriptt. vett nova coll. vii. 1, 11.) He declares it therefore to be a matter of the highest importance to acknowledge τρεῖς ὑποστάσεις, since even Sabellius taught μὴν ὑπόστασιν and τρεῖς πρόσωπα. Comp. especially Basilii ep. 38: also ep. 125, 210, 214. (Klose's Basil. d. G. S. 28.) Consequently he is delighted with his explanation τὸ τρεῖς ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι τὰς ὑποστάσεις ὁμολογεῖν, epist. 258 ad Epiphaniū. In Epist. 263 ad Occidentales, he accuses Paulinus of a leaning πρὸς τὸ Μαρκελλοῦ δόγμα, ὅτε υἱὸν ἐν ἰδίᾳ ὑποστάσει ὁμολογοῦν, ἀλλὰ προερχθέντα, καὶ πάλιν ὑποστρέψαντα εἰς τὸν ὅθεν προήλθεν. The Orientals generally had entertained the same suspicion against the Latins. See Basilii ep. 69 ad Athanasium, A.D. 371: Ἐπιζητεῖται δὲ κακίῳ παρὰ τινῶν τῶν ἐντεῦθεν ἀναγκαῖον, ὥς καὶ αὐτοῖς ἡμῖν καταφαίνεται, τὸ τὴν Μαρκελλοῦ αἰρεσιν αὐτοὺς (Occidentales)—ἐξορῶσαι: ἐπεὶ μέχρι τοῦ νῦν ἐν πάσιν οἷς ἐπιστέλλουσι γράμμασι τὸν μὲν διωδώνημον Ἀρειῶν ἄνω καὶ κάτω ἀναθεματίζοντες—οὐ διαλείπουσι. Μαρκελλῳ δὲ, τῷ κατὰ διάμετρον ἐκείνῳ τὴν ἀσέβειαν ἐπιδειξαμένῳ, καὶ εἰς αὐτὴν τὴν ὑπαρξίν τῇ τοῦ μοσχογονοῦς θεότητος ἀσεβήσαντι—οὐδεμίαν μέμψιν ἐπενεγκόντες φαίνου-

assembled by Athanasius (362), sought indeed not only to smooth the way generally for the Arians to join their party by mild measures, but endeavoured particularly to settle this dispute;¹⁴ but Lucifer, bishop of Calaris, gave firm footing to the Meletian schism about the same time, by consecrating as bishop Paulinus the Eustathian. Although Lucifer, from dissatisfaction with the mildness of the Alexandrian synod, separated with his followers from the church,¹⁵ he had nevertheless put a great obstacle in the way of uniting the old and new Nicenes by the step taken in consecrating Paulinus. The westerns and Egyptians acknowledged Paulinus; the oriental Nicenes, Meletius, as the orthodox bishop of Antioch. If the emperor Valens (364—378) had now favoured the Semiarians instead of the Arians, he might have perhaps considerably checked the further spread of the Nicene party; but since he wished to make Arianism alone predominant by horribly persecuting all who thought differently,¹⁶

ται. A milder judgment is given by Gregor. Naz. Or. xxi.: τῆς μιᾶς οὐσίας καὶ τῶν τριῶν ὑποστάσεων λεγομένων μὲν ὑφ' ἡμῶν εὐσεβῶς, νοουμένων δὲ καὶ παρὰ τοῖς Ἱταλοῖς ὁμοίως, ἀλλ' οὐ δυναμένης διὰ στενότητα τῆς παρ' αὐτοῖς γλώττης καὶ ὀνομάτων περὶαν διελεῖν ἀπὸ τῆς οὐσίας τὴν ὑπόστασιν, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ἀντιστασιοῦσης τὰ πρόσωπα, ἵνα μὴ τρεῖς οὐσίαι παραδεχθῶσι. τί γίνεται ὡς λαν γελοῖον ἢ ἔγεων; πίστει εἶδοξε διαφορά ἢ περὶ τὸν ἦχον μικρολογία.

¹⁴ Epistola synodica Conc. Alex. (ap. Mansi, iii. p. 345 ss.): Πάντας τοῖνυν τοὺς βουλομένους εἰρηθεύειν πρὸς ἡμᾶς, μάλιστα τοὺς ἐν τῇ παλαιᾷ συναγομένους (the Meletians) καὶ τοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν Ἀρειανῶν, προσκαλέσασθε παρ' ἑαυτοῖς, καὶ ὡς μὲν πατέρες υἱὸς προσλάβετε, ὡς δὲ διδάσκαλοι καὶ κηδεμόνες ἀποδείξασθε, καὶ συνάψαντες ἑαυτοὺς τοῖς ἀγαπητοῖς ἡμῶν τοῖς περὶ Παυλῖνον, μηδὲν πλείον ἀπαιτήσητε παρ' αὐτῶν, ἢ ἀναθεματίζειν μὲν τὴν Ἀρειανὴν αἵρεσιν, ὁμολογεῖν δὲ τὴν παρ' αὐτῶν ἀγίων πατέρων ὁμολογηθεῖσαν ἐν Νικαίᾳ πίστιν. Then an explanation of the dispute respecting the hypostases. The one party teaches that there are three hypostases διὰ τὸ εἰς ἅγιον τριάδα πιστεύειν οὐκ ὀνόματι τριάδα μόνον, ἀλλ' ἀληθῶς οὖσαν καὶ ὑφ' ἑστώσαν, πατέρα τε ἀληθῶς ὄντα καὶ ὑφ' ἑστώτα, καὶ υἱὸν ἀληθῶς ἐνούσιον ὄντα καὶ ὑφ' ἑστώτα, καὶ πνεῦμα ἅγιον ὑφ' ἑστώτος καὶ ὑπάρχον. The others, on the contrary, taught that there was one hypostasis, ἡγουμένοι ταύτων εἶναι εἰπεῖν ὑπόστασιν καὶ οὐσίαν. Those who were present of both parties might have mutually acknowledged one another as orthodox and agreed, βελτίονα καὶ ἀκριβεστέραν εἶναι τὴν ἐν Νικαίᾳ παρὰ τῶν πατέρων ὁμολογηθεῖσαν πίστιν, καὶ τοῦ λοιποῦ τοῖς ταύτης ἀρκεῖσθαι μᾶλλον καὶ χρῆσθαι ῥήμασιν.

¹⁶ The λόγος προσφωνητικός, by which Themistius about 372 in Antioch

he drove by this means the Semiarians who did not sink under persecution, to unite still more closely with the Nicenes. Thus a great part of the Semiarians, (or as they were now also called Macedonians, from Macedonius, bishop of Constantinople, who had been deposed at the instigation of the Arians, 360),¹⁷ declared themselves, at several councils of Asia Minor, in favour of the Nicene confession, and sent an embassy to Rome to announce their assent to it (366).¹⁸ However much the Arians, supported by the emperor Valens, endeavoured to counteract this new turn of affairs, yet the Macedonians were always passing over more and more to the Nicene creed; and for this the three great teachers of the church in particular; Basil the Great, Gregory of Nazianzum, and Gregory of Nyssa, began now to work. These new oriental Nicenians did not believe their faith changed by their assent to the Nicene formula, but thought they had merely assumed a more definite expression for it in the rightly understood ἁμοούσιος.¹⁹ They abided by the three hypostases of their

Sozom. vi. 10.

¹⁹ Syn. Antioch. ann. 363, epist. ad Jovianum (ap. Socr. iii. 25): τὸ δοκοῦν ξένον τισὶν ὄνομα, τὸ τοῦ ἁμοουσίου signifies, ὅτι ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ πατρὸς ὁ υἱὸς ἐγενήθη, καὶ ὅτι ὁμοῖος κατ' οὐσίαν τῷ πατρί. Those sent by Macedonius to Liberius (Sozom. vi. 10) τὸ ἁμοούσιον ὄνομα δέχονται, ὡς τῷ ὁμοίῳ κατ' οὐσίαν τὰ αὐτὰ σημαῖνον. In like manner Basilus, ep. ix. ad Maximum: ἐγὼ δὲ—τὸ ὁμοῖον κατ' οὐσίαν—δέχομαι τὴν φωνήν, ὡς εἰς ταῦτον τῷ ἁμοουσίῳ φέρουσιν, κατὰ τὴν ὑγιᾶ δηλονότι τοῦ ἁμοουσίου διδόντων. Basil had belonged to the Semiarians (Klose's Basilus d. G. Stralsund 1835, S. 21), and among the heads of them, such as Basil of Ancyra and Eustathius of Sebaste, had been active at the theological disputations in Constantinople 359 (Gregor. Nyss. contra Eunom. i. p. 301, Philostorg. iv. c. 12): He writes, however, of himself, epist. 223, § 3: ἐν γὰρ τοῦτο πολὺ καυχᾶσθαι ἐν κυρίῳ, ὅτι οὐδέ ποτε πεπληγημένος ἔσχον τὰς περὶ θεοῦ ὑπολήψεις, ἢ ἐτέρως φρονῶν μετέβαλον ὕστερον,—ὥσπερ γὰρ τὸ σπέρμα ἀθανάτου μείζων μὲν ἀπὸ μικροῦ γίνεται, ταῦτόν δὲ ἔστιν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, οὐ κατὰ γένος μεταβαλλόμενον, ἀλλὰ κατ' αὔξησιν τελειούμενον· οὕτω λογίζομαι καὶ ἐμοὶ τῶν αὐτῶν λόγων διὰ τῆς προκοπῆς ἠξέησθαι, οὐχὶ δὲ ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐξ ἀρχῆς ὄντος τὸν νῦν ὑπάρχοντα γεγενῆσθαι. In this sense Athanasius, de synodis, § 41, passes judgment also on the Semiarians: πρὸς δὲ τοὺς ἀποδεχομένους τὰ μὲν ἅλλα πάντα τοῦ ἐν Νικαίᾳ γραφέντων, περὶ δὲ μένου τοῦ ἁμοουσίου ἀμφιβάλ-

Semarianism, and attached themselves to the Meletians; but on this very account they could not keep church communion with the old Nicenes, notwithstanding all the efforts made by Basil to effect that object.²⁰ Since they supposed that they had unchangeably remained steadfast to their faith, they also continued to consider their Eusebian and Semarian forefathers as orthodox, although condemned by the old Nicenes.²¹ Thus the canons of the oriental councils held during the schism constantly remained in force, particularly those of the council of Antioch, A.D. 341,²²

and of Laodicea, (perhaps A.D. 363),²⁴ which canons afterwards passed over from the oriental to the occidental church.

During this time new schisms had been made by new disputes on points of doctrine. The doctrine of the Holy Spirit, amid the controversies respecting the Logos, had for a long time remained untouched, and very different views respecting it were in consequence entertained.²⁵ But when in the east not only the Semiarians, but also many of the new Nicenians could not get rid of the Arian idea that the Holy Spirit is a creature and servant of God,²⁶ the other Nicenes took great offence at this, and opposed these errorists as Πνευματομάχους.²⁶ But they were

into the Canones Apostolorum (see Divis. I. § 67, note 5), and enjoyed from this time forward, even in the west, undisputed authority. Pope Zacharias, ep. 7, ad Pipinum, calls them beatorum patrum sanctiones, Nicolaus, i. ep. 9, ad Michaellem Imp. venerabiles Antiochenos et sacros canones. not yet all prepared to style the Holy Spirit God.²⁷ Finally, the number of sects was increased by a zealous adherent of Episc. Thmuitanum (between 358 and 360), after Serapion had informed him (epist. l. init.) ὡς ἐξεληθόντων μὲν τινῶν ἀπὸ τῶν Ἀρειανῶν διὰ τὴν κατὰ τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ βλασφημίαν, φρονούντων δὲ κατὰ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος καὶ λεγόντων αὐτὸ μὴ μόνον κτίσμα, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν λειτουργικῶν πνευμάτων ἐν αὐτῷ εἶναι, καὶ βαθμῷ μόνον αὐτὸ διαφέρειν τῶν ἀγγέλων. Epist. synod. Conc. Alex. i. A.D. 362.—Basilii M. de Spiritu S. lib. ad Amphiloichium, i. A.D. 374.—Gregorii Nazianz. orat. 37, 44. (Comp. Ullmann's Gregorius v. Naz. S. 378 ff.) Epiphanius adv. haer. (about 374) haer. lxxiii. τῶν Ἑμιαρεί. v. § 1: οἱ δὲ αὐτοὶ καὶ περὶ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος ἰσως τοῖς Πνευματομάχοις εἰσὶν ἐχθροί. Haer. lxxiv. τῶν Πνευματομάχων. § 1. Ἀπὸ τούτων τῶν Ἑμιαρείων, καὶ ἀπὸ ὁρθοδόξων τινῶν, ὡς εἰπεῖν, τέρας τισὶ [leg. τερδστιαὶ] γεννηθέντες ἄνθρωποι—βλασφημοῦσι τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον. Philastrius (about 380) de haeresibus, c. 67: Semiariani sunt quoque. Hi de Patre et Filio bene sentiunt,—Spiritus autem non de divina substantia, nec Deum verum, sed factum atque creatum Spiritum praedicantes, ut cum conjungant et comparent creaturae. In all these writers Pneumatomachi is still the exclusive appellation of these errorists. On the contrary, the Semiarians were at that time called Macedonians. At the time of the first council of Constantinople (381), Constantinople was the chief seat of the Semiarians (cf. Gregorii Naz. vita a Gregor. Presb. conscripta, Socrat. ii. 45: οἱ περὶ Μακεδόνιον εἰς τῶν Ἑλλησπορτων πλεονάζουσ:). Hence the appellations Semiariani, Pneumatomachi and Macedoniani (can. 1, 7) were used as synonymous by this council. Inasmuch as the peculiarity of this party regarding the doctrine of the Son was unimportant, nothing but their views of the Holy Spirit remained to make them heretical. Hence, by an easy transition, Macedonius came to be considered the author of this heresy, as is the case so early as Sozom. iv. 27: ἐπειδὴ Μακεδόνιος ἀφῆρθέη τὴν Κωνσταντινουπόλεως ἐκκλησίαν, εἰσηγήτο τὸν υἱὸν θεοῦ εἶναι, κατὰ πάντα τε καὶ κατ' οὐσίαν ὁμοῖον τῷ πατρὶ· τὸ δὲ ἅγιον πνεῦμα ὁμοῖον τῶν αὐτῶν προσβείων ἀπεφαίνετο, διάκονον καὶ ὑπηρέτην καλῶν, καὶ ὅσα περὶ τῶν θείων ἀγγέλων λέγων τις οὐκ ἂν ἄμάρτοι. Hence, from this time onward the usual name for those who were heretical in their views of the Holy Ghost was Macedoniani, instead of Pneumatomachi; although it is unquestionable that Macedonius, though he entertained those sentiments, like all the Semiarians, was not the author of them.

the Nicene council, Apollinaris, bishop of Laodicea, who, misled perhaps by his aversion to Origen,²⁸ believed that he was necessarily obliged to admit so much in the Arian creed,²⁹ that the Logos in Christ supplied the place of the rational soul νοῦς or ψυχὴ λογικὴ,³⁰ and from about 371 gathered round him the advocates of this opinion (Apollinaristae, Συνοπισταί, Διμοιρταί).³¹

Basil in this way: πολλοὶ περὶ αὐτὸν ὁ πόλεμος, ζητοῦντων λαβεῖσθαι τῶν αἰρετικῶν γυμνῆς τῆς φωνῆς (namely περὶ τοῦ πνεύματος, ὡς εἶη θεοῦ),—ὅς δ' ἐμὲν ἐξωσθῆναι τῆς ἐκκλησίας, βίωσθαι δὲ τὸ κακὸν ἐν τῇ πόλει. So also in his laudatory address to Basil, orat. xx. p. 364. The monks in Caesarea were particularly indignant against Basil, but in opposition to them he was justified by Athanasius, ep. ad Palladium: αὐτοὶ μὲν γὰρ, ὡς τεδάρχηκα, τοῖς ἀσθενούσιν ἀσθενεῖς γίνονται, ἵνα τοῖς ἀσθενεῖς κερδήσῃ. cf. Garnier vita Basilii, p. 95 ss. That Basil made up his view of the Holy Spirit from Plotinian ideas of the ideal world, and the world of soul, is shewn by A. Jahn, Basilius Magnus plotinizans, Bernae 1838, 4. When Gregory of Nazianzum preached the deity of the Holy Spirit openly, it was objected to him (orat. theol. v. de Spir. S. § 1.): πῶθεν ἡμῶν ἐντεισάγεις ξένον θεόν καὶ ἀγραφον; and he admitted, § 26: ἐκήρυσσε φανερώς ἡ καλαὴ τὸν Πατέρα, τὸν Τῶν ἀμυδρότερον ἐφανέρωσεν ἡ καὶ τὸν Τῶν, ἐπέδειξε τοῦ Πνεύματος τὴν θεότητα· ἐμυλοῖται εὖν τὸ Πνεῦμα, σαφέστερον ἡμῶν παρέχον τὴν αὐτοῦ δόξαν.

³⁰ Comp. Baur's Dreieinigkeit, i. 559. So early as in the epist. synod. Conc. Alex. A.D. 362, in which even delegates of Apollinaris took part, we find, but without the name of the latter, the polemic declaration: ὁμιλοῦντων γὰρ καὶ τοῦτο, ὅτι οὐ σῶμα ἀψυχον, οὐδ' ἀναισθητον, οὐδ' ἀνόητον εἶχεν ὁ σωτήρ. This opinion is also contradicted by Athanasius, especially in epist. ad Epictetum (371), contra Apollinarium libb. ii. (372), yet without naming Apollinaris (see Möhler's Athanasius, Th. 2. S. 263 ff.), although Epiphanius, haer. 77, considers those works as refutations of it. Basil the Great heard of the heresy of Apollinaris in 373 (ep. 129 ad Meletium), and wrote about it in 374 (ep. 264 ad occidentales, and ep. 265 ad Aegyptios). Fragments of the writings of Apollinaris belonging to the present subject (περὶ ἐνανθρωπύσεως, περὶ πίστεως) are preserved chiefly in Gregory of Nyssa and Theodoret. Fragments of several epistles of Apollinaris are found in Leontius Byzant. (about 590) adv. fraudes Apollinaristarum libb. 2, (ex. lat. vers. Turriani in Canisii lectt. ant. ed. Basnage, i. 608 ss. Gallandii bibl. PP. xii. 706). Scattered fragments of every kind are in Maji scriptt. vett. nova coll. Tom. vii.

Thus Theodosius, who, as a Spaniard, was a zealous adherent of the Nicene council, found at his accession to the throne of the west (379,) universal toleration; in the east Arianism prevalent—the Homousiasts persecuted, and besides them the parties of the

P. i. Answers to Apollinaris were written by Diodorus Tarsensis, Theodotus Antiochenus, and the two bishops of Alexandria, Theophilus and Cyril. Still extant are Gregorii Naz. ep. ad Nectarium, or orat. 46, and epp. ii. ad Cledonium, or orat. 51 and 52 (Ullmann's Greg. von Naz. S. 401 ff.): and the far more important Gregorii Nysseni αντιρρητικὸς πρὸς τὰ Ἀπολλινάριου (prim. ed. Zacagnius, monim. veter. eccl. Gr. and in Gallandii bibl. PP. vi. 517) Nemesius de natura hominis, c. 1. Τὴν μὲν, ὣν ἐστὶ καὶ Πλάτωνος, ἄλλων εἶναι τὴν ψυχὴν, καὶ ἄλλων τὸν νοῦν δογματίσαντες, ἐκ τριῶν τὸν ἀνθρώπον συνεστάναι βούλονται, σώματος, καὶ ψυχῆς, καὶ νοῦ. Οἱς ἠκολούθησε καὶ Ἀπολλινάριος, ὁ τῆς Λαοδικείας γενόμενος ἐπίσκοπος· τοῦτον γὰρ πηξάμενος τὸν θεμέλιον τῆς ἰδίας δόξης, καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ προσυποβόησεν κατὰ τὸ οἰκεῖον δόγμα. Apollinaris, ap. Greg. Nyss. c. 35: ὁ ἀνθρώπος εἰς ἐστὶν ἐκ πνεύματος καὶ ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος.—c. 9: τὸ δὴ πνεῦμα, τοῦτέστι τὸν νοῦν, θεὸν ἔχων ὁ Χριστὸς μετὰ ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος, εἰκότως ἀνθρώπος ἐξ οὐρανοῦ λέγεται (1 Cor. xv. 47 ss.).—c. 7: θεὸς μὲν (ἐστὶ) τῷ πνεύματι τῷ σαρκωθέντι, ἀνθρώπος δὲ τῇ ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ προσληφθείσῃ σαρκί.—c. 23: οὐκ ἀνθρώπος, ἀλλ' ὡς ἀνθρώπος (Phil. ii. 7), διότι οὐχ ὁμοούσιος τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ κατὰ τὸ κυριώτατον.—c. 39: εἰ ἀνθρώπος τελεῖν συνήφθη θεὸς τελειος, δύο ἂν ἦσαν (c. 42): εἰς μὲν φύσει υἱὸς θεοῦ, εἰς δὲ θεός.—c. 48: εἰ ἐκ πάντων τῶν ἰσῶν ἡμῶν ἐστὶ τοῖς χοϊκοῖς ὁ ἐπουράνιος ἀνθρώπος (ὥστε καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα ἰσῶν ἔχειν τοῖς χοϊκοῖς) οὐκ ἐπουράνιος, ἀλλ' ἐπουράνιος θεοῦ δοχεῖον.—c. 44: Ἡ σὰρξ τοῦ Κυρίου προσκυκεῖται, καθὼς ἐν ἐστὶ πρόσωπον καὶ ἐν ἰσῶν μετ' αὐτοῦ. Μηδὲν ποίημα προσκυνητὸν μετὰ τοῦ Κυρίου, ὡς ἡ σὰρξ αὐτοῦ. From this resulted the principle of one nature in Christ, Apoll. fragm. ap. Majum, vii. i. 16: μετὰ δὲ συγκράτῳ τῇ φύσει ἀνθρώπων τὸν κύριον λέγομεν, μετὰ δὲ συγκράτῳ τῇ φύσει σαρκικῇ τε καὶ θεϊκῇ. In another fragment Apollinaris designates the entire spiritual principle in man as ψυχὴ, and makes the place of it in Christ be supplied by the Logos. Ap. Majum, vii. i. 203: ὁ Ἰωάννης—εἰπὼν, ὅτι ὁ λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο, οὐ προσέθηκε, καὶ ψυχὴ· ἀδύνατον γὰρ δύο νοερά καὶ θελητικά ἐν τῷ ἅμῃ κατοικεῖν, ἵνα μὴ τὸ ἕτερον κατὰ τοῦ ἑτέρου ἀντιστρατεύηται διὰ τῆς οικείας ὕλης καὶ ἐνεργείας. Οὐκοῦν οὐ ψυχῆς ἀνθρωπίνης ἐπελάβετο ὁ λόγος, ἀλλὰ μόρου σπέρματος Ἀβραάμ· τὸν γὰρ τοῦ σώματος Ἰησοῦ ναὶν προδιέγραψεν ὁ ἀΨυχος καὶ ἀνοῦς καὶ ἀδελφὴς τοῦ Σολομῶντος ναῖς. Some of his disciples, especially Polemius (Polemiani), taught ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν κατεληλυθέναι τοῦ Κυρίου τὸ σῶμα, ὁμοούσιον τὸ σῶμα τ. Χρ. τῇ θεότητι. Epiph. haer. 77, § 2, 20. After conquering the Goths, he began forthwith to declare Homousianism to be the catholic faith, and to persecute other parties.³² The more effectually to remove existing evils, he summoned a general council at Constantinople (381),³³ by which the schism between the Nicenes was peaceably removed,³⁴ and the Nicene creed enlarged with additions directed against heretics who had risen up since its origin.³⁵ Valentinian II.

HISTORY OF THE THEOLOGICAL SCIENCES DURING THE ARIAN DISPUTES.

Among the theological schools of this period the most distinguished were that of Origen, and the Syrian historico-exegetical, whose origin belongs to the preceding period. Origen enjoyed the highest esteem, and it is to be attributed to the wide-extended influence of his writings that, notwithstanding these furious theological disputes, a freedom of discussion was still preserved. In the great question of the time, both parties could appeal to him.¹ When the Arians referred to the declaration in his own

⁴¹ Augustinus de trin. vii. 11. Non major essentia est Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus simul, quam solus Pater, aut solus Filius: sed tres simul illae substantiae (ὑποστάσεις) sive personae, si ita dicendae sunt, aequales sunt singulis: quod animalis homo non percipit. 12. Pater, et Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus unus Deus. Id. contra sermonem Arianorum, § 4. Unus Deus est ipsa Trinitas, et sic unus Deus, quomodo unus creator: quid est quod dicunt, iubente Patre creasse omnia Filium, tanquam Pater non creaverit, sed a Filio creari iusserit? Formant sibi in phantasmata cordis sui quasi duos aliquos, etsi iuxta invicem, in suis tamen locis constitutos, unum iubentem, alterum obtemperantem. Nec intelligunt, ipsam jussionem Patris, et fierent omnia, non esse nisi Verbum Patris, per quod facta sunt omnia. Against the old opinion that the Father is absolutely invisible, and that the Logos alone can appear, see de trin. ii. 15 ss. Cf. § 35: Ipsa natura, vel substantia, vel essentia, vel quolibet alio nomine appellandum est id ipsum quod Deus est, quidquid illud est, corporaliter videri non potest: per subjectam vero creaturam non solum Filium vel Spiritum Sanctum, sed etiam Patrem corporali specie sive similitudine mortalibus sensibus significationem sui dare potuisse credendum est.

writings, and in those of his disciples Dionysius and Theognostus, that the Son is a creature, Athanasius, on the contrary, drew from the same source arguments for the eternal generation of the Logos.² Men were the less perplexed by contrary passages in his writings, inasmuch as they knew and already practised many expedients for the purpose of making such expressions of the fathers as were contradictory to the more modern views, powerless and void.³ Thus Origen had adherents among both parties. Among the Eusebians, he had in particular Eusebius Pamphili, bishop of Caesarea, in Palestine († 340), a man distinguished alike for his love of peace and his merits as a church historian.⁴ Among the Nicenians, were Athanasius, the father haer. 64, c. 4, declares him to be the father of Arianism; and Socrates, vii. 6, wonders how Timotheus could have been at the same time an admirer of Origen and an Arian, since Origen συνάβειον πανταχοῦ ὁμολογεῖ τὸν υἱὸν τῷ πατρὶ.

⁴ His biography, composed by his successor Acacius (Socrat. ii. 4), is lost. He is called an Arian by Athanasius, Epiphanius, Hilary, Jerome, &c., defended by Socrat. ii. 21, and Gelasius, hist. Syn. Nic. ii. 1. The first are followed by most historians, as Baronius, Petavius (dogm. theol. de trin. lib. ii. c. 11), Arnold, Jac. Basnage, &c. On the contrary, he is declared to be orthodox by Valesius, Bull, du Pin, Sam. Basnage. There was a controversy on the subject between Jo. Le Clerc, who accuses him of Arianism (bibliothèque univ. T. x. p. 380. Epistolæ criticae s. Artis criticae, vol. iii. p. 28 ss.), and W. Cave, who on the other hand, defends him (diss. de Eusebii Arianismo in the append. ii. hist. literar. script. eccl. p. 42, u. epist. apolog. ibid. p. 61 ss.) A more correct opinion is given by Chr. tinctly drawn, c. 119 (see below note 22). Thilo (über die Schriften des Eusebius v. Alexandrien u. d. Eusebius v. Emisa. Halle 1832, 8.) shows that the three discourses published by Augusti (Euseb. Emes. quae supersunt opuscula, Elberfeldi 1829, 8.) do not belong to Eusebius of Emesa, but, along with many others, to one Eusebius of Alexandria, belonging to the fifth or sixth century (an old life of this Alexandrian, and several discourses, are extant in the spicilegium Romanum, T. ix.
Romae 1843, 8.) Among the extant writings of Eusebius of Emesa (on them see Thilo, p. 56), the most important would be the two books de fide adv. Sabellium, in the opuscula xiv. Eusebii Pamph. ed. J. Sirmond,

Jerusalem, who afterward adopted the decrees of the Nicene council, and was present at the council of Constantinople (381), († 386).¹⁹ Among the oriental Nicenians, Apollinaris, bishop of Laodicea (between 370 and 390),²⁰ known by his heresy respecting the person of Christ; Ephraem, deacon in Edessa, the prophet of the Syrians († 378),²¹ and Diodore, presbyter in Antioch, bishop of Tarsus from 378 († before 394),²² were attached are enumerated by Theodore Lector, ap. Suidas s. v. Διδώρος, and by Ebedjesu in Assemani bibl. orient. iii. i. 28. Cf. Fabricius-Harles, ix. 278 ss. Fragments are found in Marius Mercator, Photius (cod. 122) and others. Among the Chaldean Christians, who held him in great repute (see Assemani, iii. ii. 224), many of his writings may have been preserved in translation.

²³ Although he had been previously distinguished by similar honourable surnames (thus he is called in Proclus, bishop of Constantinople after 437, περί παραδόσεως τῆς θέας λειτουργίας, in Gallandii bibl. The difference of the exegetical principles of the two schools gave expression to itself even in controversial writings.²⁵ This dispute, however, had an entirely scientific character, and did not prevent them recognising each other's merit. As the Origenist Jerome made diligent use of the interpreters of the Syrian school, so also Origen for the most part stood in high estimation with the Syrians.²⁶ But small traces of doctrinal controversies are now to be found between the two schools.²⁷ Those orthodox Origenists did not adopt all the peculiar doctrinal sentiments of their master; nor were these doctrines all reckoned PP. xii. 686 a.): xii. aggreditur—gloriam Spiritus Sancti, cum omnes quidem scripturas altas, quas sancti afflatu ejus tradiderunt, humiliter et demisse interpretans, tum vero a numero sacrarum scripturarum—eas separans. xiv. Epistolam Jacobi et alias deinceps aliorum catholicas abrogat et antiquat. xv. Inscriptiones Hymnorum, et Psalmorum, et Canticorum penitus ejecit, et omnes Psalmos judaice ad Zorobabelem et Ezechiam retulit, tribus tantum ad Dominum rejectis. xvi. Immo et sanctorum sanctissimum canticum canticorum—libidinosè pro sua et mente et lingua meretricia interpretans, sua supra modum incredibili audacia ex libris sacris abscidit. xvii. duos libros Paralipomenon—et in super Esdras repudiavit.

²⁵ The Origenists endeavoured, after the example of Origen, to prove the inadmissibility of the grammatical interpretation, and the necessity of the allegorical. For example Gregorius Nyssenus, prooem. in Cant. Cant. Jerome, in many places. On the other side wrote Theodore, according to Suidas, s. v. Διδωσκει: τὴν διαφοράν θεωρίας καὶ ἀλληγορίας. Comp. on the treatise Ernesti opusc. theol. p. 499. Still more energetically did Theodore of Mopsuestia attack the Origenists (Facundas, iii. c. 6): in libro de allegoria et historia, quem contra Origenem scripsit, unde et odium Origenianorum incurrit. Ebedjesu cites among Theodore's works quinque tomos adv. Allegoricos, (Assemani, iii. i. 34, cf. p. 19).

damnable. A pretty wide field for free investigation was still left to reason,²⁸ and the passion with which the question of the relation of the Son to the Father was discussed made this doctrine so much the test of orthodoxy, almost indeed exclusively so, that they never thought during the Arian controversy of limiting freedom of inquiry on other subjects. *Gregory of Nyssa*²⁹ and *Didymus*³⁰ were known as Origenists. Many others held to single points of Origen's creed³¹ without being attacked on that account. *Chalcidius*³² and Synesius came to adopt still more remarkable opinions by joining new-Platonism with Christianity; yet the latter was consecrated bishop of Ptolemais by Theophilus bishop of Alexandria, although he gave public expression to his convictions (410).³³ The belief in the inalienable capability

A thorough distinction between the two schools was established by the circumstance that the Syrian school acknowledged Holy Scripture alone as the source of doctrine,³⁸ while the disciples of Origen advocated their Gnostic tradition as a second source.³⁹ But they did not attain to a scientific examination of these two positions, since all scientific free movement in the province of theology was soon checked from another quarter. In the same degree as monachism prevailed, there spread also a prejudice against having anything to do with worldly science and heathen writers.⁴⁰ By this means there was formed and strengthened a crowd of traditional theologians, who, inimical to all free inquiry, would endure no opinion which could not be pointed out in the fathers. Epiphanius, bishop of Constantia in Cyprus, from the year 367 († 403),⁴¹ may be regarded as the representative of this tendency. Even in his Panarion (haer. 63 and 64), he made himself known as a bitter enemy of Origen; and when the Arian controversy was at an end, he began an open war against Origenism. While this contest put a stop to all free inquiry in the east, the western world was contemporaneously bound in spiritual fetters by Augustine; and free science everywhere banished from the church as a thing which causes mischief.

II. PERIOD OF THE ORIGENISTIC AND PELAGIAN CONTROVERSIES.

ORIGENISTIC CONTROVERSIES.

Walch's Hist. d. Ketzereien. Th. 7, S. 427 ff.

Shortly after the termination of the Arian controversies, Palestine was the chief seat of Origen's followers. Among them the most distinguished were John, bishop of Jerusalem (386—417), and the two monks, Rufinus and Jerome. Here Epiphanius made his appearance in the year 394, and demanded with zeal the condemnation of Origen. John and Rufinus resisted him: while Jerome, who was anxiously alive to his orthodoxy, yielded, and broke off communion with the church of Jerusalem.¹ By the efforts of Theophilus, bishop of Alexandria, he was indeed induced to renew it 397. In the meantime, in the same year, Rufinus went back to Rome, and endeavoured, by a revised translation of the writings of Origen,² which were as yet little known, to procure a more favourable opinion of him in the west. By this means a violent controversy was created between him and Jerome.³ Origen, however, having been condemned in Egypt, Anastasius, bishop of Rome, condemned him also. Rufinus retreated to Aquileia, and continued to earn the gratitude of the public by translating Greek works († 410).⁴ Jerome on the other hand gained for himself great merit by his continued labours on the translation of the Bible into Latin, and his commentaries († 420).⁵

Soon after these controversies in Palestine, the ambitious and violent Theophilus, bishop of Alexandria (385—412), came forth as the enemy of Origen.⁶ The monks of his diocese were divided into two parties, the Origenists and the Anthropomorphists. Moved by personal hatred to some individuals of the first, and afraid of the fanaticism of the latter, Theophilus caused Origen to be condemned (399, 400),⁷ then demanded the most noted bishops to do the same, and persecuted,⁸ with the greatest cruelties, the monks who had adopted the heretical views of Origen.

Jerome translated into Latin all the writings that appeared against the Origenists (in particular Theophili libri paschales iii, with a new catalogue of Origen's heresies. These translations, with the correspondence between Jerome and Theophilus, are most fully given in Vallarsi, vol. i. ep. 86 ss. How little Theophilus acted on this occasion according to his conviction is proved even by his subsequent conduct to Synesius. See § 84, note 33.

These unfortunate persons repaired at first to Constantinople, where John Chrysostom of Antioch had been bishop contrary to the wishes of Theophilus⁹ since 398, as much beloved by the better part of his clergy as he was hated by the more corrupt, by the luxurious court, and the empress Eudoxia. Theophilus directed his deadly hatred against Chrysostom, because the latter received the banished, and made representations to Theophilus on their behalf, and because, by their complaints, they procured from the emperor a summons commanding the bishop of Alexandria to appear in person at Constantinople before Chrysostom. After some delay, Theophilus appeared in Constantinople (403), and there succeeded in uniting the foes of Chrysostom, in procuring false accusers, and causing sentence of deposition and exile to be pronounced upon him at a synod (syn. ad Quercum).¹⁰ It is true Chrysostom had to be recalled in a few days on account of an uproar among the people, but he was as quickly displaced, chiefly through the influence of Eudoxia,¹¹ and died in exile at Pontus († 407).¹² Though the Romish bishop Innocent greatly condemned these acts of violence, he could not succeed in bringing Theophilus to account.¹³ In consequence of such conduct, Rome broke off all church communion with Constantinople; and in the latter city itself, a great part of the church remained faithful to Chrysostom (Johannites), and kept themselves apart from his successors, whom they looked upon as intruders, until the wrong that had been done to him was atoned by the solemn bringing back of his bones (438).

Isidore, abbot in Pelusium, passed a judgment on these proceedings soon after Chrysostom's death (lib. i. epist. 152): Ἡ γαίτων Δίγυπτος συνήθως ἡρόμισε, Μωσέα παραιτουμένη, τὸν Φαραῶ οικειομένη.—Τὸν λιθομανῇ καὶ χρυσολότρην προβαλλομένη Θεόφιλον, τέσσαρσι συνεργοῖσι, ἢ μᾶλλον συναποστάταις ὀχυρωθέντα, τὸν θεοφιλεῖ καὶ θεολόγον κατεπολέμησεν ἄνθρωπον.—Ἄλλ' οἶκος Δαβὶδ κραταιοῦται, ἀσθενεὶ δὲ ὁ τοῦ Σαούλ.

CONTROVERSIES WITH HERETICS IN THE WEST.

During the Arian disturbances, the Manichaeans had been silently spreading in the west, because, for the most part, they conformed externally to the catholic church. In Spain, they coincided with the Gnostics,¹ and from contact with them arose the doctrine with which Priscillian, about 379, came forth in Spain.² His most violent opponents, the bishops Idacius and Ithacius; first obtained the condemnation of his doctrines at the synod of Caesaraugusta (380); and next they prevailed on the

² His history Sulpic. Sever. hist. sacr. ii. 46—51, who calls the Priscillianists Gnosticorum haeresis. Something of their doctrine, but unsatisfactory, is found in P. Orosii consultatio s. commonitorium ad Augustinum de errore Priscillianistarum et Origenistarum, and in Leonis M. epist. 93 ad Turibium Episc. Asturic.—Priscilliani canones (doctrinal consequences) ad S. Pauli epistt. cum prologo, published in the Spicilegium Romanum, T. ix. usurper Maximus to put him to death at Trier (385). The Priscillianists however continued to exist in spite of all persecutions till the sixth century.

At the same time the persecution of the Manichaeans, who were especially hated for various reasons, was also renewed, Valentinian I. who tolerated all other sects, forbade them to assemble in public for their worship in 372; and succeeding emperors enacted new and still more rigorous laws against them.³ But their most zealous adversary was Aurelius Augustinus, born at Tagaste, in Numidia, who had himself belonged to the Manichaeans for a considerable time, but had been converted at Milan by Ambrose (387). Afterwards, as bishop of Hippo Regius in Numidia (from 395 to 430), he became a very formidable opponent of heretics, while he exercised an incalculable influence on his own and subsequent times by his doctrinal and polemical writings.⁴ His energies were directed in a high degree against had occasion to appeal to the writings of Augustine, in consequence of the high authority in which they stood, the greater was the danger of their undergoing intentional and unintentional corruptions. Even so early as the ninth century Hincmar (about 860), de non trina deitate (Opp. i. 450), unjustly accuses others of what he is disposed to do himself, i. e. of corrupting them. The doctrinal position of the editor had its influence also on the earlier editions. It is even proclaimed in the title of the Opp. Venet. 1584: in quo curavimus removeri ea omnia, quae fidelium mentes haeretica pravitate possent inficere. The Benedictines were the first who proceeded critically in their edition, but by this they gave offence to the Jesuits, who asserted they had falsified the Codd. Corbejenses. On the other side wrote Mabillon supplementum libri de re diplomatica, c. 13. On this came forth the Jesuit Barth. Germon, de veterum regum Franc. diplomat. discept. ii. p. 314. There were still more furious controversies in Africa in the fourth century against the Donatists,⁸ among whom the fanatical Agonistici, called by the catholic Christians Circumcelliones, appeared for the purpose of rendering their cause victorious by external force.⁹ The most formidable opponent of the Dona-

Described by Augustini de haeres. lib. c. 69: Ad hanc (Donatistarum) haeresim in Africa et illi pertinent, qui appellantur Circumcelliones, genus hominum agreste et famosissimae audaciae, non solum in alios immania facinora perpetrando, sed nec sibi eadem insana feritate parcendo. Nam per mortes varias, maximeque praecipitiorum et aquarum et ignium, se ipsos necare consueverunt, et in istum furorem alios quos potuerint sexus utriusque seducere, aliquando, ut occidantur ab illis, mortem nisi fecerint comminantes. Verumtamen plerisque Donatistarum (non) displicent tales, nec eorum communionem contaminari se putant. Idem contra Crescon. iii. § 46: quotidie vestrorum incredibilia patimur facta Clericorum et Circumcellionum, multa pejora quam quorumlibet latronum atque praedonum. Namque hor-tists was Augustine,¹⁰ who at last effected, by the emperor's interference, a conference with them in Carthage (411), at which they were completely vanquished in the judgment of the imperial commissioner.¹¹ This victory, and the imperial ordinances¹² that followed, very much weakened the party, though remnants of it are found as late as the seventh century.

rendis armati cujusque generis telis, terribiliter vagando, non dico ecclesiasticam, sed ipsam humanam quietem pacemque perturbant, nocturnis aggressionibus clericorum catholicorum invasas domos nudas atque inanes derelinquunt: ipsos etiam raptos et fustibus tunsos, ferroque concisos, semivivos abjiciunt. Insuper—oculis eorum calcem aceto permixto infundentes—excruciare amplius eligunt quam citius excaecare. § 47: Circumcelliorum vestrorum nobilis furor horrendum praebens vestris clericis satellitium usquequaque odiosissime innotuit. Idem contra Gaudentium, i. § 32: cum idololatrias licentia usquequaque ferveret—isti Paganorum armis festa sua frequentantibus irruerant (cf. epist. 185, § 12: quando adhuc cultus fuerat idolorum, ad Paganorum celeberrimas sollemnitates ingentia turbarum agmina veniebant, non ut idola frangerent, sed ut interficerentur a cultoribus idolorum: doubtless in the time from Julian to Gratian).—Praeter haec sunt saxa immania et montium horrida praeupta, voluntariorum creberrimis mortibus nobilitata vestrorum: aquis et ignibus rarius id agebant, praecipitiis greges consumeabant ingentes. Quis enim nescit hoc genus hominum in horrendis facinoribus inquietum, ab utilibus operibus otiosum, crudelissimum in mortibus alienis, vilissimum in suis, maxime in agris territans, ab agris vacans, et victus sui causa cellas circumiens rusticanas, unde et Circumcellionem nomen accepit? Ejusd. enarratio in Psalm. 132, § 3: Quando vos recte haereticis de Circumcellionibus insultare coeperitis—illi vobis insultant de Monachis. Primo si comparandi sunt, vos videte. Comparantur ebriosi cum sobriis, praecipites cum consideratis, furentes cum simplicibus, vagantes cum congregatis. § 6: Fortasse dicturi sunt: nostri non vocantur Circumcelliones: vos illos ita appellatis contumelioso nomine. Agonisticos eos vocant. Sic eos, inquirunt, appellamus propter agonem. Certant enim, et dicit Apostolus: certamen bonum certavi (2 Tim. iv. 7). Quia sunt qui certant adversus diabolum et praevalent milites Christi, Agonistici appellantur. Utinam ergo milites Christi essent, et non milites diaboli, a quibus plus timetur Deo laudes, quam fremitus leonia. Hi etiam insultare nobis audent, quia fratres, cum vident homines, Deo gratias dicunt. Vos Deo gratias nostrum ridetis: Deo laudes vestrum plorant homines (cf. contra literas Petiliani ii. § 146: considerate paululum, quam multis, et quantum luctum deerint Deo laudes armorum vestrorum).

Augustine exerted the greatest influence on the doctrines, especially of the occidental church, by his system of the relation of Divine grace to the human will, which he developed in the Pelagian controversy. The freedom of the will, the evil consequences of the fall, and the necessity of divine grace, had always been admitted in the church without any attempt having been made to define by ecclesiastical formulas the undefinable in these doctrines.¹ Since Tertullian, an opinion had been peculiar to the Latin fathers, which was wholly unknown to the Greek church, that the sin of Adam had been transferred as a peccable principle to his posterity, by generation (tradux animae, tradux pec- cati). This must necessarily have had some influence on the doctrines of free will and Divine grace.² Pelagius and Caelestius, two monks universally esteemed for their virtues, had distinguished themselves, even during their abode at Rome (till 409), by giving peculiar prominence to the doctrines of free will for the promotion of virtuous effort.³ Afterwards they repaired to Africa (411), whence Pelagius soon passed over into Palestine. But Caelestius, when he became a candidate for the office of presbyter in Carthage, was accused of various errors which had proceeded from the tendency to exalt free will,⁴ and was excluded from church communion by a synod at Carthage (412); on which he went to Ephesus.

The doctrines of Caelestius, however, had gained many friends, and therefore Augustine was induced to oppose them, although personally he had no share in the transactions of the synod

Adam mortalem factum, qui sive peccaret, sive non peccaret, fuisset moriturus. II. Quoniam peccatum Adae ipsum solum laesit, et non genus humanum. III. Quoniam infantes, qui nascuntur, in eo statu sunt, in quo Adam fuit ante praevaricationem. IV. Quoniam neque per mortem vel praevaricationem Adae omne genus hominum moriatur, neque per resurrectionem Christi omne hominum genus resurgat. V. Quoniam infantes, etiamsi non baptizentur, habeant vitam aeternam. VI. Quoniam lex sic mittit ad regnum coelorum, quomodo et evangelium. VII. Quoniam et ante adventum Domini fuerunt homines impeccabiles, id est sine peccato (p. 3: Posse esse hominem sine peccato et facile Dei mandata servare, quia et ante Christi adventum fuerunt homines sine peccato.) Cf. Augustin. de gestis Pelagii, 11. Caelestius's defence of the second and third points in Augustin. de pecc. orig. c. 3, 4 (from the Synodical acts): Dixi, de traduce peccati dubium me esse, ita tamen, ut cui donavit Deus gratiam peritiae, consentiam; quia diversa ab eis audivi, qui utique in ecclesia catholica constituti sunt presbyteri. by which Caelestius was condemned. His attention was soon drawn to the writings of Pelagius as the teacher of Caelestius, which he refuted, but always as yet with respect and forbearance.⁵ But after Jerome in Palestine had begun to raise suspicions against Pelagius of being an Origenist,⁶ for he hated him from some trifling cause, and after Orosius,⁷ a presbyter sent by Augustine, had failed in his attempt to procure the condemnation of the Pelagian doctrine with John, bishop of Jerusalem, and also with the synod at Diospolis (Lydda 415), Augustine laid aside all forbearance, and opposed Pelagianism severely and bitterly in many works.⁹ The African bishops solemnly condemned the heresy¹⁰ at the synods of Mileve and Carthage (416), and Innocent I. bishop of Rome, fully agreed with them.¹¹ After Innocent's death († 417), Pelagius and Caelestius applied to his successor Zosimus, by whom they were declared orthodox;¹² but the Africans adhered in their decision to the synod at Carthage (417),¹³ and the general synod held at the same place (418),¹⁴ and succeeded in obtaining from Honorius a sacrum rescriptum against the Pelagians.¹⁵ Zosimus now also yielded, and condemned Pelagianism in the Epistola tractoria.¹⁶ The Italian bishops were compelled to subscribe this; and eighteen who refused were deposed. Among them also was Julian, bishop of Eclanum, who continued to defend Pelagianism in various works, against which Augustine wrote several in refutation.

The Pelagians did not form an ecclesiastical but simply a theological party. They had also no common type of doctrine, and therefore deviated from one another in particular points. Their opinions,¹⁷ which are to be found without disfigurement only in their own works,¹⁸ may be reduced to the following arti-

¹⁹ Caelestii Symb. fragm. i.: Infantes autem debere baptizari in remissionem peccatorum secundum regulam universalis ecclesiae et secundum evangelii sententiam, confitemur, quia Dominus statuit, regnum caelorum nonnisi baptizatis posse conferri: quod qui vires naturae non habent, conferri necesse est per gratiae libertatem. In remissionem autem peccatorum baptizandos infantes non idcirco diximus, ut peccatum ex trahere (or peccatum naturae, peccatum naturale) firmare videamur, quod longe a catholico sensu alienum est. Quia peccatum non cum homine nascitur, quod postmodum exercetur ab homine: quia non naturae delictum, sed voluntatis esse demonstratur. Et illud ergo confiteri congruum, ne diversa baptismatis genera facere videamur, et hoc praemunire necessarium est, ne per mysterii occasionem, ad creatoris injuriam, malum, antequam fiat ab homine, tradi dicatur homini per naturam. Pelagii ep. ad Demetr. c. 4: Ferat sententiam de naturae bono ipsa conscientia bona. Quid illud obsecro est, quod ad omne peccatum aut erubescimus, aut timemus? et culpam facti nunc rubore vultus, nunc pallore monstramus?—e diverso autem in omni bono laeti, constantes, intrepidi sumus?—Est enim inquam in animis nostris naturalis quaedam (ut ita dixerim) sanctitas, quae velut in arce animi praesidens exercet boni malique judicium. But comp. c. 8: Neque vero alia nobis causa difficultatem bene faciendi facit, quam longa consuetudo vitiorum, quae nos infecit a parvo, paulatimque per multos corrumpit annos, et ita postea obligatos sibi et addictos tenet, ut vim quodammodo videatur habere naturae.

²⁰ Pelagius, ap. August. de pecc. Orig. 14: omne bonum ac malum, quo vel laudabiles vel vituperabiles sumus, non nobiscum oritur, sed agitur a nobis: capaces enim utriusque rei, non pleni nascimur, et ut sine virtute, ita et sine vitio procreamur: atque ante actionem propriae voluntatis, id solum in homine est, quod Deus condidit. Epist. ad Demetr. c. 3: Volens namque Deus rationabilem creaturam voluntarii boni munere et liberi arbitrii potestate donare, utriusque partis possibilitatem homini inserendo proprium ejus fecit, esse quod velit: ut boni ac mali capax, naturaliter utrumque posset, et ad alterutrum voluntatem deflecterit. Hence Caelestii definitiones are proofs, hominem sine peccato esse posse. Among other things it is said, def. 2: Iterum quaerendum est, peccatum voluntatis an necessitatis est? Si necessitatis est, peccatum non est, si voluntatis, vitari potest. 5. Iterum quaerendum est, utrumme debeat homo sine peccato esse. Procul dubio debet. Si debet, potest: si non potest, ergo non debet. Et si non debet homo esse sine peccato, debet ergo cum peccato esse; et iam peccatum non erit, si illud deberi constiterit.

tion (regnum coelorum).²¹ As the law was formerly given to facilitate the bringing about of goodness, so now the instructions and example of Christ, and the particular operations of grace. The latter, however, always follow the free resolution to be good.²² God's predestination, therefore, is founded solely on his foreknowledge of human actions."

Though Augustine had formerly in his controversy with the Manichaeans conceded much to free will, and taken a very different view of predestination,²³ he had long before Pelagius

²² Pelagius de libero arbitrio (ap. Aug. de grat. Chr. 7.): hic nos imperitissimi hominum putant injuriam divinae gratiae facere, quia dicimus eam sine voluntate nostra nequaquam in nobis perficere sanctitatem: quasi Deus gratiae suae aliquid imperaverit, et non illis, quibus imperavit, etiam gratiae suae auxilium subministret, ut quod per liberum homines facere jubentur arbitrium, facilius possent implere per gratiam. Quam nos non, ut tu putas, in lege tantummodo, sed et in Dei esse adiutorio confitemur. Adjuvat enim nos Deus per doctrinam et revelationem suam, dum cordis nostri oculos aperit; dum nobis, ne praesentibus occupemur, futura demonstrat; dum diaboli pandit insidias; dum nos multiformi et ineffabili dono gratiae caelestis illuminat. Ejusdem ep. ad Innoc. (ibid. c. 31.): Ecce apud beatitudinem tuam epistola ista me purget, id qua pure atque simpliciter ad peccandum et ad non peccandum integrum liberum arbitrium habere nos dicimus, quod in omnibus bonis operibus divino adjuvatur semper auxilio. Quam liberi arbitrii potestatem dicimus in omnibus esse generaliter, in Christianis, Judaeis, atque Gentilibus. In omnibus est liberum arbitrium aequaliter per naturam, sed in solis Christianis juvatur a gratia.

²³ August. de praedest. Sanct. c. 3: Quo praecipue testimonio (1 Cor. iv. 7,) etiam ipse convictus sum, cum similiter errarem, putans fidem, qua in Deum credimus, non esse donum Dei, sed a nobis esse in nobis, et per illam nos impetrare Dei dona, quibus temperanter et juste et pie vivamus in hoc saeculo. Neque enim fidem putabam Dei grati praeveniri, ut per illam nobis daretur, quod posceremus utiliter, nisi quia credere non possemus, si non praecederet praeconium veritatis: ut autem praedicato nobis Evangelio consentiremus, nostrum esse proprium, et nobis ex nobis esse arbitrabar. Quem meum errorem nonnulla opuscula mea satis indicant ante episcopatum meum scripta (in particular the expositio quarundam propositionum, in ep. ad Rom. c. 60 and 61, other works against the Manichaeans. See Wundemann, ii. 79 and 91. Neander's Kirchengesch. ii. iii. 1205.) cf. Retract. i. 23.

so much over the will of the natural man that he can no longer will what is good, as he should do, out of love to God, but sins continually, as his actions may also externally shew.²⁸ From this corrupt mass of humanity (perditionis massa) God resolved from eternity to save some through Christ and consign the rest to deserved perdition. Though baptism procures forgiveness of sin, even of original sin, it does not remove the moral corruption of man.²⁹ Therefore, Divine grace alone, and irresistibly, works

Unde ergo recte infans illa perditione punitur, nisi quia pertinet ad massam perditionis, et juste intelligitur ex Adam natus, antiqui debiti obligatione damnatus, nisi inde fuerit, non secundum debitum, sed secundum gratiam liberatus? Hence the Pelagians accused him of holding the doctrine of a tradux animae and tradux peccati (Traduciani). Inclined as he may have been to that view, he left the question of the origin of souls undecided. Cf. de anima et ejus origine libb. iv. Opus imp. iv. 104: Argue de origine animarum cunctationem meam, quia non audeo docere vel affirmare quod nescio (cf. de peccat. merit. et remiss. ii. 36).

²⁸ Contra duas epistt. Pelagianorum, i. 2: Quis autem nostrum dicat, quod primi hominis peccato perierit liberum arbitrium de humano genere? Libertas quidem periit per peccatum, sed illa quae in paradiso fuit, habendi plenam cum immortalitate justitiam; propter quod natura humana divina indiget gratia, dicente Domino: si vos Filius liberaverit, tunc vere liberi eritis (John viii. 36), utique liberi ad bene justaque vivendum. Nam liberum arbitrium usque adeo in peccatore non periit, ut per illud peccent, maxime omnes qui cum delectatione peccant et amore peccati: hoc eis placet, quod eis libet. De gratia Christi, 26: Quid autem boni faceremus, nisi diligeremus? Aut quomodo bonum non facimus, si diligamus? Etsi enim Dei mandatum videtur aliquando non a diligentibus, sed a timentibus fieri: tamen ubi non est delectio, nullum bonum opus imputatur, nec recte bonum opus vocatur, quia omne quod non ex fide est, peccatum est, et fides per dilectionem operatur. Ac per hoc gratiam Dei, qua caritas Dei diffunditur in cordibus nostris per Spiritum sanctum, qui datus est nobis, sic confiteatur, qui vult veraciter confiteri, ut omnino nihil boni sine illa, quod ad pietatem pertinet veramque justitiam, fieri posse non dubitet. De peccat. meritis et remiss. i. 19: Caeterum quis ignorat, quod baptizatus parvulus, si ad rationales annos veniens non crediderit, nec se ab illicitis concupiscentiis abstinuerit, nihil ei proderit, quod parvus acceperit? Verumtamen si percepto baptismo de hac vita emigraverit, soluto reatu, cui originaliter erat obnoxius, perficietur in illo lumine

²⁰ In the beginning of the controversy Augustine still thought of these operations of grace as resistibiles, see de spiritu et litera, c. 34 : agit Deus, ut velimus, et ut credamus, sive extrinsecus per evangelicas exhortationes,—sive intrinsecus, ubi nemo habet in potestate quid ei veniat in mentem, sed consentire vel dissentire propriae voluntatis est. His ergo modis quando Deus agit cum anima rationali, ut ei credat (neque enim credere potest quodlibet libero arbitrio, si nulla sit suasio vel vocatio cui credat), profecto et ipsum velle credere Deus operatur in homine, et in omnibus misericordia ejus praevenit nos: consentire autem vocationi Dei, vel ab ea dissentire, sicut dixi, propriae voluntatis est. But in his later works they appear as irresistibly acting. De corrept. et grat. 7 : Quicumque ergo ab illa originali damnatione ista divinae gratiae largitate discreti sunt, non est dubium, quod et procuratur eis audiendum evangelium ; et cum audiunt, credunt ; et in fide, quae per delectionem operatur, usque in finem perseverant ; et si quando exorbitant, correpti emendantur ; et quidam eorum, etsi ab hominibus non corripiantur, in viam quam reliquerant redeunt ; et nonnulli accepta gratia, in qualibet aetate, periculis hujus vitae mortis celeritate subtrahuntur. Haec enim omnia operatur in eis, qui vasa misericordiae operatus est eos, qui et elegit eos in filio suo ante constitutionem mundi per electionem gratiae. De gratia Christi, c. 24 : Non lege atque doctrina insonante forinsecus, sed interna atque occulta mirabili ac ineffabili potestate operari Deum in cordibus hominum non solum veras revelationes, sed etiam bonas voluntates. De corrept. et grat. c. 9 : Quicumque ergo in Dei providentissima dispositione praesciti, praedestinati, vocati, justificati, glorificati sunt, non dico etiam nondum renati, sed etiam nondum nati, jam filii Dei sunt, et omnino perire non possunt. Ibid. 12 : Ac per hoc nec de ipsa perseverantia boni voluit Deus sanctos suos in viribus suis, sed in ipso gloriari. —Tantum quippe Spiritu sancto accenditur voluntas eorum, ut ideo possint, quia sic volunt ; ideo sic velint, quia Deus operatur, ut velint.—Subventum est igitur infirmitati voluntatis humanae, ut divina gratia indeclinabiliter et insuperabiliter ageretur. Ibid. 14 : Non est itaque dubitandum, voluntati Dei, qui in caelo et in terra omnia, quaecumque voluit, fecit, et qui etiam illa, quae futura sunt, fecit, humanas voluntates non posse resistere, quo minus faciat ipse quod vult : quandoquidem etiam de ipsis hominum voluntatibus, quod vult, cum vult, facit. These moral effects of grace Augustine comprehends under Justificatio, cf. opus imperfect. contra Jul. ii. c. 168 : Justificat impium Deus, non solum dimit-tendo, quae mala faciunt, sed etiam donando caritatem, quae declinat a malo et facit bonum per Spiritum sanctum.

gelica et humana creatura peccasset,—etiam per eandem creaturae voluntatem, qua factum est quod Creator noluit, impleveret ipse quo voluit: bene utens et malis, tamquam summe bonus, ad eorum damnationem, quos juste praedestinavit ad poenam, et ad eorum salutem, quos benigne praedestinavit ad gratiam. cf. de grat. et lib. arbit. c. 21: operari Deum in cordibus hominum ad inclinandas eorum voluntates quocunque voluerit, sive ad bona pro sua misericordia, sive ad mala pro meritis eorum. Ratramnus de praedest. ii. (in Vett. auctorum, qui ix. saec. de praedest. et gratia scripserunt opera, cura Gilb. Mauguin, i. 62,) has collected several passages of this kind. Comp. however Wiggers, i. 305.

³² De peccat. merit. et remiss. iii. 4: Quoniam nihil agit aliud, cum parvuli baptizantur, nisi ut incorporentur ecclesiae, id est, Christi corpori membrisque socientur, manifestum est, eos ad damnationem, nisi hoc eis collatum fuerit, pertinere. De gratia et lib. arbit. 3: Sed et illa ignorantia, quae non est eorum, qui scire nolunt, sed eorum, qui tanquam simpliciter nesciunt, neminem sic excusat, ut sempiterno igne non ardeat, si propterea non credidit, quia non audivit omnino quid crederet; sed fortasse, ut mitius ardeat (cf. contra Julianum, iv. 3: Absit, ut sit in aliquo vera virtus, nisi fuerit justus. Absit autem, ut sit justus vere, nisi vivat ex fide.—Minus enim Fabricius quam Catilina punietur, non quia iste bonus, sed quia ille magis malus: et minus impius, quam Catilina, Fabricius, non veras virtutes habendo, sed a veris virtutibus non plurimum deviando).—De corrept. et grat. 7: Ac per hoc et qui Evangelium non audierunt, et qui eo audito in melius commutati perseverantiam non acceperunt, et qui Evangelio audito venire ad Christum, hoc est, in eum credere noluerunt, quoniam ipse dixit, Nemo venit ad me, nisi ei datum fuerit a Patre meo (John vi. 66), et qui per aetatem parvulam nec credere potuerunt, sed ab originali noxa solo possent lavacro regenerationis absolvi, quo tamen non accepto mortui perierunt; non sunt ab illa conspersione discreti, quam constat esse damnatam, euntibus omnibus ex uno in condemnationem. Ibid. 13: Propter hujus ergo utilitatem secreti credendum est, quosdam de filiis perditionis non accepto dono perseverandi usque in finem, in fide, quae per dilectionem operatur, incipere vivere, et aliquamdiu fideliter ac juste vivere, et postea cadere, neque de hac vita, priusquam hoc eis contingat, auferri. De Praedest. Sanct. 8: Cur autem istum potius, quam illum liberet, inscrutabilia sunt judicia ejus et investigabiles viae ejus (Rom. xi. 33). Melius enim et hic audimus aut dicimus: O homo, tu quis es, qui respondeas Deo (Rom. ix. 20). How much perplexity the passage, 1 Tim. ii. 4: qui omnes vult homines salvos fieri, occasioned Augustine, is proved by his numerous and all very forced attempts to explain it. So de corrept. et grat. c. 14. Contra Jul. iv. c. 8, Omnes, i. q. multos; Enchirid. ad Laur. 103, Omnes, i. q. omnis generis. Such were the opposing systems, apart from the consequences with which the misrepresentations of the combatants reproached one another,³⁴ for the purpose of exciting universal abhorrence of the enemy's doctrine. note 35). The last passage is against those who inferred from Psalm lxxvii. 10 that the punishment of hell will have an end. Still he concedes to them: Sed poenas damnatorum certes temporum intervallis existiment, si hoc eis placet, aliquatenus mitigari. Etiam sic quippe intelligi potest manere in illis ira Dei (Jo. iii. 36), h. e. ipsa damnatio—ut in ira sua, h. e. manente ira sua, non tamen contineat miserationes suas (Ps. lxxvii. 10); non aeterno supplicio finem dando, sed levamen adhibendo vel interponendo cruciatibus. In the enarrat. in Psalm cv. § 2, however, he declares even this conjecture too bold.

³⁵ De dono perseverantiae, c. 22: Dolosi vel imperiti medici est, etiam utile medicamentum sic alligare, ut aut non prosit, aut obsit. One should not say to the church: Ita se habet de praedestinatione definita sententia voluntatis Dei, ut alii ex vobis de infidelitate, accepta obediendi voluntate, veneritis ad fidem. Quid opus est dici, alii ex vobis? Si enim Ecclesiae Dei loquimur, si credentibus loquimur, cur alios eorum ad fidem venisse dicentes caeteris facere videamur injuriam? cum possimus congruentius dicere: Ita se habet de praedestinatione definita sententia voluntatis Dei, ut ex infidelitate veneritis ad fidem accepta voluntate obediendi, et accepta perseverantia permaneat in fide? Nec illud quod sequitur est omnino dicendum, i. e. caeteri vero qui in peccatorum delectatione remoramini, ideo nondum surrexistis, quia necdum vos adiutorium gratiae miserantis erexit: cum bene et convenienter dici possit et debeat: si qui autem adhuc in peccatorum damnabilium delectatione remoramini, apprehendite saluberrimam disciplinam: quod tamen cum feceritis, nolite extolli quasi de operibus vestris aut gloriari, quasi hoc non acceperitis; Deus est enim, quo operatur in vobis et velle et operari pro bona voluntate—de ipso autem cursu vestro bono rectoque condiscite vos ad praedestinationem divinae gratiae pertinere. Augustine is in-dangerous they were to the interests of morality, and was able to bring them forward in popular instruction in no other than an inconsequential way. The Greek church could not but stumble at them; but it troubled itself little about such controversies.³⁶ The exiled western bishops hoped therefore that they would so much the more readily obtain protection in Constantinople, as they believed they had wholly in their favour the works of Chrysostom, which were highly esteemed in that place.³⁷

Baluz. p. 339 ss. ex. gr. p. 342: Nihil horum prospicere potuit mirabilis peccati originalis assertor, quippe qui in divinis scripturis nequaquam fuerit exercitatus, nec ab infantia, juxta b. Pauli vocem, sacras didicerit literas.—Novissime vero in hanc dogmatis recidit novitatem, qua diceret, quod in ira atque furore Deus Adam mortalem esse praeceperit, et propter ejus unum delictum cunctos etiam necdum natos homines morte multaverit. Sic autem disputans non veretur nec confunditur ea sentire de Deo, quae nec de hominibus sanum sapientibus et aliquam justitiae curam gerentibus unquam quis aestimare tentavit caet.—The Greek church historians are altogether silent concerning the Pelagian controversy.

³⁷ So Julian appealed to Chrysostom. See August. contra Jul. i. c. 6 s. With the same view Annianus, doubtless the Annianus Pseudo-diaconus Celedensis who is mentioned by Hieron. ad August. (August. ep. 202) as a writer in favour of Pelagianism, and who was also present at the synod of Diospolis (see Garnerii diss. i. ad Marium Mercat. c. 7), translated into Latin numerous homilies of Chrysostom, of which hom. viii. in Matth. and hom. vii. de laudibus S. Pauli, still exist. Comp. his Prologus ad Orontium Episc. (who was condemned at Ephesus for being a Pelagian) prefixed to the hom. in Matth. (Chrysost. opp. ed. Hence they applied particularly to Nestor, who had been bishop of the see of Constantinople since 428. But when very prejudicial representations of Pelagianism had been disseminated from the west, especially by Marius Mercator,³⁸ who was personally present in Constantinople,³⁹ Nestorius saw the necessity of giving prominence to the ruinous consequences of the fall, and the necessity of baptism, which the Pelagians were said to deny.⁴⁰ But, on the contrary, he found the Palagians themselves who had fled to him, so little heterodox, that he asked from the Romish bishop Caelestine (429) an explanation respecting the grounds of their condemnation.⁴¹ This very relation of the Pelagians to Nestorius was ruinous to them in the west; an interiniquitas ab imperante propellitur, et praevaricanti reatus affigitur. Jam vero iste eruditorum decus cum de gratia Dei disserit, quanta illam ubertate, quanta etiam cautione concelebrat! Non enim est in alterutro aut incautus, aut nimius, sed in utroque moderatus. Sic liberas ostendit hominum voluntates, ut ad Dei tamen mandata faciendae divinae gratiae necessarium ubique fateatur auxilium: sic continuum divinae gratiae auxilium commendat, ut nec studia voluntatis interimat. Chrysost. in epist. ad Rom. hom. x. expressly rejects as an absurdity the opinion that by Adam's disobedience another person becomes a sinner. On the relation of grace to freedom he speaks in epist. ad Hebr. hom. xii.

⁴¹ Marius Merc. p. 119: contra haeresin Pelagii seu Caelestii—quamvis recte sentiret et doceret, Julianum tamen ex episcopo Eclanensi cum participibus suis hujus haeresis signiferum et antesignanum, olim ab apostolica sententia exauctoratum atque depositum, in amicitiam interim censuit suscipiendum. Spem enim absolutionis promittens, ipsum quoque Caelestium litteris suis—consolatus est. This writing follows p. 131. On this account Nestorius applied in the year 429 to the Romish bishop Caelestine, in two letters (ap. Baronius ad ann. 430, note 3; ap. Coustant, among the epist. Caelest. ep. vi. and vii). In the first: Julianus caet.—saepe—Imperatorem adierunt, ac suas causas defieverunt, tanquam orthodoxi temporibus orthodoxis persecutionem passi, saepe eadem et apud nos lamentantes.—Sed quoniam apertiore nobis de causis eorum notitia opus est,—dignare nobis notitiam de his largiri caet.

nal necessary connection between Pelagianism and Nestorianism was hunted out,⁴² and at the third general council at Ephesus (431), Pelagianism was condemned along with Nestorianism.⁴³ Yet the Augustinian doctrine of grace and predestination was never adopted in the east.⁴⁴

But even in the west, where this doctrine had been ecclesiastically ratified, there were never more than a few who held to it in its fearful consequences. Its injurious practical effects could not be overlooked, and appeared occasionally in outward manifestation.⁴⁵ The monks, in particular, were naturally opposed to a view which annihilated all the meritoriousness of their monkish exercises.⁴⁶ Hence Augustine soon found his doctrine disputed even by opponents of the Pelagians.⁴⁷ The monks of Massilia especially, adopted a view of free grace between that of Augustine and that of Pelagius, which seems to have originated chiefly with John Cassian († soon after 432),⁴⁸ a disciple

This last work of Irenaeus is lost ; but the original documents appended to it were transferred, in the sixth century, in a Latin translation, to the Synodicon (*Variorum epist. ad Conc. In the Arian controversy the doctrine concerning Christ's person had been touched upon, but without being fully developed. When the Arians inferred from the catholic doctrine of one human soul in Christ that there were two persons,¹ the Orientals indeed could not be led astray by this means from holding fast the human in Christ, as long as they remained true to their historico-exegetical principles;² but the Nicenians in Egypt and the west began to give strong prominence to the unity of the Divine person, for the purpose of obviating that Arian objection,³ and to consider Christ accordingly in all relations as God.⁴

Sabellium*, in so far as we can venture to ascribe this work to him. See Thilo über die Schriften des Euseb. v. Alex. u. des Euseb. v. Emisa, s. 75.

³ Athanas. de incarnat. verbi (opp. ed. Montfaucon, ii. 1, ap. Mansi, iv. 689): 'Ὁμολογοῦμεν καὶ εἶναι αὐτὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ θεὸν κατὰ πνεῦμα, υἱὸν ἀνθρώπου κατὰ σάρκα· οὐ δύο φύσεις τὸν ἕνα υἱὸν, μίαν προσκυνήτην καὶ μίαν ἀποσκύνητον· ἀλλὰ μίαν φύσιν τοῦ θεοῦ λόγου σεσαρκωμένην, καὶ προσκυνουμένην μετὰ τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ μὴ προσκυνήσει. Since Cyril, a follower of Athanasius, appeals to this passage (lib. de recta fide ad Imperatrices, § 9), it has by this means the most important external testimony in its favour. Several writings were assigned to the Romish bishop Julius I. in which the unity existing in Christ was strongly expressed. There are still extant the epist. ad Dionysium (ap. Mansi, ii. 1191. A. Maji scriptt. vett. nova coll. vii. i. 144), cited as genuine by Gennadius (about 490), in which the μία φύσις is expressly and plainly asserted; the epist. ad Prosdocium (ex. cod. Oxon. ed. J. G. Ehrlich, Lips. 1750, 4), regarded as genuine by the council of Ephesus, by Cyril, Marius Mercator, Facundus, and Ephraem bishop of Antioch about 526 (Photii, cod. 229), which rejects the phrase ἄνθρωπος ὑπὸ θεοῦ προσληφθεὶς, and three fragments lately published by Majus, l. c. vii. i. 165, the first and third of which are mentioned by Ephraem, l. c. How strongly also Hilary was inclined to the doctrine of one nature may be seen in Münscher's Dogmengesch. iv. 16. Baur's Dreieinigkeit, i. 681. By this means the mode of expression in the writings of Julius is rendered more intelligible from the ge-

When Apollinaris, following this tendency still farther, denied to Christ a reasonable human soul, his opponents, it is true, were united in asserting that Christ is perfect God and man in one person, but in the east they were now accustomed to distinguish the two natures, and the expressions used concerning them, with greater care; and the two most eminent men of the Antiochenineral tendency of the west at that time.—After Eutyches and the later Monophysites continually appealed to Athanasius, the Romish bishop Felix (270—275), and Julius (337—352), and to Gregory Thaumaturgus, as unam naturam Dei verbi decarnentes post unionem, whose testimonia Cyrillus, in libb. adv. Diodorum et Theodorum, has put together. See Collatio Catholicorum cum Severianis, A.D. 531, Mansi, viii. 820; a Jacobite collection of this kind translated from the Arabic, see spicilegium Rom. iii. 694), many Catholics began to assert that these testimonies have been interpolated by Apollinarists (see Collatio, l. c. p. 821. Leontius de sectis act. viii. Justinianus Imp. contra Monophys. in Maji scriptt. vet. nov. coll. vii. i. 302), notwithstanding Ephraem bishop of Antioch about 526 (Photii, cod. 229), and Eulogius, bishop of Alexandria about 580 (Phot. cod. 230), admit the genuineness of the passage of Athanasius, and of the ep. Julii ad Prodocium. Leontius (contra Monophys. ap. Majus, vii. i. 143 s.) appeals to the testimony of Polemon, a disciple of Apollinaris, as proof that the passage ascribed to Athanasius belongs to Apollinaris. The place in question in Polemon may be completely put together from the two quotations, p. 143, and p. 16, but it says something quite different. Polemon speaks against the inconsistency of those who asserted μὴν φύσιν τοῦ λόγου σαρκακωμένην, and yet assume in Christ θεὸν τέλειον and ἄνθρωπον τέλειον, while Apollinaris had rightly rejected the two natures, and taught καὶ εἶναι αὐτὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ (as above in the passage of Athanasius). In short, Polemon meant to say, Athanasius had borrowed that doctrine from Apollinaris, but fell into an inconsistency with himself in so doing. Ap. Majus, l. c. p. 16, there is also a fragment of Apollinarii epist. ad Jovian, in which that passage has been interpolated word for word as above; but it does not at all suit the construction, a sign that it has been inserted.—The moderns, however, especially Catholic writers, have retained the view that all those writings proceeded from Apollinaris. It has been defended in reference to the letters of Julius, particularly by Muratori anecdota graeca, p. 341 ss.; and with regard to all those passages above named by Le Quien dissert. Damasc. ii. prefixed to his edition of Joannes Damasc. ⁴ Thus Mary is called θεοτόκος by Eusebius, de vita Const. iii. 43. Cyrillus, Hieros. catech. x. p. 146. Athanasius, orat. iii. contra Arian. c. 14, 33. Didymus, de trin. i. 31, 94; ii. 4, 133, and Gregory of Nazianzum goes so far as to declare the man godless who will not employ this appellation. Hesychius, presbyter in Jerusalem († 343), calls David θεοδωρῶν (Photius, cod. 275). In many apocryphal writings James is called ἀνελκόθεος (see Thilo Acta Thomae in the notit. fiber. p. x. ss. cf. Photius, cod. 112).

an school Diodore, bishop of Tarsus,⁵ and Theodore, bishop of Mopsuestia,⁶ confirmed the accuracy of this distinction by their writings, which were still highly esteemed in the whole east, while in Egypt the formula of Athanasius respecting a Divine nature made flesh was maintained. Nestorius, a presbyter of Antioch, by his elevation to the see of Constantinople, came into a difficult position (428,) as far as he had both to contend against envious rivals, and was also obliged by his extraction and position,¹¹ to undertake the task of completing the incipient restoration of Chrysostom's honour, which Cyril,¹² the nephew and worthy successor of Theophilus,¹³

¹⁵ The bishop of Constantinople, Atticus, about 420, had been obliged to introduce Chrysostom's name with the Diptycha, after the example of Antioch, and at the pressing request of the people, and invited Cyril to do the same (Attici ep. ad Cyrillum, in Cyrilli op. v. iii. 201). The latter, however, refused to comply with the demand, desiring that the sentence pronounced on Chrysostom should be righteously maintained (l. c. p. 204). However, immediately after Nestor's elevation, new demonstrations of honour were added, Marcellinus Comes (about 534) in Chronico ad ann. 428 (Chronica medii aevi, ed. Roeler, i. 262): Beatissimi Joannis Episcopi dudum malorum Episcoporum invidia exulati apud Comitatum (at the imperial court) coepit memoria celebrari mense Sept. d. xxvi. That Cyril continued to regard the condemnation of Chrysostom as a righteous measure is shown by his epistola ad Acacium (ap. ¹⁶ Extracts from Nestor's discourses, in the Greek original, are given in the Actis Syn. Ephesin. b. Mansi, iv. 1197. Nestori sermones in a Latin version, ap. Marius Mercator (ed. Baluz. p. 53 ss). From the first address: θεοτόκος i. e. puerpera Dei s. genitrix Dei Maria, an autem ἀνθρωποτόκος i. e. hominis genitrix? Habet matrem Deus? Ergo excusabilis gentilitas matres diis subintroducens. Paulus ergo mendax de Christi deitate dicens ἀπαύρις, ἀμήτωρ, ἀνευ γενεαλογίας (Hebr. vii. 3). Non peperit creatura increabilem, sed peperit hominem deitatis instrumentum. Non creavit Deum Verbum Spiritus sanctus—sed Deo verbo templum fabricatus est, quod habitaret, ex virgine (according to Joh. ii. 21). Est, et non est mortuus incarnatus Deus, sed illum, in quo incarnatus est, suscitavit: inclinatus est elevare, quod ruerat, ipse vero non cecidit. Si jacentem elevare volueris, nonne continges corpus corpore, et te ipsum illi conjungendo elisum eriges, atque ita illi conjunctus ipse manes quod eras? Sic et illud incarnationis aestima sacramentum. Propter utentem illud indumentum, quod utitur, colo, propter absconditum adorans quod foris videtur: inseparabilis ab eo, qui oculis paret, est Deus. Divido naturas, sed conjungo reverentiam. Dominicam itaque incarnationem intremiscamus, τὴν θεοδόχον τῇ θεῷ λόγῳ συνθεολογῶμεν μορφῇ i. e. susceptricem Dei formam una ac pari qua Deum Verbum deitatis ratione veneremur, tanquam divinitatis vere inseparabilis simulacrum, tanquam imaginem absconditi judicis. Duplicem confiteamur, et adoremus ut unum: duplum enim naturarum unum est propter unitatem. Sermo iii (ib. p. 71): Ego natum et mortuum Deum et sepultum adorare non queo. Qui natus est et per partes incrementorum temporibus eguit, place between them.¹⁶ Cyril resolved to make a bishop of Constantinople once more feel the superior weight of Alexandria. By misrepresenting the doctrines of Nestor to Caelestine, bishop of Rome,¹⁷ he created the prejudice among the westerns, or at et mensibus legitimis portatus in ventre est, hic humanam habet naturam, sed Deo sane conjunctam. Aliud est autem dicere, quia nato de Maria conjunctus erat Deus ille, qui est Verbum patris caet. Comp. the extracts in the Actis Syn. Eph. p. 1197: "Ὅταν οὖν ἡ θεία γραφή μὴ λέγει ἢ γέννησεν τοῦ Χριστοῦ τὴν ἐκ Μαρίας τῆς παρθένου, ἢ θάνατον, οὐδαμοῦ φαίνεται τιθεῖσα τὸ θεός, ἀλλ' ἢ Χριστός, ἢ υἱός, ἢ κύριος. τὸ προελθεῖν τὸν θεὸν λόγον ἐκ τῆς χριστοτόκου παραθέτου, παρὰ τῆς θείας ἐκδέχου γραφῆς· τὸ δὲ γεννηθῆναι θεὸν ἐξ αὐτῆς, οὐδαμοῦ ἐκδέχου." ἔκδοξος.

In this last we read: *Ἡ Νεστορίου πίστις, μᾶλλον δὲ κακοδοξία, ταύτην ἔχει τὴν δύναμιν· φησὶν ὅτι ὁ θεὸς λόγος προγενεῶς, ὅτι ὁ ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας παρθένου γεννώμενος ἅγιος ἔσται καὶ μέγας, εἰς τοῦτ' ἐξελέξατο αὐτὸν, καὶ παρεσκεύασε μὲν γεννηθῆναι διχα ἀνδρὸς ἐκ τῆς παρθένου, ἐχαρίσατο δὲ αὐτῷ τὸ καλεῖσθαι τοῖς αὐτοῦ ὀνόμασιν, καὶ ἡγεῖρεν αὐτόν. Ὡστε κἂν ἐνανθρωπήσας λέγεται ὁ μονογενὴς τοῦ θεοῦ λόγος, ὅτι συνῆν αὐτῷ, ὡς ἀνθρώπῳ ἁγίῳ τῷ ἐκ τῆς παρθένου, διὰ τοῦτο λέγεται ἐνανθρωπήσας. Ὡς περ δὲ συνῆν τοῖς προφήταις, οὕτως, φησὶ, καὶ τούτῳ κατὰ μέγιστον συνάφειαν. Διὰ τοῦτο φεύγει πανταχοῦ τὸ λέγειν τὴν ἔκδοξιν, ἀλλ' ὀνομάζει συνάφειαν, ὥστε ἔστω δις ἕκδοξος, καὶ ὡς ἐν λέγῃ πρὸς Ἰησοῦν, ὅτι καθ' ὡς ἦν μετὰ Μωϋσῆ, οὕτως ἔσομαι μετὰ σοῦ (JOS. i. 5). Κρύπτων δὲ τὴν ἀσέβειαν λέγει, ὅτι ἐκ μητρὸς συνῆν αὐτῷ. Διὰ τοῦτο οὐτε θεὸν ἀληθινὸν αὐτὸς εἶναι λέγει, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐν εὐδοκίᾳ τοῦ θεοῦ κεκλημένον οὕτως. κἂν κύριος ὠνομάσθῃ, οὕτως πάλιν αὐτὸν βούλεται κύριον, ὡς τοῦ θεοῦ λόγου χαρισαμένου αὐτῷ τὸ καλεῖσθαι καὶ οὕτως. Μὴ φησὶν, ὅτι, ὥστε λέγομεν, ἀποθανεῖν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ ἀναστῆναι. ὁ ἀνθρωπὸς ἀπέθανε, καὶ ὁ ἀνθρώπος ἀνέστη, καὶ οὐδὲν τοῦτο πρὸς τὸν τοῦ θεοῦ λόγον, —καὶ ἐν τοῖς μυστηρίοις σῶμά ἐστιν ἀνθρώπου τὸ προκείμενον· ἡμεῖς δὲ πιστεύομεν, ὅτι τοῦ λόγου ἐστὶ σὰρξ ζωοποιεῖν ἰσχύουσα διὰ τοῦτο, ὅτι τοῦ τὰ πάντα ζωοποιούτου λόγου γέγονε σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα. Nestor replies to this (Synodicon, c. vi. Mansi, v. 762): *Ille vero (Cyrillus), omittens mihi per epistolam declarare, si quid ei tamquam blasphemum vel impium videbatur debere notari, convictionum terrore permotus, et adjutrices ob hoc perturbationes exquirens, ad Romanum Caelestinum convertitur, quippe ut ad simpliciorum, quam qui posset vim dogmatis subtilius penetrare. Et ad haec inveniens viri illius simplicitatem, circumfert pueriliter aures ejus illi omnibus literarum, olim quidem nostra conscripta transmittens, quasi ad least strengthened it, that Nestorianism was only an offshoot of Pelagianism,¹⁸ which at once sealed Nestor's fate in the west. In vain did Nestor represent to Caelestine that he rejected the expression θεοῦ γενεῶν only in its false acceptation.¹⁹ He was dedemonstrationem convictionum, quibus contradici non posset, tanquam ego Christum purum hominem definirem: qui certe legem inter ipse meae ordinationis initia contra eos, qui Christum purum hominem dicunt, et contra reliquas haereseos innovavi (Cod. Theod. xvi. v. 65). Excerptiones vero intertexens sermonum conscripta composuit, ne societatis compactione detegeretur illata calumnia, et quaedam quidem allocutionibus nostris adjiciens, aliquorum vero partes abrumpens, et illa contexens, quae a nobis de dominica humanatione sunt dicta, velut de puro ea homine dixerimus, &c.

¹⁸ In the year 430 Cassian wrote, desired by the Romish archdeacon (subsequently bishop) Leo, his libb. vii. de incarn. Christi adv. Nestorium (cf. Wiggers de Jo. Cassiano, p. 28 s.), although it is probable he was acquainted with Nestor's heresy merely from that Egyptian description of it. Lib. i. c. 3, he says of a new heresy which had broken out at Bellay (Beligarum urbe), to which, according to chap. iv., Leporius also belonged: peculiare re proprium supradictae illius haereseos, quae ex Pelagiano errore descenderat, fuit, quod dicentes quidam, solitarium hominem Jesum Christum sine ulla peccati contagione vixisse, eo progressi sunt, ut assererent, homines, si velint, sine peccato esse posse. Consequens enim existimabant, ut si homo solitarius Jesus Christus sine peccato fuisset, omnes quoque homines sine Dei adiutorio esse possint, quicquid ille homo solitarius sine consortio Dei esse potuisset.—Unde advertit novus nunc jam, non novae haereseos auctor, qui Dominum Salvatoremque nostrum solitarium hominem natum esse contendit, idem se omnino dicere, quod Pelagianistae ante dixerunt: et consequens errori suo esse, ut qui utique sine peccato solitarium hominem Jesum Christum vixisse asserit, omnes quoque per se homines sine peccato posse esse blasphemet.—Nec dubium, id est, re ipsa penitus declarante. Hinc enim illud est, quod intercessionibus suis Pelagianistarum querelas fovet, et scriptis suis causas illorum asserit, quod subtiliter his, vel, ut verius dixerim, subdole patrocinatur, et consanguineae sibi improbitati improbo suffragatur affectu, &c. Comp. § 87, note 41. Hence Lib. v. c. 1, haeresim illam Pelagianae haereseos disciplulam atque imitricem, and c. 2, to Nestor: Ergo vides, Pelagianum te virus vomere, Pelagiano te spiritu sibilare. In like manner Prosper's epitaphium Nestoriani et Pelagiani:—

Nestoriana lues successit Pelagianae,
Quae tamen est utero progenata meo.
Infelix miserae genitrix et filia natae,
Prodivi ex ipso germine, quod peperit, &c.

phemment Deum Verbum Patri homousion, tamquam originis initium de Christoloco virgine sumsisset, et cum templo suo aedificatus esset, et carni consepultus. Carnem dicunt post resurrectionem suam non mansisse carnem, sed in naturam transisse deitatis.—Si quis autem hoc nomen Theotocon propter natam humanitatem conjunctam Deo Verbo, non propter parientem proponet; dicimus quidem hoc vocabulum in ea, quae peperit, non esse conveniens (opertet enim veram matrem de eadem esse essentia ac ex se natum): ferri tamen potest hoc vocabulum—eo quod solum nominetur de virgine hoc verbum propter inseparabile templum Dei Verbi ex ipsa (natum), non quia ipsa mater sit Verbi Dei: nemo enim antiquiorem se parit. From epist. iii.: Ego autem ad hanc quidem vocem, quae est θεοτόκος, nisi secundum Apollinaris et Arii furorem ad confusionem naturarum proferatur, volentibus dicere non resisto: nec tamen ambigo, quin haec vox θεοτόκος illi voci cedat, quae est χριστοτόκος, tamquam prolatae ab Angelis et Evangelistiis.—Placuit vero, Deo adjuvante etiam synodum inexcusabiliter totius orbis terrarum indicare propter inquisitionem aliarum rerum ecclesiasticarum: nam dubitatione verborum non aestimo habituram inquisitionem difficultates, nec impedimentum esse ad tractatum divinitatis Domini Christi.

Cyril's own doctrine is most apparent from his second letter to the Succensus (opp. v. iii. 141). The Logos became a perfect man, but continued notwithstanding unaltered, one and the same. The two natures must be distinguished only κατὰ μόνην τὴν θεωρίαν. P. 145: ἔστω δὲ ἡμῶν εἰς παράδειγμα ὁ καθ' ἡμᾶς ἄνθρωπος. δύο μὲν γὰρ ἐπ' αὐτοῦ νοοῦμεν τὰς φύσεις, μίαν μὲν τῆς ψυχῆς, ἑτέραν δὲ τοῦ σώματος· ἀλλ' ἐν ψυχαῖς διελθόντες ἐννοοῖταις—οὐκ ἀπὸ μέρους τίθεμεν τὰς φύσεις—ἀλλ' ἐνὸς εἶναι νοοῦμεν· ὥστε τὰς δύο μηκέτι μὲν εἶναι δύο, δι' ἀμφὸν δὲ τὸ ἐν ἀποτελεῖσθαι ἓξον. ²⁶ Lib. i. ep. 310 (Latin in the Synodicon, l. c.): Προσπάθεια μὲν οὐκ ἀξιοδοκεῖ, ἀντιπάθεια δὲ ὅλως οὐχ ὀρεῖ. εἰ τοίνυν ἐκατέρως λήμης βοῦλει καθαρεῖσθαι, μὴ βίβλας ἀποφάσεις ἐκβίβαζε, ἀλλὰ κρίσει δικαίᾳ τὰς αἰτίας ἐπιτρέψας. Πολλοὶ γὰρ σε κυμῶδοσι τῶν συνευλογημένων εἰς Ἐφεσον, ὡς οὐκ εἰαν ἀμυνόμενον ἔχθραν, ἀλλ' οὐ τὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ὀρθοδόξως ζητοῦντα. ἀδελφίδοσι ἐστὶ, φασί, Θεοφίλου, μιμημένον ἐκείνου τὴν γνῶμην· ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐκείνου μαρίαν σαφῇ κατεσκεύασε τοῦ θεοφόρου καὶ θεοφίλου Ἰωάννου, οὕτως ἐπιθυμῶ καυχῆσθαι καὶ οὗτος, εἰ καὶ πολὺ τῶν κρυομένων ἐστὶ τὸ διάφορον. Cf. lib. i. ep. 370. Concerning Isidore's own doctrine, see Niemeyer, l. c. p. 173 ss. 22 s. Vater in the kirchenhist. Archiv. 1825, 8. 248 ff.

John at their head, and deposed Cyril and his principal assistant Memnon bishop of Ephesus. The weak Theodosius had been incensed at Cyril till now, but the latter not only contrived to bring over to his side the impetuous monks at Constantinople,²⁸ but also to make many friends at court by bribes and other artifices. The emperor at first confirmed the three depositions; but was afterwards prevailed on to re-instate Cyril and Memnon in their offices. Nestor, on the other hand, was obliged to withdraw into his former cloister at Antioch.

The consequence of these measures was a division between the east and the other provinces, especially Egypt. The Orientals, however, were not sufficiently united to withstand their opponents, backed as the latter were by the court. Rabulas, bishop of Edessa, went over to Cyril's party, and even began to show his zeal both by attacking the writings of Theodore of Mopsuestia, so much valued in the east, and the proper sources of Nestor's error. Even John made peace with Cyril (433). The latter accommodated those of Nestorius, and condemned without express notification of their doctrine. See Mansi, iv. 1320, 1328, 1334, 1338, 1472, 1474.

²⁸ From the epistle of Epiphanius, archdeacon of Cyrril, to Maximinian the new bishop of Constantinople (Mansi, v. 987, Theodoret opp. ed. Schulze, v. 869,) it is clear that many presents were sent from Alexandria (εὐλογίαι) to the empress, her ladies and influential courtiers. Clerici, qui hic sunt, contristantur, quod ecclesia Alexandrina nūlata sit: hujus causa turbelae, et debet praeter illa, quae hinc transmissa sunt, Ammonio Comiti auri libras mille quingentas.

Many Egyptians were dissatisfied with this formula, Liberatus breviar. c. 8, culpaverunt Cyrrillum, cur susceperit ab orientalibus Episcopis duarum confessionem naturarum, quod Nestorius dixit et docuit. Isidori, lib. i. ep. 324, ad Cyrillum, because the latter has been taken into the Synodicon (Mansi, v. 759): Χρή σε, θαυμάσιε, ἀρεπτων μένεν εἶναι, ὅστε φόβῳ προδιδόντα τὰ οὐράνια, ὅστε σαυτῷ ἐναντίον φαινώμενον. εἰ γὰρ τὰ νῦν γεγραμμένα σοι τοῖς προτέροις ἀντεξετάσεις, ἡ κολακείας φανήσῃ ὑπεύθυνος, εὐχερέας ἢ διδάσκος, κενῆς μὲν δόξης ἡττώμενος, τῶν μεγάλων δὲ ἀγίων ἀδελφῶν τοὺς ἀγῶνας οὐ μιμησάμενος, οἱ τὸν ἅπαντα βίον ἐκ' ἀλλοτρίας κακουργεῖσθαι ὑπέμειναν, ἡ κακόδοξον φρόνημα καὶ μέχρι θῶν εἰσδεδεσθαι. Against such charges Cyril defends himself at greatest length in the epist. ad Acacium Episc. Melitenae (opp. v. iii. 105. Mansi, v. 310): besides in epist. ad Eulogium Presb. Constantinop. (opp. v. iii. 123), ad Rufum Ep. Thessalonic. and ad Maximum Diac. Antioch. (in Maji scriptt. vett. nova coll. viii. ii. 138). In the two latter he confesses he had accommodated himself to the prevailing notions. The orientals accordingly perceived in the adoption of that confession of faith a retraction on the part of Cyril. See Ibae epist. ad Marin in Actis Conc. Chalc. act. x. Mansi, vii. 247, especially Theodoret, ep. ad Joannem Episc. Antioch. A.D. 433 (ep. 171 in Theod. opp. ed. Schulze, iv. 1354, a complete copy in Latin in Synodico, l. c. v. 747): *Ἐν κοινῇ ἀναγνόντες τὰ ἀλύττητα γράμματα, καὶ ἐξετάσαντες αὐτῶν ἀκριβῶς τὴν διάνοιαν, εὖρομεν σύμφωνα τοῖς εἰρημένοις (ὕψ' ἡμῶν) τὰ ἐκείθεν ἀπεσταλμένα, καὶ ἄντικρυς ἐναντία τοῖς δώδεκα κεφαλαίοις, οἱς μέχρι τοῦ παρόντος, ὡς ἀλλοτρίοις τῆς εὐσεβείας, πολεμοῦντες διετελέσαμεν. Altera vero diffamata sunt quaedam, quae nos nimium turbaverunt. Dicunt enim, quod is, qui hic poenitudine usus sit, non solum dejectionis s. damnationis subscriptionem a vestra Sanctitate nitatur exigere, sed anathematismum quoque doctrinae sanctissimi et Deo amicissimi episcopi Nestorii. Quodsi id verum est—simile aliquid facit, tanquam si quis vix tandem perductus ad consubstantialem Deo et Patri Filium confitendum, mox iterum anathemate feriat eos, qui hoc a principio sapuerunt atque docuerunt, &c. Cyril himself says, Cyrilus ad Acacium, ap. Mansi, v. 314, 315, that even the Nestorians considered that confession as consonant with their faith. It is certain that Alexander, bishop of Hierapolis, the most violent opponent of Cyril, was also against that confession, because it had adopted the expression θεοτόκος (ep. ad Theodoret, ap. Mansi, v. 878. Schulze, v. 750: quia hoc est quasi arx totius ejus haereseos); but he does not reject it absolutely, but merely expresses his disapprobation of the doctrinal use of it under existing circumstances (Mansi, v. 875. Schulze, v. 746: post corruptionem totius orbis, et ex quo praedicari nunc coepit passibilis Deus ab impiis Cyrilli capitulis, dogmatice poni solam vocem—theotocon, absque illa—anthropotocon, nihil est aliud, nisi ea quae Cyrilli sunt praedicari). Even the latter Monophysites accused Cyril of apostatising from his doctrine. See Timothei Aeluri fragm. ap. Mansi, vii.*

tunate Nestor, who had never asserted aught inconsistent with that very confession of faith now signed by Cyril, was first banished to Oasis; then in Thebais was dragged from one place of banishment to another, till his death in 440.³⁰ To justify his condemnation, his contemporaries were obliged to misrepresent his doctrinal system,³¹ and it was so handed down to posterity, till men of more enlarged and clearer views discovered the truth.³²

The Syrian bishops were now compelled to assent to the peace concluded between John and Cyril. The greatest opposition was made by the theological school in Edessa, which had long been the place of education for the Persian clergy, when Rabulas prohibited the writings of Diodorus and Theodore. Several of the teachers were interdicted, and betook themselves to Persia. One of them, Barsumas (Barsauma) was bishop of Nisibis (435—489), and confirmed the Persian Christians in their attachment to the doctrinal system of Theodore, and their aversion to the council of Cyril at Ephesus. The successor of Rabulas in Edessa, Ibas (bishop from 436 to 457), was indeed, 841, and Maji coll. nov. vii. 1, 138, which fragment, if not belonging to Timothy (as Walch, Ketzehist. vi. 682 shows), proceeded at least from a Monophysite. Hence when Vater (kirchenhist. Archiv. 1825, ii. 211) and Baur (Dreieinigkeith, i. 786) deny the inconsistency of Cyril, they have at least the universal voice of that period against them.

(Quesm. 135, Baller. 165): Anathematizetur ergo Nestorius, qui beatam virginem Mariam non Dei, sed hominis tantummodo creditit genitricem, ut aliam personam carnis faceret, aliam deitatis: nec unum Christum in Verbo Dei et carne sentiret, sed separatim atque se junctim alterum filium Dei, alterum hominis praedicaret. Still more misrepresented in the appendix to Augustin. de haeresibus, c. 91: Nestoriani a Nestorio episcopo, qui contra catholicam fidem dogmatizare ausus est, Dominum nostrum J. C. hominem tantum: nec id, quod mediator Dei et hominum effectum est, in utero virginis de Spiritu S. fuisse conceptum, sed postea Deum homini fuisse permixtum, &c. Such were the sources from which the middle ages drew their ideas of Nestorianism.

Maraccius, and others) reckoned it to be a mere dispute of words. So also P. E. Jablonski de Nestorianismo. Berol. 1724, 8. and Chr. A. though at peace with Cyril, a zealous friend of the views of the Antiochian school, and even translated Theodore's works into Syriac; but persecution was afterwards renewed against the adherents of these principles; the school of Edessa was destroyed (489); and its few remaining friends fled into Persia. The Persian church had now broken off all connection with the church of the Roman empire, and the kings of Persia, from Pherozes onward (461—488), favoured this separation for political reasons. These Christians, who had the bishop of Seleucia and Ctesiphon, were called by their opponents Nestorians, though they called themselves Chaldaean Christians, and in India Thomas-Christians. They have not only diffused themselves extensively in Asia, but have also acquired great merit by conveying much of the learning of Greece into that part of the world, as well as by founding schools and hospitals. At a later period they became the instructors of the Arabians.³³

Alioquin quomodo factus est homo, nisi quia corpus portavit humanum? Advertentes igitur, ut dixi, inhumanationis modum, videmus, quia duas naturae ad invicem convenerunt unione indissurpibili, inconfuse atque inconvertibiliter. Et ex duabus naturis factum fuisse dicentes, veruntamen post unionem non dividimus naturas ab invicem, nec in duos incidimus Christum, sed unum asserimus filium, et ut patres dixerunt, unam naturam verbi incarnatam. Ergo factus est homo, non hominem recepit, ut videtur Nestorio. Eranistes in Theodoretii, dial. ii. (ed. Schulze, iv. 83) says: τὸ δὲ γε ἄνθρωπον ἀποκαλεῖν τῆς οἰκουμένης τὸν σωτήρα, συγκρῖναι ἐστὶ τοῦ θεοπύτου τῆς δόξης. p. 106 and 114: ὁ δὲ λέγων φύσεις δύο λέγει υἱοῦς. p. 114: Ἐγὼ τὴν θεότητα λέγω μεμενηκέναι, καταποθῆναι δὲ ἐπὶ ταύτης τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα, ὡς ἡ θάλασσα μέλιτος προσλαβοῦσα σταγόνα. On the other hand, a zealous adherent of Cyril, the old Archimandrite (abbot) Eutyches, in Constantinople⁵, was accused of holding these very doctrines, and condemned at a σύνδοσις ἐκδημούσα by his bishop Flavian (448).⁶ Leo, bishop of Rome, not only

⁶ The acts of this synod are in the acts of the council of Chalcedon actio i. ap. Mansi, vi. 649 ss. Eutyches complains, p. 700, that he has been accused of saying, ὅτι γε δι' ἐξ οὐρανοῦ τὴν σάρκα ὁ θεὸς λόγος κατετήρατο, ὡς αὐτὸς ἀνέθετος τυγχάνει τῆς τοιαύτης λαιδορίας. To the question, p. 741: Ὁμολογεῖς ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, καὶ ὁμοούσιον τῇ μητρὶ κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα τὸν αὐτὸν ἕνα υἱὸν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν. He answers: Ἐπειδὴ ὁμολογῶ θεόν μου, καὶ κύριον οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς, ἔως σήμερον φυσιολογεῖν ἑμαυτῷ οὐκ ἐπιτρέπω. ὁμοούσιον δὲ ἡμῖν ἔως νῦν οὐκ εἶπον πρὸ τούτου, ὁμολογῶ. ἔως σήμερον οὐκ εἶπον τὸ σῶμα τοῦ κυρίου καὶ θεοῦ ἡμῶν ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν, τὴν δὲ ἀγίαν παρθένον ὁμολογῶ εἶναι ἡμῖν ὁμοούσιον, καὶ ὅτι ἐξ αὐτῆς ἐσαρκώθη ὁ θεὸς ἡμῶν. When the remark was made upon this: τῆς μητρὸς ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν οὐκ εἶπες, πάντως καὶ ὁ υἱὸς ὁμοούσιος ἡμῖν ἔστιν, he rejoined: ἔως σήμερον οὐκ εἶπον· ἐπειδὴ γὰρ σῶμα θεοῦ αὐτὸ ὁμολογῶ, (προσέσχες;) οὐκ εἶπον σῶμα ἀνθρώπου τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ σῶμα, ἀνθρώπων δὲ τὸ σῶμα, καὶ ὅτι ἐκ τῆς παρθένου ἐσαρκώθη ὁ κύριος. εἰ δὲ δεῖ εἰπεῖν ἐκ τῆς παρθένου, καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν, καὶ τοῦτο λέγω, κύριε. To the question, p. 744: Ὁμοούσιον, καὶ ἐκ δύο φύσεων μετὰ τὴν ἐνανθρώπησιν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν τὸν ἐκ τῆς παρθένου λέγεις ἢ οὐ; he gave the reply in explanation: Ὁμολογῶ ἐκ δύο φύσεων γεγενῆσθαι τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν πρὸ τῆς ἐνώσεως· μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἔνωσιν, μίαν φύσιν ὁμολογῶ. When he refused to acknowledge the two natures, and to anathematise the contrary opinion, the decision was passed, p. 748: Διὰ πάντων πεφύραται Ἐὐτυχὴς ὁ πάλαι πρεσβύτερος καὶ ἀρχιμανδρίτης—τὴν Οὐλαστίνου καὶ Ἀπολιταρίου κακοδοξίαν ροῶν. ὅθεν ἐπίδακρυσαντες, καὶ στενάζοντες ἐπὶ τῇ πτωλείᾳ αὐτοῦ, ὥρισamen διὰ τοῦ κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τοῦ ὑπ' αὐτοῦ βλασφημηθέντος, ἀλλότριον αὐτὸν εἶναι παντὸς λερατικοῦ τάγματος, καὶ τῆς πρὸς ἡμᾶς κοινωρίας, καὶ τοῦ προσετάναι μοναστηρίου. Comp. epist. Eutychetis ad Leonem Papam (in the Synodicon, ap. Mansi, v. 1015. Schulze, v. 897): *expetebat duas naturas fateri, et anathematizare eos, qui hoc negarent. Mansi, v. 1359: Fecunditatem virgini Spiritus S. dedit, veritas autem corporis sumta de corpore est; et aedificante sibi sapientia domum (Prov. ix. 1), Verbum caro factum est, et habitavit in nobis: hoc est, in ea carne, quam assumpsit ex homine, et quam spiritu vitae rationalis animavit. C. 3: Salva igitur proprietate utriusque naturae et substantiae, et in unam coeunte personam, suscepta est a maiestate humilitas, a virtute infirmitas, ab aeternitate mortalitas: et ad resolvendum conditionis nostrae debitum natura inviolabilis naturae est unita passibili: ut, quod nostris remediis congruebat, unus atque idem mediator Dei et hominum, homo Jesus Christus, et mori posset ex uno, et mori non posset ex altero. In integra ergo veri hominis perfectaue natura verus natus est Deus, totus in suis, totus in nostris. Assumpsit formam servi sine sorde peccati, humana augens, divina non minuens. Tenet enim sine defectu proprietatem suam utraque natura: et sicut formam servi Dei forma non adimit, ita formam Dei servi forma non minuit. C. 4: Nova autem nativitate generatus: quia inviolata virginitas, quae concupiscentiam nescivit, carnis materiam ministravit. Assumpta est de matre Domini natura, non culpa: nec in Domino Jesu Christo, ex utero virginis genito, quia nativitas est mirabilis, ideo nostri est natura dissimilis. Qui enim verus est Deus, idem verus est homo: et nullum est in hac unitate mendacium, dum invicem sunt et humilitas hominis et altitudo Deitatis. Sicut enim Deus non mutatur miseratione, ita homo non consumitur dignitate. Agit enim utraque forma cum alterius communione quod proprium est: Verbo scilicet operante, quod Verbi est, et carne exequente quod carnis est. Unum horum coruscant miraculis, aliud succumbit injuriis. Et sicut Verbum ab aequalitate paternae gloriae non recedit, ita caro naturam nostri generis non relinquit. Unus enim idemque est, quod saepe dicendum est, vere Dei filius et vere hominis filius. Quem itaque sicut hominem diabolica tentat astutia, eidem sicut Deo angelica famulantur officia. Esurire, sitire, lassescere, atque dormire evidentur humanum est. Sed v. panibus v. milia hominum satiare, et largiri Samaritanæ aquam vivam, cujus haustus bibenti praestet, ne ultra jam sitiât; supra dorsum maris plantis non desidentibus ambulare, et elationes fluctuum increpata tempestate consternere: sine ambiguitate divinum est. Sicut ergo, ut multa praeteream, non ejusdem naturae est, flere miserationis affectu amicum mortuum, et eundem remoto quatridentianae aggere sepulchrae, ad vocis imperium excitare redivivum: ita non ejusdem naturae est, dicere: Ego et Pater unum sumus (Jo. x. 30) et dicere: Pater major me est (Jo. xiv. 28). gave also a doctrinal development of the disputed point, which was by no means favourable to the Egyptians. It is true that Dioscurus now procured the summoning of a general synod at Ephesus (449) and there, as president, compelled, by violent measures, the bishops to pronounce in favour of Eutyches and the Egyptian doctrines (σύνοδος ληστροική, Theophanis Chronograph. p. 86.—Latrocinium Ephesinum, Leo ad Pulcheriam, ep. 75, ed. Quesnel);⁸ but the death of Theodosius II. († 450) altered at once the state of affairs. The new rulers Pulcheria, and Marcian, who was elevated to the throne by marrying her, were as partial to Leo as they were hostile to Dioscurus.⁹ Hence a new general council was held at Chalcedon (451), at which Dioscurus was deposed for many misdeeds, the persecuted eastern bishops, and with them Cyril too,¹⁰ for the purpose of sparing the Egyptians, were declared orthodox, Leo's epist. ad Flavianum made the rule of faith on the point in dispute, and at the same time a more minute explanation of it given on the part of the council.¹¹ But though the decrees of the synod received imperial

¹⁰ How little convinced the prevailing party was of Cyril's orthodoxy is clear from the fact that Gennadius, patriarch of Constantinople after 458, wrote against his 12 anathemas. See Facundus pro defens. iii. capitulum, ii. 4. Salig de Eutychianismo ante Eutychen, p. 316.

OF THE THEOLOGICAL AUTHORITY OF THE OECUMENICAL SYNODS.

In this period the utterances of the oecumenical councils,¹ as the latest and highest ecclesiastical decisions, began to assume an important place among the sources of theological knowledge. As all synods were supposed to be under the peculiar direction of the Holy Spirit prior to the present time, without on that account claiming infallibility,² so also the doctrinal decisions of general councils were derived from a peculiar co-operation of the Holy Spirit,³ but so far were men as yet from attributing to them an exclusive infallibility dependent on their external conditions, αὐτὸς ἡμᾶς ὁ κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς ἐξεπαίδευσε, καὶ τὸ τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν παραδέδωκε σύμβολον. That the true reading must be ἐν δύο φύσεσι (as all the Latins have, in duabus naturis) is shown by Mansi, vii. 775, Walch. bibl. symb. vetus, p. 106, to which we have also to add the testimonies of the Monophysite Severus Patr. Ant. (ap. Mansi, vii. 840), Evagrius, h. e. ii. c. 4. Leontius Bys. de sectis. Actio v. c. 7. Agathonis P. ep. ad Constantem, ii. (in the Act. Conc. oecum. vi. Act. 4, ap. Mansi, xi. 256). Baur, Dreieinigkeit, i. 820, defends the reading ἐκ δ. φ.

² According to Acts xv. 28. Conc. Carthag. ann. 252, (in opp. Cypriani): Placuit nobis sancto Spiritu suggerente et Domino per visiones multas et manifestas admonente. To what an extent this form of speech proceeded may be seen in Concil. Ephes. ann. 431, above § 88, note 27. But in a similar formula spake also a partial council at Constantinople, which condemned Eutyches. See above, § 89, note 6.

In Socrates, i. c. 9, this passage has been altered. Augustinus de baptismo contra Donatistas, ii. 3 : Quis autem nesciat, sanctam scripturam canonicam—omnibus posterioribus Episcoporum literis ita praeponi, ut de illa omnino dubitari et disceptari non possit, utrum verum vel utrum rectum sit, quidquid in ea scriptum esse constiterit : Episcoporum autem literas—per sermonem forte sapientiorum,—et per aliorum Episcoporum graviorem auctoritatem,—et per concilia licere reprehendi, si quid in eis forte a veritate deviatum est : et ipsa concilia, quae per singulas regiones vel provincias fiunt, plenarium conciliorum auctoritati, quae fiunt ex universo orbe christiano, sine ullis ambagibus cedere : ipsaque plenaria saepe priora posterioribus emendari, quum aliquo experimento rerum aperitur quod clausum erat, et cognoscitur quod latebat, sine ullo typho sacrilegae superbiae, sine ulla inflata cervice arrogantiae, sine ulla contentione lividae invidiae, cum sancta humilitate, cum pace catholica, cum caritate christiana.

⁵ Constantinus epist. ad Episcopos, qui Conc. Nicaeno non interfuerunt (Euseb. de vita Const. iii. 20, and Socrates, i. 9.) says generally : πάν γὰρ, εἰ τι ὅ ἂν ἐν τοῖς ἁγίοις τῶν ἐπισκόπων συνεδρίοις πράττηται, τοῦτο πρὸς τὴν θέαν βούλησιν ἔχει τὴν ἀναφοράν. Thus Athanasius places the Concil. Antiochen. A.D. 269, to which his opponents appealed in defence of their rejection of the term ὁμοούσιον, on an equality with the Nicene in point of theological authority. De Synodis, c. 43 : *συγκρουει μὲν γὰρ τοὺς πρὸς ἐκείνους ἀπρεπές· πάντες γὰρ εἰσι πατέρες· διακρίνει δὲ πάλιν, ὡς οὗτοι μὲν καλῶς, ἐκεῖνοι δὲ τοῦναντίον εἰρήκασι, οὐχ ὄσιον· οἱ πάντες γὰρ ἐκοιμήθησαν ἐν Χριστῷ. ⁶ Augustinus contra Maximinum Arian. ii. 14, 3 : Sed nunc nec ego Nicaenum, nec tu debes Ariminense tamquam praejudicaturus proferre concilium. Nec ego hujus auctoritate, nec tu illius detineris : Scripturarum auctoritatibus, non quorumque propriis, sed utrisque communibus testibus, res cum re, causa cum causa, ratio cum ratione concertet.

GROWING IMPORTANCE OF THE CLERGY.

The Christian emperors enlarged the privileges already granted by Constantine to the church and the clergy (Div. i. § 56, note 30 ff.), by new tokens of their favour. They released church lands and the clergy from certain civil duties,¹ but by no means from all taxes;² gave a legal confirmation to the decisions which the bishops pronounced in ecclesiastical affairs,³ and which they also gave as

¹ Besides the municipal offices (see Div. i. § 56, note 30), both the clergy and church property were freed from the muneribus sordidis and extraordinariis (cf. Cod. Theod. lib. xi. tit. 15, de extraordinariis sive sordidis muneribus, and Gothofredi paratitlon), from the metatis (Cod. Th. l. vii. t. 8, de metatis), the angariis, and parangariis (Cod. Th. l. viii. t. 5, de cursum publicum, angariis et parangariis), and finally the immunity of the clerici negotiantes from the lustralis conlatio (Cod. Th. l. xiii. t. 1, de lustrali conlatione, comp. Hegewisch hist. Versuch über die röm. Finanzen, S. 307 ff.) Comp. besides the works cited, Cod. Theod. l. xvi. ii. 8, 10, &c. Comp. Binghami origg. eccl. vol. ii. p. 227. Planck, i. 289.

² Constantine had indeed at first, in the year 315, also released the church lands from the tributis ordinariis (Cod. Theod. xi. i. 1), but they were soon after again subjected to this tribute, and when the council of Ariminum (A.D. 359) applied to Constantine, ut juga, quae videntur ad Ecclesiam pertinere, a publica functione cessarent, inquietudine desistente, he flatly denied the request, Cod. Theod. xvi. ii. 15. Gratian even subjected the church lands to the extraordinariis collationibus (Cod. Theod. xi. xvi. 15). So also Theodosius, l. c. l. 18. Honorius released them from the extraordinaria, l. c. l. 21, 22. Theodosius ii. subjected them again to the angariis and parangariis. Cod. Justin. i. ii. 11. Comp. Ambrosii orat. de basilicis non tradendis haereticis: Si tributum petit Imperator, non negamus. Agri ecclesiae solvunt tributum. Si agros desiderat Imperator, potestatem habet vindicandorum, nemo nos-trum intervenit, &c. Riffel, i. 153.

chosen umpires in civil disputes ⁴ allowed the clergy to be bound to this arbitration-sentence, ⁵ and even put them in cases of dis-

of Honorius A.D. 399, (Cod. Theod. xvi. xi. 1.): Quotiens de religione agitur, Episcopus convenit judicare, caeteras vero causas, quae ad ordinarios cognitores, vel ad usum publici juris pertinent, legibus oportet audiri.

⁴ Respecting these episcopal arbitration-decisions, comp. Div. i. § 69, note 6. It had been always reckoned unchristian to depart from them, and thus public opinion demanded for them the preference, so that they laid the foundation of an actio rei judicatae. This privilege has been usually ascribed to Constantine, with reference to Eusebius de vita Const. iv. 27: τοὺς τῶν ἐπισκόπων ὄρους τοὺς ἐν συνόδοις ἀποφανδέντας ἐπεσφραγίσετο· ὥς μὴ ἔξεῖναι τοῖς τῶν ἰδῶν ἀρχοῦσι, τὰ δόξαντα παράλινε· παντὶ γὰρ εἶναι δικαστοῦ τοῦς ἱερεῖς τοῦ θεοῦ δοκιματέρον· in which σύνδοσις, according to Conc. Carthag. iv. c. 23, (see Div. i. § 69, note 11) is understood of the presbytery. These arbitrations, however, were not pronounced by the collegia, but by the bishop, and by him sometimes committed to individual presbyters and deacons, by Sylvanus bishop of Troas, even wholly to an honest layman (Socrates, vii. 37); see Bingham, vol. i. p. 130; and thus that passage appears to refer to the decisions and sentences of the provincial synods. Sozomen, i. c. 9, is indeed more distinct: τῶν δὲ Ἐπισκόπων ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὴν κρίσιν ἐπέτρεψε (Κωνσταντῖνος) τοῖς δικαζομένοις, ἣν βούλωνται τοὺς πολιτικούς ἀρχοντας παρατεῖσθαι· κυρίαν δὲ εἶναι τὴν αὐτῶν ψήφον, καὶ κρείττω τῆς τῶν ἄλλων δικαστῶν, ὥσπερ κατὰ τοῦ Βασιλέως ἐξερχέσθαι· εἰς ἔργον δὲ τὰ κρυφόμενα ἀγεῖν τοὺς ἀρχοντας, καὶ τοὺς διακονομένους αὐτοῖς στρατιώτας· ἀμετατρέπτους τε εἶναι τῶν Συνόδων τοὺς ὄρους. Still this seems to be only an amplified interpretation of that passage in Eusebius. The oldest law extant on the subject is A.D. 408, (Cod. Justin. i. iv. 8,) Honor et Theod. AA. Theodoro P. P. Episcopale iudicium ratum sit omnibus, qui se audiri a Sacerdotibus elegerint: eamque illorum iudicationi adhibendam esse reverentiam jubemus, quam vestris deferri necesse est potestatibus, a quibus non licet provocare. Per iudicium quoque Officia, ne sit cassa episcopalis cognitio, definitioni executio tribuatur. cf. Augustin. in Psalm. 25, § 13, (about 415): principes saeculi tantum detulerunt Ecclesiae, ut quidquid in ea iudicatum fuerit, dissolvi non possit. But as a like privilege was granted to the Jewish patriarchs as early as 398 (Cod. Theod. ii. i. 10), we may fairly assume that the Christian bishops also were earlier possessed of it. H. M. Conc. Calced. c. 9 : Εἰ τις κληρικὸς πρὸς κληρικὸν πρᾶγμα ἔχει, μὴ καταλιμπανέτω τὸν οἰκεῖον Ἐπίσκοπον, καὶ ἐπὶ κοσμικὰ δικαστήρια κατατρέχέτω—εἰ δέ τις παρὰ ταῦτα ποιήσει, καρονικοῖς ὑποκελθὼ ἐπιτιμῶις.

⁷ The limits of episcopalis audientia are definitely given by Valentiniani iii. novella de episcopali iudicio, A.D. 452, (ed. Gothofred. nov. Val. tit. xii. ed. Haenell nov. xxxiv.): De episcopali iudicio diversorum saepe causatio est. Ne ulterius querela procedat, necesse est praesenti lege sanciri. Itaque cum inter clericos iurgium vertitur, et ipsis litigatoribus convenit, habeat, Episcopus licentiam iudicandi, praeeunte tamen vinculo compromissi. Quod et laicis, si consentiant, auctoritas nostra permittit. Aliter eos iudices esse non patimur, nisi voluntas iurgantium interposita, sicut dictum est, conditione praecedat : quoniam constat, Episcopos et Presbyteros forum legibus non habere, nec de aliis causis, secundum Arcadii et Honorii divalia constituta, quae Theodosianum corpus ostendit, praeter religionem, posse cognoscere. Sin vero petitor laicus, seu in civili seu criminali causa, cujuslibet loci Clericum adversarium suum, si id magis eligat, per auctoritatem legitimam in publico iudicio respondere compellat. Quam formam etiam circa Episcoporum personam observari oportere censemus. Ut si in huiusmodi ordinis homines actionem pervasionis et atrocium injuriarum dirigi necesse fuerit, per procuratorem solemniter ordinatum apud iudicem publicum inter leges et iura configant, iudicati exitu ad mandatores sine dubio reversuro. Quod iis religionis et sacerdotii veneratione permittimus. Nam notum est, procuratorem in criminalibus negotiis non posse concedi. Sed ut sit ulla discretio meritorum, Episcopis et Presbyteris tantum id oportet impendi. In reliquis negotiis criminalibus juxta legum ordinem per se iudicium subire coguntur.

Arelatense, ann. 314, c. 7: De praesidibus, qui fideles ad praesidatum prosiliunt, placuit ut, cum promoti fuerint, literas accipiant ecclesiasticas communicatorias (Comp. div. i. § 41, note 5): ita tamen, ut in quibuscunque locis gesserint, ab Episcopo ejusdem loci cura de illis agatur, et cum coeperint contra disciplinam agere, tum demum a communione excludantur. Similiter et de his qui rempublicam agere volunt. Gregor. To this Augustine replies, ep. 153, ex. gr. § 3 : Morum corrigendorum nullus alius quam in hac vita locus est.—Ideo compellimur humani generis caritate intervenire pro reis, ne istam vitam sic finiant per supplicium, ut ea finita non possint finire supplicium. On the other side, ecclesiastical possessions became very considerable, partly by the liberality of the emperors,¹³ partly by the legal permission to accept of inheritances and gifts, which, alas, was often abused by the clergy, so as to become legacy-hunting.¹⁴ All these external advantages attracted many to the spiritual profession,¹⁵ the number of clergy was swelled beyond measure, and to the already existing classes were added parabolani, copiatae.¹⁶ The emperors were obliged to meet this pressure, which became dangerous to the state, with stringent laws.¹⁷

Under these circumstances the power of the bishops particularly rose. At the head of a numerous clergy completely subject to them, they alone had power to decide on the appropriation of the church estates,¹⁸ and possessed ecclesiastical legislation by their exclusive privilege of having a voice at synods. Hence they continued to make the country bishops more subservient to them;¹⁹ to the other bishops in cities and in the country, (ecclesia ple-

¹⁵ In a one-sided way Athanasius, hist. Arian. ad Monachos, c. 78, designates only the Meletian clergy as οἱ μὲν ἐκ εἰδώλων ἐλθόντες, οἱ δὲ ἐκ τοῦ βουλευτηρίου, καὶ τῆς πρώτης πολιτείας, διὰ τὴν ταλαιπωροῦν ἀλειτουργήσιαν καὶ προστασίαν. Basilus, ep. 54, blames his country bishops on account of their subservience to men, τῶν πλείστων φόβῳ τῆς στρατολογίας ἐσπένδοντων ἑαυτοὺς τῇ ὑπερησίᾳ.

bana, titulus), except the head church (eccl. cathedralis) they sent according to their own free choice, presbyters (parochus, plebanus),²⁰ to conduct the worship of God, who were entirely dependent on them even in the matter of maintenance. The first person next to the bishop was the archdeacon,²¹ who helped him to manage the revenues. The arch-presbyters,²² an order which arose about the same time, were of far inferior rank. All the lower clergy, and the presbyters too, were now chosen by the bishop alone. The choice of bishops mostly depended on the other bishops of the provinces, except when the emperors interfered. Still, however, the consent of the people was required, and was not without weight, especially in the west.²³

Under these external advantages, it is not surprising that the prevailing notions of priestly dignity, and especially of the bishops' authority rose higher and higher; and that the bishops externally enjoyed the highest demonstrations of respect, their claims as the vicars of Christ and the successors of the apostles being capable of indefinite development.²⁴ Yet their overweening pride often gave just cause for complaint.²⁵

Laodiceni (between 320 and 372) Can. 57 : ὅτι οὐ δεῖ ἐν ταῖς κώμαις, καὶ ἐν ταῖς χώραις καθίστασθαι ἐπισκοπούς, ἢ ἀλλὰ περιοικητάς· τοὺς μὲντοι ἤδη προκατασταθέντας μηδὲν πράττειν ἄνευ γνώμης τοῦ ἐπισκόπου τοῦ ἐν τῇ πόλει. ὡσαύτως δὲ καὶ τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους μηδὲν πράττειν ἄνευ τῆς γνώμης τοῦ ἐπισκόπου. Probably it was not meant by this canon to do away with the existing country bishops, but only to prevent the establishment of new bishoprics. Accordingly, we find frequent mention of country bishops long after. Basil the Great had 50 in his diocese (Gregor. Naz. de vita sua, p. 8), Theodoret, ep. 113, names two of his suburbans, &c.

Notwithstanding these outward honours enjoyed by the hierarchy, they could the less escape from a dependence on the state in many ways,¹ as they presented a vulnerable side to it by their inheriting property; and as the government of the Ro-

Naz. above note 8,) but was now also outwardly manifested in the conduct. Standing titles of the bishops were Dominus beatissimus (Comp. Marks of reverence which were paid them even by emperors were the ὑποαλείπειν κεφαλῆν and καταφθεῖν τὰς χεῖρας. See Bingham, vol. i. p. 184. When Eusebia, spouse of the emperor Constantius, did not observe such things in receiving the salutations of the bishops, the Eusebian bishop of Tripolis, Leontius, declared to her (Philostorgius ap Suidam s. v. Λεόντιος), that he would appear before her only under the following conditions: *ἵν' εἰσελθοῖμι μὲν ἐγὼ, σὺ δ' αὐτίκα τοῦ θρόνου τοῦ ὑψηλοῦ κατὰβασα, μετ' αἰδοῦναι ὑπαυγήςσεαι ἐμοί, καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν ὑπόσχῃς ταῖς ἐμαῖς χερσίν, εὐλογίῶν ἀξιουμένην· κἀπειτα καθεσθῇην μὲν ἂν ἐγὼ, σὺ δ' ἂν ἐσθῆκαις αἰδομένη, ὁπότεα δὲ κελεύσαιμι, καθεδουμένη, ἥρκα δόην τὸ σύνθημα. ² Faustinus and Marcellinus, l. c. p. 654, respecting the bishops who

man emperors, since the removal of their residence to the east, began to assume an oriental, despotic character.³

The first occasion of interference in ecclesiastical matters was offered by the hierarchy itself when involved in an uninterrupted series of controversies.⁴ The emperors wished, and were also according to the desire of the hierarchy, to tolerate only the catholic church;⁵ but as this name was claimed exclusively by so many parties, the emperors were obliged to decide to which it belonged, and what doctrines accordingly should be considered the catholic doctrine.⁶ To this end they summoned councils, allowing them to consult under the superintendence of their commissioners;⁷ and then give imperial confirmation to their

Besides these great party questions, individuals among the clergy had also many particular cases in which the interference of the emperors was solicited, although councils soon forbade such supplications to the emperor.¹² The clergy indeed endea-

The later emperors seriously laid claim to the priestly dignity by virtue of their being anointed. Thus the abbot Maximus in Constantinople 655 is asked (Mansi, xi. 6): Ergo non est omnis christianus Imperator etiam sacerdos? to which indeed he replies Non est. Leo the Isaurian, about 730, writes to Pope Gregory II. (Mansi, xii. 976): βασιλεὺς καὶ λερεὺς εἰμι. The throne of the emperor in the church was at first beside that of the bishop at the choir, till Ambrose assigned it a place close to the choir. (Sozom. vii. 25). In the preceding period it has been already seen, that the three great metropolitans of Rome, Alexandria, and Antioch, were distinguished from the other metropolitans by having several provinces under their oversight. This institution came up for discussion at the council of Nice, probably on occasion of the Meletian schism in Egypt; and was confirmed by the 6th can.¹

pression like ἐπίσκοποι πραγμάτων cannot be pointed out, and there follows immediately after ἐπισκοπεῖν ἀρχομένους, Constantine probably did not mean τὰ ἐκτός, but τοὺς ἐκτός. Οἱ ἐκτός and οἱ ἀρχόμενοι πάντες must be the same, and thus we obtain the following explanation: "be ye the overseers of those who belong to the church, and so far as they belong to it: let me be the overseer of those without the church, and in so far as they are out of it (whether it be wholly as heathen, or partly, i. e. Christians in their civil relations).

At the same time provincial synods were still acknowledged at this council as the highest ecclesiastical authority.²

But during the subsequent Arian commotions, the provincial synods were too weak to be able to withstand, in the eternal party-strife, powerful opponents who were often supported by state authority. By this means the bishops were induced to form still larger hierarchical associations by which they might individually obtain greater security. In the political, often ecclesiastical, separation of the east and west, this new hierarchical development proceeded in a different mode in the two empires.

In the east, the political division of the provinces had been followed from the first in the development of the metropolitan institution, and the fundamental principle became more and more established, that the ecclesiastical should constantly follow the political division of provinces.³ Accordingly, in the formation of larger hierarchical bodies,⁴ they adhered to the political distribution of the realm into dioceses, which had been made by Episcopus ita consuevit, id est, quia Romanus Episcopus ante omnem Conciliorum definitionem consuevit permittere Episcopo Alexandrino regimen Aegypti, Libyae, et Pentapolis, sive consuevit per Alexandrinum Episcopum illas provincias gubernare. In later times the only point of dispute has been whether in this canon, as the Greek canonists Johannes Scholasticus, Theod. Balsamon, and Zonaras assume, patriarchal rights (so Sirmond, Em. Schelstrate, Natalis Alexander, &c.), or metropolitan rights (so J. Launoy, Sam. Basnage, &c.,) are spoken of. The copious literature on the subject may be seen in Sagittarii introduct. in hist. eccl. ii. 1224 ss.

² Can. Nic. 4 confirms to the provincial synod its influence in the election of bishops. Canon 5 recognises it as the highest court of appeal in cases of excommunication. Conc. Antioch. ann. 341, c. 15: Εἰ τις ἐπίσκοπος ἐπὶ τισιν ἐγκλήμασιν κατηγορηθῇ, κριθεὶς ὑπὸ πάντων τῶν ἐν τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ ἐπισκόπων, πάντες τε σύμφωνοι μὴν κατ' αὐτοῦ ἐξενέγκουσιν ψῆφον τοῦτον μὴκέτι παρ' ἑτέροις δικάζεσθαι, ἀλλὰ μένειν βεβαίαν τὴν σύμφωνον τῶν ἐπὶ ἐπαρχίας ἐπισκόπων ἀπόφασιν. In case of division among the provincial bishops, the metropolitan, according to canon 14, is empowered to summon bishops from the neighbouring province.

Constantine.⁵ The bishops of every diocese became more closely connected with each other; the bishop of the chief city in the diocese was their common president, and was elevated by this means above the other metropolitans. Yet his rights were defined according to earlier ecclesiastical relations, and for this reason were not alike in all dioceses. In Egypt, the bishop of Alexandria had almost monarchical power;⁶ the power of the bishop of Antioch in the west was less;⁷ less still was that of the bishop of Ephesus in the Asiatic, and that of the bishop of Caesarea Cappadociae in the Pontian diocese. In the Thracian diocese Constantinople had become the political capital instead of Heraclea, and it was also the chief city of the empire, the power of the bishop of Constantinople, supported by his influence with the emperor, and the consent of the numerous bishops who were always assembled at court (σύνοδος ἐνθημισία),⁸ soon extended far beyond the Thracian diocese; but the degree of power

Over the praefectures were placed Praefecti Praetorio; over the dioceses or vicariates Vicarii; over the provinces Rectores, with different titles, as consulares, correctores, usually praesides.

(A.D. 397) c. 15; Tu qui regulas quaeris ecclesiasticas, et Nicaeni concilii canonibus uteris:—responde mihi: ad Alexandrinum episcopum Palaestina quid pertinet? Ni fallor, hoc ibi decernitur, ut Palaestinae Metropolis Caesarea sit, et totius Orientis Antiochia. Aut igitur ad Caesarisensem Episcopum referre debueras—aut si procul expetendum iudicium erat, Antiochiam potius literae dirigendae.

depended very much on the personal relations of the reigning patriarch. Such was the state of things when the second general council (381) approved of those relations between the bishops of one diocese (can. 2), elevated the diocesan synods above the provincial synods so as to be the highest ecclesiastical court (can. 6), and gave the bishop of Constantinople the first rank after the bishop of Rome (can. 3).⁹

Thus in the east the bishops of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, Ephesus, and Caesarea, had obtained an important elevation above the other metropolitans, for they had subjected to themselves the other metropolitans of their diocese. They received the distinctive names: Ἐξάρχος Ἀρχιεπίσκοπος,¹⁰ and shortly before the council of Chalcedon, the appellation Πατριάρχης¹¹ was appropriated to them exclusively. But political relations and hierarchical ambition soon altered this arrangement. The bishops of Constantinople, favoured by their position, soon gained an influence over the affairs of other dioceses also,¹² which manifested itself decidedly in the neighbouring dioceses of Asia and

⁹ Canon II.: Τοῖς ὑπὲρ διοίκησιν ἐπισκόποις ταῖς ὑπερῶν ἐκκλησίαις μὴ ἐπιεῖναι, μηδὲ συγχέειν τὰς ἐκκλησίας. ἀλλὰ κατὰ τοὺς κανόνας τὸν μὲν Ἀλεξανδρείας ἐπίσκοπον τὰ ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ μόνον οἰκονομεῖν· τοὺς δὲ τῆς Ἀνατολῆς ἐπισκόπους τὴν Ἀνατολὴν μόνον διοικεῖν, φυλαττομένων τῶν ἐν τοῖς καθότι τοῖς κατὰ Νικαίαν πρεσβείων τῇ Ἀντιοχείᾳ ἐκκλησίᾳ· καὶ τοὺς τῆς Ἀσίας διοικήσεως ἐπισκόπους τὰ κατὰ τὴν Ἀσίαν μόνον οἰκονομεῖν· καὶ τοὺς τῆς Ποντικῆς τὰ τῆς Ποντικῆς μόνον· καὶ τοὺς τῆς Θράκης τὰ τῆς Θρακικῆς μόνον οἰκονομεῖν. Φυλαττομένου δὲ τοῦ προγεγραμμένου περὶ τῶν διοικήσεων κανόνα, εὐθὺς ὡς τὰ καθ' ἑκάστην ἐπαρχίαν ἢ τῆς ἐπαρχίας σύνθετος διοικῆσαι κατὰ τὰ ἐν Νικαίᾳ ὡρισμένα. Can. III.: Τὸν μέντοι Κωνσταντινουπόλεως ἐπίσκοπον ἔχειν τὰ πρεσβεῖα τῆς τιμῆς μετὰ τὸν τῆς Ῥώμης ἐπίσκοπον, διὰ τὸ εἶναι αὐτὴν νέαν Ῥώμην. (Cf. P. de Marca de Constantinopolitani Patriarchatus institutione (in Boehmer's edition, p. 155 ss.) Can. VI.: εἰ δὲ συμβαλὴ ἀδυνατῆσαι τοὺς ἐπαρχίους πρὸς διόρθωσιν τῶν ἐπιφερομένων ἐγκλημάτων τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ, τότε αὐτοὺς προσεῖναι μείζονι συνέδῳ τῶν τῆς διοικήσεως ἐπισκόπων ἐκείνης, ὑπὲρ τῆς αἰτίας ταύτης συγκαλουμένων.

Καὶ γὰρ τῷ θρόνῳ τῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης, διὰ τὸ βασιλεύειν τῆν πόλιν ἐκείνην, οἱ πατέρες ἐκόντως ἀποδεδώκασι τὰ πρεσβεία, καὶ τῷ αὐτῷ σκοπῷ κινούμενοι οἱ ῥο' θεοφιλεστάτοι ἐπίσκοποι τὰ ἴσα πρεσβεία ἀπένεμαν τῷ τῆς νέας Ῥώμης ἀγιοτάτῳ θρόνῳ, εὐλόγως κρίναντες, τὴν βασιλείαν καὶ συγκλήτῳ τιμηθεῖσαν πόλιν καὶ τῶν ἰσῶν ἀπολαύσαν πρεσβείαν τῇ πρεσβυτέρᾳ βασιλίδι Ῥώμῃ (cf. lex Theodos. Cf. Edm. Richerii hist. concil. generall. lib. i. c. 8, § 37 ss. Even here the Grecian principle ruled that the rank of their bishops should be determined by the political rank of the cities (see above note 3). Rome was always βασιλεῖς or βασιλεύουσα; Constantinople, as being Roma Nova, received forthwith the same privileges, but was yet second in rank, ἡ δευτέρα βασιλεύουσα (Themistii, orat. iii. p. 41.) In accordance with this, the council of Constantinople, 381, determined the rank of the two bishops (see note 9). But after the division of the empire, the east Roman emperors allowed their chief city to sink down into a city of no repute (Cod. Theod. xvi. ii. 45, A.D. 421: urbs Constantinopolitana, quae Romae veteris praerogativa leatatur). Agreeably to that opinion the position of its bishop was determined at Chalcedon. Cf. put back into a middle rank between patriarchs and metropolitans. The bishops of Antioch endeavoured likewise to draw over Cyprus into their ecclesiastical diocese, as it belonged to the political diocese of Asia; but the Cyprian bishops received from the Alexandrian party at the council of Ephesus the assurance of their independence. The bishops of Jerusalem, supported by the precedence which had been conceded to them at the council of Nice,¹⁶ after having long endeavoured in vain to shake themselves free of their metropolitan in Caesarea, succeeded at last in rising to the rank of patriarchs, by an edict of Theodosius II., and by the synod of Chalcedon the three Palestines were assigned them as their ecclesiastical domain.¹⁷ At the close of this period, therefore, we have four patriarchs in the east, viz. of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, Jerusalem.¹⁸ In their dioceses they were looked upon as ecclesiastical centres, to which the other bishops had to attach themselves for the preservation of unity;¹⁹ and constituted, along with their diocesan synod, the highest court of appeal in all ecclesiastical matters of πον, ἢ πρὸς ἕτερον, παρὰ τῇ συνόδῳ τῆς ἐπαρχίας δικασέσθω. εἰ δὲ πρὸς τὸν τῆς αὐτῆς ἐπαρχίας μητροπολίτην ἐπίσκοπος ἢ κληρικὸς ἀμφισβητοίη, καταλαμβάνετω ἢ τὸν ἐξαρχὸν τῆς διοικήσεως, ἢ τὸν τῆς βασιλευούσης Κωνσταντινουπόλεως θρόνον, καὶ ἐπ' αὐτῷ δικασέσθω. Repeated for a particular case, can. 17. An ecclesiastical oversight of the west was bestowed on the Roman bishop by Valentinian iii. 445. See below § 94, note 65.

¹⁶ Can. Nicaen. vii.: 'Ἐπειδὴ συνθήθεια κεκράτηκε καὶ παράδοσις ἀρχαία, ὥστε τὸν ἐν Αἰδίᾳ ἐπίσκοπον τιμᾶσθαι, ἐχέτω τὴν ἀκολουθίαν τῆς τιμῆς, τῇ μητροπόλει σὺνφορμὸν τοῦ οἰκείου ἀξιώματος. Comp. Div. i. § 68, note 12. Thus the Concil. Constant. A.D. 382, in its synodical letters (in Theodoret's hist. eccl. v. 9) calls this church τὴν μητέρα πάντων τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν τῇ ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις.

¹⁹ Thus Gregorius Naz. epist. 22 ad Caesarienses, says of the church of Caesarea in Cappadocia (at the time in the highest rank of hierarchical dignity), ἢ μήτηρ σχεδὸν πάντων τῶν Ἐκκλησιῶν ἦν. τε ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, καὶ νῦν ἐστὶ καὶ νομίζεται, καὶ πρὸς ἣν τὸ κοῦνόν βλέπει, ὡς κέντρῳ κύκλος περιγραφόμενος. When the Egyptian bishops at the council of Chalcedon, after the deposition of Dioscurus, were without a head, and yet required to subscribe Leo's epist. ad Flavianum (Conc. Chalced. act. iv. ap. Mansi. vii. p. 53, 55) they declared: Περὶ δὲ τῆς ἐπιστολῆς τοῦ ἀγιωτάτου—Λέοντος, ἴσασιν πάντες οἱ ἀγιώτατοι ἡμῶν πατέρες, ὅτι ἐν παντί ἀναμένομεν τὴν γνώμην τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν δσιωτάτου ἀρχιεπισκόπου.—τοῦτο γὰρ καὶ οἱ ἐπὶ τῆς Νικαίας ἀγιοὶ πατέρες συναγερμένοι ἐκάντισαν τῇ, ὥστε ἀκολουθεῖν πάντων τὴν Ἀλγυπτιακὴν διοίκησιν τῷ ἀρχιεπισκόπῳ τῆς μεγαλοπόλεως Ἀλεξάνδρειας, καὶ μηδὲν διχα αὐτοῦ πράττεσθαι παρὰ τὴν τῶν ἐν' αὐτῷ ἐπισκόπων.—περὶ πίστεώς ἐστὶν ὁ ἀγών.—παρὰ γνώμην ἀρχιεπισκόπου οὐ δυνάμεθα

HISTORY OF THE ROMAN PATRIARCHS,¹ AND OF THE HIERARCHY IN THE WEST.

Hence he complained at the second synod of Ephesus that Flavianus had excommunicated him on his sole authority, καίτοι μᾶλλον ὀφείλων πρὸ πάντων τοῖς ἀρχιερεῦσιν ἐπιστεῖλαι, οὐδὲ καὶ ἐπεκατέσμεν, namely, the bishops of Rome and Alexandria (Mansi, vi. 641). Hence flattery invented for them in the fifth century the title universalis episcopus (the bishop who has oversight of the entire church), which Olympius Episc. Evazensis first gives Dioscurus at the Concil. Ephes. ii. (Mansi, vi. 855).

Rufinus, hist. eccl. x. 6, gives this canon as follows : Et ut apud Alexandriam et in urbe Roma vetusta consuetudo servetur, ut vel ille Aegypti, vel hic suburbicariarum ecclesiarum sollicitudinem gerat.—Eccles. suburbic. mean, according to Baronius and Bellarmine, Eccl. totius orbis ; according to Perronius, Valesius, J. Sirmond (Censura conjecturae anonymi script. de suburb. regg. et eccll. 1618,) has justly asserted that the provinces subject to the Vicarius urbis, or the Dioecesis Romae, were 1. Campania. 2. Tuscia et Umbria. 3. Picenum suburbicarium. 4. Sicilia. 5. Apulia et Calabria. 6. Bruttii et Lucania. 7. Samnium. 8. Sardinia. 9. Corsica. 10. Valeria. That these constituted the Roman diocese is also evident from Conc. Sardic. synodica ad Julium P. ording to their political principle, could not but concede the first place among the bishops, and afterwards among the patriarchs, to the bishop of the chief city; while the westerns estimated the dignity of the episcopal seat by another principle, viz. the grade of its apostolic descent; and considered the apostolic seats as the heads and centres of the whole church.⁵ Hence, even according to this principle, Rome stood pre-eminent, being a church founded by the two chief apostles, and the only apostolic community of the west.⁶

The same feeling of insecurity which led the bishops of the dioceses to unite with one another during the Arian controversy in the east, procured to bishop Julius of Rome decisions in the

Idem contra litteras Petiliani, ii. 51: Verumtamen si omnes per totum orbem tales essent, quales vanissime criminari, cathedra tibi quid fecit Ecclesiæ Romanæ, in qua Petrus sedit, et in qua hodie Anastasius sedet: vel Ecclesiæ Hierosolymitanæ, in qua Jacobus sedit, et in qua hodie Joannes sedet, quibus nos in catholica unitate connectimur, et a quibus vos nefario furore separastis?* In connection with these passages the following can only be rightly explained: *Contra duas epp. Pelag. ad Bonifac. terness between two parties; Gratian gave Damasus the right of judging in the case of condemned bishops,¹⁰ in order that the schismatic clergy might not be at the mercy of worldly, and for the most part as yet, heathen officers.¹¹ At the same time, the emperor, at the instance of a Roman synod (379), assured him of the support of the civil power as far as it might be necessary for the bishop's purpose.¹² Both privileges conferred on Julius and Damasus were transitory, as well as the relations which gave rise to them.¹³ The rights of provincial synods remained

¹⁴ So Siricius replied (392) to Anysius, bishop of Thessalonica, and to the other bishops in Illyria, when they had asked advice from him respecting Bonosus (Siricii ep. 9 ap. Constant, erroneously given among the epistles of Ambrose, as ep. 79, and also falsely ascribed to Damasus, see Constantii monitum): Cum hujusmodi fuerit concilii Capuensis iudicium, ut finitimi Bonoso atque ejus accusatoribus iudices tribuerentur, et praecipue Macedones, qui cum Episcopo Thessalonicensi de ejus factis vel cognoscerent: advertimus, quod nobis iudicandi forma competere non posset. Nam si integra esset hodie synodus, recte de iis, quae comprehendit vestrorum scriptorum series, decerneremus. Vestrum est igitur, qui hoc recepistis iudicium, sententiam ferre de omnibus, nec refugiendi vel elabendi vel accusatoribus vel accusato copium dare. Vicem enim synodi recepistis, quos ad examinandum synodus elegit. Ambrose replied to Bonosus: omnia modeste, patienter, ordine gerenda, neque contra sententiam vestram tentandum aliquid; ut quod videretur vobis justitiae convenire, statueretis, quibus hanc synodus dederat auctoritatem. Ideo primum est, ut ii iudicent, quibus iudicandi facultas est data: vos enim totius, ut scripsimus, synodi vice decernitis; nos quasi ex synodi auctoritate iudicare non convenit.

(ann. 397) c. 48 (Mansi iii. 891): De Donatistis placuit, ut consulamus fratres et consacerdotes nostros Siricium (bishop of Rome) et Simplicianum (bishop of Milan) de solis infantibus, qui baptizantur penes eosdem, num—parentum illos error impediatur, ne provehantur sacri altaris ministri. We have here at the same time a proof of the fact that they considered themselves bound by such opinions as well as by a decision given by arbiters. The two bishops had answered in the affirmative; but when afterwards the deficiency of priests in Africa made another rule desirable, the Conc. African. ann. 401 (Mansi, iv. 482) resolved previously to send an embassy ad transmarinas Italiae partes, ut tam sanctis fratribus et consacerdotibus nostris, venerabili sancto fratri Anastasio, sedis apostolicae Episcopo, quam etiam sancto fratri Venerio, sacerdoti Mediolanensis Ecclesiae, necessitatem ipsam ac dolorem atque inopiam nostram valeat intimare (ex his enim sedibus hoc fuerat prohibitum): quo noverint communi periculo providendum, maxime quia tanta indigentia clericorum est, &c.

was customary before this time to consider the current laws of Rome as a standard in doubtful cases of civil jurisprudence.¹⁸ Hence the Roman bishops took occasion to issue a great number of didactic letters (epistolae decretales),¹⁹ which soon assumed the tone of apostolic ordinances, and were held in very high estimation in the west, as flowing from apostolic tradition. All these circumstances had the effect of bringing about such a state of things, that in the beginning of the fifth century the Roman bishops could so early lay claim to a certain oversight of the western church.²⁰

iii. 1028: Quis enim nesciat, aut non advertat, id quod a principe Apostolorum Petro Romanae Ecclesiae traditum est, ac nunc usque custoditur, ab omnibus debere servari; nec superduci aut introduci aliquid, quod auctoritatem non habeat, aut aliunde accipere videatur exemplum? Praesertim cum sit manifestum, in omnem Italiam, Gallias, Hispanias, Africam atque Siciliam, et insulas interjacentes, nullum instituisse Ecclesias, nisi eos, quos venerabilis Apostolus Petrus aut ejus successores constituerint sacerdotes. Aut legant, si in his provinciis alius Apostolorum invenitur, aut legitur docuisse. Qui si non legunt, quia nusquam inveniunt, oportet eos hoc sequi, quod Ecclesia Romana custodit, a qua eos principium accepisse non dubium est; ne, dum peregrinis assertionibus student, caput institutionum videantur omittere. Ambrose, however, says of the practice of feet-washing, which did not prevail at Rome, but in Milan most probably, de sacramentis, iii. 1: in omnibus cupio sequi Ecclesiam Romanam: sed tamen et nos homines sensum habemus: ideo quod alibi rectius servatur, et nos recte custodimus.

¹⁹ The first existing decretal is Siricii epist. ad Himerium Episc. Tarraconensem, A.D. 385, but it refers to missa ad provincias a venerandae memoriae praedecessore meo Liberio generalia decreta. The expression epist. decretalis first appears in the so-called decretum Gelasii de libris recipiendis et non recip. about 500. The original designation is decretum, afterwards statutum, or constitutum decretale. Decretum, in the original sources of Roman law, means the decision of a college (decretum pontificum, Senatus, &c.). So also in the Christian church it denotes the decision of a synod (ex. gr. Conc. Carthag. ann. 397 in fine) or of a presbytery. When such decrees proceed from the Roman presbytery or Roman synods, they are also to be looked upon as decreta. Comp. Spittler's Gesch. des kanon. The eastern bishops, it is true, would not allow the least interference of the western in their ecclesiastical affairs. They gave a decided repulse to Julius I., when, at the head of the western bishops, he wished to interfere on behalf of the persecuted Athanasius.²¹ The fundamental principle of the mutual in-non humana sed divina decrevere sententia, ut quidquid quamvis de disjunctis remotisque provinciis ageretur, non prius ducerent finendum, nisi ad hujus sedis notitiam perveniret. The text to which these places refer is epist. Syn. Sardic. ad Julium above note 6. That the interpretation extends the sense very much is obvious, doubtless in consequence of the progress and development of new circumstances.

²¹ The synod of Antioch (341) had first complained to Julius of his conduct in not regarding the sentence of the eastern church. Extracts from this letter are found in Sozomenus, iii. 8. Among other things they had said, φέρειν μὲν γὰρ πᾶσι φιλοτιμίαν τὴν Ῥωμαίων ἐκκλησίαν, ὡς ἀποστόλων φροντιστήριον, καὶ εὐσεβίας μητρόπωλον ἐξ ἀρχῆς γεγεννημένην—οὐ παρὰ τοῦτο δὲ τὰ δευτερεῖα φέρειν ἤξελον, ὅτι μὴ μεγέθει ἢ πλῆθει ἐκκλησίας πλεονεκτοῦσαν, ὡς ἀρετῇ καὶ προαιρέσει μικρόντες κ. τ. λ. The answer to this Julii I. ep. ad Syn. Antiochenam (ap. Athanasius apol. contra Arian. c. 21 ss. Mansi, ii. 1211. Constant-Schoenemann, p. 210 ss.): After having shown the irregularity of the proceedings against Athanasius and Marcellus, he says at the conclusion: Εἰ γὰρ καὶ ὁλωσ, ὡς πατέ, γέγονε τι εἰς αὐτοὺς ἀμάρτημα, εἰδει κατὰ τὸν ἐκκλησιαστικὸν κανόνα, καὶ μὴ οὕτως γεγενῆσθαι τὴν κρίσιν εἰδει γραφῆναι πᾶσιν ἡμῖν, ἵνα οὕτως παρὰ πάντων ὁρισθῇ τὸ δίκαιον. ἐπίσκοποι γὰρ ἦσαν οἱ πάσχοντες, καὶ οὐχ αἱ τυχοῦσαι ἐκκλησίαι αἱ πάσχουσαι, ἀλλ' ὡν αὐτοὶ οἱ Ἀπόστολοι δι' ἐαυτῶν καθηγγήσαντα. Διὰ τὸ περὶ τῆς Ἀλεξανδρείας ἐκκλησίας μάλιστα οὐκ ἐγράφετο ἡμῖν; ἢ ἀρροεῖτε ὅτι τοῦτο ἔθος ἦν, πρότερον γραφῆσθαι ἡμῖν, καὶ οὕτως ἔθεν ὀρίζεσθαι τὰ δίκαια; Εἰ μὲν οὖν τι τοιοῦτον ἦν ὑποπτευθὲν εἰς τὸν ἐπίσκοπον τὸν ἐκεῖ, εἰδει πρὸς τὴν ἐπαύθαι ἐκκλησίαν γραφῆναι. Julius, therefore, did not pretend to pronounce judgment on Athanasius and Marcellus alone, but in conjunction with all the bishops (comp. below note 26). This demand grew out of the western notions respecting the superior dignity of the bishops of apostolic communities (see above note 5), as those two were. See de Marca de concord. Sac. et Imp. lib. vii. c. 4, § 2, 6 ss. On the other hand the orientals reply in the epist. synodalis Sardicensis (Philippopoli habitæ) ad Donatum (in Hilarii fragm. lib. ii. ap. Mansi, iii. 136): Hanc novitatem moliebantur inducere, quam horret vetus consuetudo ecclesiæ, ut in concilio orientales Episcopi quidquid forte statuissent, ab Episcopis occidentalibus refricaretur: similiter quidquid occidentalium partium Episcopi, ab orientalibus solveretur. Sed hoc ex illo suo pravissimo sensu tractabant. Verum omnium conciliorum juste legitimeque actuum decreta firmanda, majorum nostrorum gesta consignant. Nam in urbe Roma sub Novato et Sabellio et Valentino hæreticis factum concilium, ab Orientalibus confirmatum est: et iterum in oriente sub Paulo a Samosatis quod statutum est, ab omnibus est signatum.—Nos vero nulli injuriam facimus, sed legis præcepta servamus. Nam injuriati et male tractati sumus ab iis qui volebant ecclesiæ catholicæ regulam suā pravitāte turbare: sed ante oculos habentes timorem Dei, judicium Christi, dependence of the occidental and oriental church, was universally maintained in the east.²³ Still the period of the doctrinal controversies had a very important influence in promoting the power of the Roman bishop. The speculative questions which split the east into factions excited little interest in the west. On this very account the Westerns united very soon and easily in the opinion to be embraced, in which they chiefly followed the bishop of Rome, who was almost the only organ of communication with the east,²³ and by means of whom they also became acquainted with its controversies. Thus in all these controversies the west stood united and steadfast, with the bishop of Rome at its head, in contrast with the east split into parties and wavering; and when matters came to a final decision, it turned the scale in the balance of parties, though merely as a sluggish mass. The phenomenon, which was constantly reappearing, was first manifested in the final victory of the Nicene faith. When these doctrines began to spread in the east likewise, under Valens, it is true the new Nicene orientals could not entirely unite with the west, and believed that they had much reason to complain of the arrogance of the westerns;²⁴ but yet the west was their

Unde Julium urbis Romae, Osium et Protogenem, et Gaudentium et Maximinum a Treveris damnavit omne concilium secundum antiquissimam legem: Julium vero urbis Romae, ut principem et ducem malorum, qui primus januam communionis sceleratis atque damnatis aperuit, ceterisque aditum fecit ad solvenda jura divina, defendebatque Athanasium prae-sumentur atque audaciter, hominem, cujus nec testes noverat, nec accusatores.

²³ Constantii Imp. ep. ad Syn. Ariminensem, A.D. 359 (ap. Mansi, iii. 297): Non enim de orientalibus Episcopis in concilio vestro patitur ratio aliquid definiri. Proinde super his tantum, quae ad vos pertinere cognoscit gravitas vestra, tractare debebitis.—Quae cum ita sint, adversus orientales nihil statuere vos oportet, aut si aliquid volueritis contra eosdem praedictis absentibus definire, id quod fuerit usurpatum irritum evanesceat effectum. only stay and support in opposition to all other parties. And though the council of Constantinople (381), afterwards arranged the affairs of the oriental church without any reference to the west, and even openly took the part of the Miletians, whom the occidentals had rejected;³⁵ and not long after the interference of the Italian bishops in the matter of the rival bishop of Constantinople, Maximus, was entirely disregarded;³⁶ yet it could not but be seen, that in the great theological question of the day occidental steadfastness had obtained the victory over the wavering east. But whatever influence the west gained in the east, it gained only for the reputation of the Roman bishop,³⁷ who, at the head of the west, was the only organ of direct communication with the east. From this time forth there was no important ecclesiastical controversy in the east in which each party did not endeavour to gain over the bishop of Rome, and through him the west, to its side;³⁸ for which purpose both flatteries were

³⁶ Epist. ii. Concilii Italiae ad Theodos. Imp. (prim. ed. in J. Sirmondi app. Cod. Theod. p. 105, ap. applied, and a presumptuous tone submitted to.²⁰ At the councils, his legates were treated with peculiar deference. Chalcedon was the first general council where they presided.²⁰

As the west was accustomed to estimate the dignity of the episcopal seat according to its apostolic derivation,²¹ and since the decrees of the council of Sardica imparted certain privileges to the Roman see out of deference to the apostle Peter; so also the Romish bishops derived all their claims to distinction from the fact that they were the successors of Peter.²² At the same time, they opposed the opinion universally adopted in the east, μὴ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου Ῥώμης τὰς ἐκκλησίας καθορίζειν. He borrows this sentence expressly, ii. 17, from Julii ep. ad Syn. Antioch. (see above note 21,) and has therefore understood Julius as if he had meant: τοῦτο ἐστὶν ἡν, πρότερον γράφεσθαι ἡμῶν, καὶ οὕτως ἔσθαι ὁρίεσθαι τὰ δίκαια, in which Sozomen, iii. 10, also finds too much when he gives as its sense: εἶναι γὰρ νόμον λεγόμενον, ὡς δίκαια ἀποφαίνειν τὰ παρὰ γρόμην πραττέμενα τοῦ Ῥωμαίων ἐπισκόπου (de Marca, lib. v. c. 12, § 1). Still the practice of the church in the fifth century must have given rise to such an amplifying mode of interpretation. That there was no law in existence such as these two writers refer to, is plain from Can. Coustant. 3, (above § 93, note 9) and Chalced. 28, (§ 93, note 14): the mystery is explained by the connexion already pointed out in § 93.—Moreover, we have here a remarkable proof of the manner in which interpretations, very much extended and heaped upon one another, have obtained an influence over the constitution of the church as progressively developed and formed. That passage of Socrates is translated in the Historia tripartita, iv. 9, ap. 19: non debere absque sententia Romani Pontificis Concilia celebrari. Hence Pseudoisidore has borrowed this sentence from him countless times, and at length introduced it into the practice of the church.

that they and the other patriarchs owed their elevation merely to the importance of the cities in which they resided;³³ and therefore they set themselves so much against the privileges of the bishop of Constantinople, which rested only on this ground. But though, on tracing back their claims, they supported the normal authority of their church on the basis of its apostolic origin, and its parental relation to the whole western church,³⁴ they acknowledged, notwithstanding, that the peculiar privileges of their see did not originally belong to it, but had been granted by the fathers.³⁵ On the idea of Peter having been the first apostle they could hardly find any particular pre-eminence in the fourth century, since there was conceded to him only a primatus honoris, in so far as Christ had first given him alone those rights which he afterwards transferred to all the apostles, and through them to all bishops equally.³⁶ And as, according to

Hoc est dicere: nunc nemo me vincat, nunc meae partes sunt, debeo compensare quod tacui, &c. Augustinus de diversis serm. 108: Has enim claves non homo unus, sed unitas accepit ecclesiae. Hinc ergo Petri excellentia praedicatur, quia ipsius universitatis et unitatis ecclesiae figuram gessit, quando ei dictum est: tibi trado, quod omnibus traditum est. Nam ut noveritis, ecclesiam accepisse claves regni caelorum, audite in alio loco, quid Dominus dicat omnibus Apostolis suis: accipite Sp. s. et continuo: si cui dimiseritis peccata, dimittentur ei, si cui tenueritis, tenebuntur.—Idem in Evang. Ideo quippe ait Dominus: super hanc petram aedificabo ecclesiam meam, quia dixerat Petrus: Tu es Christus Filius Dei vivi. Super hanc ergo, inquit, petram, quam confessus es, aedificabo ecclesiam meam. Petra enim erat Christus, super quod fundamentum etiam ipse aedificatus est Petrus.—Ecclesia ergo, quae fundatur in Christo, claves ab eo regni caelorum accepit in Petro i. e. potestatem ligandi solvendiue peccata. Hieronymus in Amos vi. 12: petra Christus est, qui donavit Apostolis suis, ut ipse quoque petrae vocentur: Tu es Petrus, &c.—Hieronymus adv. Jovinian. lib. i.: At dicis: super Petrum fundatur ecclesia: licit idipsum in alio loco super omnes Apostolos fiat, et cuncti claves regni caelorum accipiant, et ex aequo super eos fortitudo Ecclesiae solidetur, tamen propterea unus eligitur, ut capite constituto schismatis tollatur occasio. But after the rights of the Romish bishops had become older in the west, and their authority had been so much increased in the east likewise since the end of the Arian controversy, they began at Rome, in like proportion, to enlarge the notion of Peter's primacy, and to regard all the honours and rights of the

In Theodoret's comm. in Epist. Pauli, the commentary on Gal. ii. 6—14 has been erased in the Codices hitherto in use, without doubt, by Latinising Greeks (see Noesselti corollarium to the praef. in Theodoret's opp. T. iii. Halle edition). Out of these and similar passages arose the remarkable view of Antoine Arnauld, that Peter and Paul were alike the heads of the church (see de l'autorité de St Pierre et de St Paul, résidant dans le Pape leur successeur, Paris 1645, 8, and de la grandeur l'église Rom. établie sur l'autorité de saint Pierre et saint Paul, Paris 1645, the first work by Arnauld, the second by Martin de Barcos), a doctrine which the Romish inquisition, 1647, condemned as Jansenite. Et Galliae, et Britanniae, et Africa, et Persia, et Oriens, et India, et omnes barbarae nationes unum Christum adorant: unam observant regulam veritatis. Si auctoritas quaeritur, orbis major est urbe. Ubique fuerit Episcopus, sive Romae, sive Eugubii, sive Constantinopoli, sive Rhegii, sive Alexandriae, sive Tanis: ejusdem meriti, ejusdem est et sacerdotii. Potentia divitiarum et paupertatis humilitas vel sublimiorem vel inferiorem Episcopum non facit. Caeterum omnes Apostolorum successores sunt. Romish bishop as inherited from Peter,³⁹ a view which appears first to have been fully developed by Leo. In the east, they could not go in with this representation, because there they were accustomed to attribute the primacy to the church of Jerusalem and James, at least during the first century.⁴⁰ In Jerusalem itself they endeavoured even now to establish the hierarchical claims of the whole church on the rank of the mother church;⁴¹ but in the external insignificance of this see little stress could be laid on these claims, especially since the authority of churches generally, in the east, was not determined according to their original importance, but the political rank of the cities in which they existed.⁴²

⁴² Even Dioscurus sought to elevate the see of Alexandria by appealing to St Mark. Theodoretus, ep. 86, ad Flavianum Ep. Constantinop.:

High as was the dignity which the Roman bishops enjoyed in the west, their influence was yet very different in the different provinces. They had the full rights of patriarchs only in the diocese of Rome. In the diocesis Italiae, the bishop of Milan exercised, quite independently of them, a hierarchical power similar to that of the patriarchs; in addition to whom the bishop of Aquileia also,⁴³ and at a later period the bishop of Ravenna,⁴⁴ raised themselves to the rank of independent patriarchs. In the mean time, the Roman bishops by a skilful use of opportunities, succeeded in attaching East Illyria to their patriarchate.⁴⁵ During the Arian disputes, Illyria had belonged to the western empire, and the Illyrian church had continued true to the Nicene council,⁴⁶ attaching itself to the bishop of Rome for its defence, as did the whole west. When therefore, Gratian, A.D. 379, divided Illyria, and annexed Illyricum orientale to the eastern empire, the bishops of east Illyria, who had for so long a time maintained no communion with the east, could not have much inclination to attach themselves ecclesiastically to the east, during the strife of parties by which it was then distinguished; while the bishop of Thessalonica, the ecclesiastical head of East Illyria, must have been averse to a union of this kind, which would have made him subject to a superior so near, viz. the bishop of Constantinople.

Under these circumstances, it was easy for the Roman bishops to persuade the bishop of Thessalonica to exercise the patriarchal

Another favourable opportunity for extending their power presented itself to the Roman bishops in Gaul.⁴⁹ When they began to establish metropolitan relations here at the end of the

The Roman bishops were least successful in obtaining influence in Africa, where the ecclesiastical relations had long been firmly fixed, and there was on this account an aversion to the new movements of the hierarchy,⁵⁹ while ecclesiastical legislation had been all along improved with an evident preference for that study.⁶⁰ As early as the Pelagian controversy, Zosimus had learned by experience how little his decision was respected in Africa (§ 87, notes 12—16). Haec (namely, the decrees of the Sardican council given out as Nicene decrees) utique usque ad adventum verissimorum exemplarium Nicaeni Concilii inserta gestis sunt. Quae si ibi—continenterentur, eoque ordine vel apud vos in Italia custodirentur; nullo modo nos talia, qualia commemorare jam nolumus, vel tolerare cogemur, vel intolerabilia pateremur. Sed credimus—quod tua Sanctitate Romanae ecclesiae praesidente non sumus jam istum typhum passuri; et servabuntur erga nos, quae nobis etiam non disserentibus custodiri debeant cum fraterna caritate, quae secundum sapientiam atque justitiam, quam tibi donavit Altissimus, etiam ipse perspicis esse servanda, nisi forte aliter se habeant canones Concilii Nicaeni. This mistake was caused by the form of the collection of canons then in use, in which those of later synods were appended to the Nicene without distinction. Quenell has published such a collection annexed to the Opp. Leonis; also Mansi, vi. 1183. Hence later canons are often cited as Nicene. See Ballerini de ant. collect. cann. Nam et si de inferioribus clericis vel de laicis videtur ibi praecaveri, quanto magis hoc de episcopis voluit observari? ne in sua provincia a communione suspensi, a tua Sanctitate praepropere vel indebite videantur communioni restitui. § 3. Presbyterorum quoque et sequentium clericorum improba refugia, sicuti te dignum est, repellat Sanctitas tua: quia et nulla patrum definitione hoc ecclesiae derogatum est Africanarum, et decreta Nicaena sive inferioris gradus clericos, sive ipsos episcopos suis metropolitana apertissime commiserunt. considerably extended the power of that see, both by his personal qualities and good fortune. The controversy with Hilary, bishop of Arelate, led him to obtain a law from Valentinian III. (445) by which the Romish bishop became the supreme head of the whole western church.⁶⁶ The catholic bishops of Africa, now oppressed by the Arian Vandals, attached themselves the more closely on this account to the Roman see, and allowed Leo to act as a patriarch in their dioceses without opposition.⁶⁷ At the council of Chalcedon, Leo, whose legates had the presidency there, hoped to make himself regarded as head of the whole church; but he met with much opposition among the orientals,⁶⁸

Mansi, vi. 579): Beatissime atque apostolici viri Papae urbis Romae, quae est caput omnium Ecclesiarum, praecepta habemus prae manibus, quibus praecipere dignatus est ejus Apostolatus, ut Dioscurus, Alexandrinorum Archiepiscopus, non sedeat in Concilio, sed audiendus intromittatur. Hoc nos observare necesse est. Si ergo praecipit vestra which at last manifested itself decidedly in decreeing the bishop of Constantinople to be on an equality with the bishop of Rome. This measure Leo had foreseen, and in vain attempted to avert.⁶⁹ He protested against it;⁷⁰ and Anatolius, bishop of Constantinople, was actually obliged to send an humble letter to him, for the oriental emperor's sake.⁷¹ Still the decrees of the synod continued in force; and thus began the contest of jealousy that lasted for centuries, between the bishops of Rome and Constantinople.

It is worthy of remark, that the Romish bishops were distinguished by no peculiar titles in the west. In the east the honourable appellation of patriarchs was certainly given them; but these were as yet common to all bishops in the west.⁷²

magnificentia, aut ille egrediatur, aut nos eximns.—Judicii sui necesse est eum dare rationem, quia cum personam judicandi non haberet, prae-sumpsit, et synodum ausus est facere (the Robber synod) sine auctoritate sedis apostolicae, quod nunquam licuit, nunquam factum est. They were, however, foiled in this proposition by the imperial commissioners, since they could not be accusers and judges at the same time. Dioscurus accordingly took his seat, and the legates remained.—Subsequently, the Romish legates withstood the first drawing up of the decree respecting the question of faith, desiring either that it should be made to agree more closely with the epistle of Leo, or that this epistle should be mentioned in it. On this so fearful an alarm arose, that the Illyrian bishops called out (actio, v. ap. Mansi, vii. 105): οι αντιλέγοντες Νεοτοριασολ ελαιν' οι αντιλέγοντες εις 'Ρώμην ἀπέλθωσιν.

⁷¹ In epist. Leonis, ap. Quesn. appended to epist. 105, ap. Baller. ep. 132.

80,) was mistaken in believing that at the council of Chalcedon the name universalis Episcopus was given to the bishop of Rome. He is styled εκουμενικὸς ἀρχιεπίσκοπος, (Mansi, vi. 1006, 1012,) as other patriarchs also, (see above § 93, note 20). But in another place the title was surreptitiously introduced into the Latin acts by the Romish legates. In the sentence passed on Dioscurus, actio, iii. (Mansi, vi. 1048,) the council say, ὁ ἀγιώτατος καὶ μακαριώτατος ἀρχιεπίσκοπος τῆς μεγάλης καὶ πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης Δέων: on the contrary, in the Latin acts which Leo sent to the Gallic bishops (Leonis ep. 103, al. 82) we read: Sanctus ac beatissimus Papa, caput universalis Ecclesiae, Leo. In the older editions the beginning of Leo's epist. 97, (sp. Quesn. 134, Baller. 165,) runs thus: Leo Romae et universalis catholicaeque ecclesiae Episcopus Leoni semper Augusto salutem. Quesnel and the Ballerini, however, found in all the Codices only: Leo Episcopus Leoni Augusto. The fable, which is repeated even by the catechismus Romanus, p. ii. c. 7, qu. 24, § 4, that Cyril, at the Council of Ephesus, styled the bishop of Rome Archiepiscopum totius orbis terrarum Patrem et Patriarcham, first proceeded from the St Thomae († 1274) catena aurea in Evang. ad Matth. xvi. 18, who also in his opusc. contra errores Graecorum, falsely attributes many similar passages to the Greek fathers.
